The stories this chair could tell! From the cruel splendour of the Roman Colosseum to intergalactic battles with the dark side, from the mountainous waves of a perfect storm to the exquisite serenade of a soldier's mandolin, this chair has been there! It has experienced cinema just as the directors intended, with clear and vibrant sound enhancing every magical movie moment.

The Rotel 10 Series is a new range of audio and video equipment from a company with a reputation for delivering award-winning sounds at realistic prices. The superb home cinema sound it delivers is the result of Rotel's Balanced Design Concept, an integrated approach that ensures five star performance.

IF YOU'RE THINKING of splashing out on some new hi-fi or home cinema gear in the January sales, don't leave home until you've read this issue from cover to cover. It's easy to get carried away when offered a tempting discount in the shop, but remember, whatever you buy now you'll have to live with for the next few years, so it's well worth doing some careful research before parting with your hard-earned cash. Choosing components that will gel to make a great system is vital.

We test every piece of equipment on a sound-per-pound basis, and only award our five-star accolade to those that perform sensationally. So even if it's not the cheapest product in its class, rest assured it will be well worth the money.

There's a fantastic line-up of new kit to choose from this month, whether you're in the market for an affordable CD recorder, a slim surround-sound speaker package for your home cinema system, floorstanding speakers for mega bass or a state-of-the-art British DVD player.

To ensure you get maximum enjoyment from your movies and music, make sure you buy the best. Happy New Year.

Andy

Punchy Pacifics floor rivals

Wharfedale Pacific Evo 30
Speakers £650

FOR
Dynamic range; impressive soundstage; big bass; classy looks

AGAINST
Bass can overwhelm in smaller rooms

VERDICT
A cracking start for Wharfedale's Evolution range. All rivals, including standmounters, should be quaking in their boxes

THE PACIFIC EVOLUTION series is the latest weapon in Wharfedale's fight for speaker supremacy, replacing the company's enjoyable-sounding but odd-looking Pi range.

First impressions are excellent. Mercifully the tweeter unit is sunk into the cabinet, as opposed to perching on top like a big plastic eye, and now the most attention-grabbing feature of the 30 is the gorgeous finish. Curved real wood veneer cabinets are rare in mid-price floorstanders, and overall the build is first-rate. The package includes a stonking set of chunky spikes that attach securely to the plinth, and internally the speaker is a mass of strengthening techniques. In addition to a sealed top chamber, there is bracing to stiffen the panels at the top, middle and lower sections. As per usual for Wharfedale, every part – except the magnets – is designed, tooled and manufactured in-house.

So why the upgrade? The company says the aim was to make speakers that don't exhibit the usual floorstanding flaws, such as an inferior midband or sonic performance that's been sacrificed for greater bass extension. It hopes the curved cabinets, two-and-half-way design, bracing and damping solve these issues. It could be right.

From the moment we pressed 'play' the Evo 30s sounded exceptional. As you'd expect with floorstanders, the bass delves deep – but it's also impressively tight and the 17cm Kevlar drivers deliver Groove Armada's woofer-busting Lovebox with striking authority. As promised, midband is as good as many similarly priced standmounters – spin the recent Elvis number-ones collection and the King's vocal range is delivered with a confidence and naturalness that draws you into the performance.

The old Pi range offered a well-spaced soundstage and the Evos also impress, providing generous space around instruments during complex classical pieces. Pleasingly, the 30s don't exclude higher frequencies from accurate treatment, and the 25mm driver is beautifully precise. With the volume pumped up the units remain unruffled, and Nirvana's crashing cymbals retain their crisp sound. Superb stereo imaging completes the sonic good news and Richie Havens' rich vocals are firmly in place during his guest spot on Lovebox.

Positioning in a large room is uncomplicated. For best results you should attach the supplied spikes and place the speakers in free space. We strongly advise potential buyers with smaller rooms to test the Wharfedales in an equally sized space. Admittedly the 30s' bass is tighter than many of their floorstanding rivals, but when deprived of breathing space it can overwhelm.

Wharfedale claims these aren't speakers for dance music fans – it dubs the Evo 30s 'serious floorstanders' – but our in-depth testing demonstrates that they revel in all music styles, including dance. Whatever your musical pleasure, the Pacific Evo 30s are worth splashing out for.

> "From the moment we pressed 'play' the Evo 30s sounded exceptional, with a deep but tight bass"

Attack of the cones

A SPEAKER DRIVER'S diaphragm vibrates and emits sound waves in front of the cone. However, because the movement is back and forth, sound waves are also produced behind the cone. Here lies the speaker designer's eternal challenge – how to handle the standing waves produced when the 'backward' waves bounce back and forth inside the cabinet.

Wharfedale believes that a curved cabinet is the answer. It claims this reduces standing waves and therefore lessens cabinet resonance, and also produces a more consistent frequency response.

So why is the market still dominated by cuboid, rather than curved speakers?

Wharfedale insists this is down to costs – though it has managed to reduce these by developing manufacturing techniques that allow these cabinets to be put on the market at a fraction of the previous price.

Sanyo LCD projector is a steal

Sanyo PLV-Z1
LCD projector
£1500

FOR
Fine picture for the price; flexibility; value for money

AGAINST
At this price, nothing

VERDICT
This is a high-quality, affordable projector; a great way to transform your movie-watching

WE'VE ALWAYS BEEN slightly sceptical about affordable projectors. Most compact LCD designs have been optimised for use in the business-display environment, and consequently have excessive brightness levels that don't necessarily produce the ideal results for home cinema use.

But Sanyo's PLV-Z1 has a different agenda: this is a projector intended for movie-watching purposes, yet it remains affordable. And in terms of sheer image size per pound, we do mean affordable. The Sanyo has no trouble filling our 9ft projection screen, but costs a relatively sensible £1500. Try and find a telly or a plasma that gives you anything like the same size/price deal.

Of course, the PLV-Z1 demands a little more effort from you than a television. A dark room is a must, which is true of any projector, but especially so in this case because the Sanyo offers a dedicated 'dark' mode. This is not only essential for the best picture quality, it also reduces the fan noise (it needs to work less hard to cool the lamp, because the lamp isn't being pushed as hard) to a modest 29dB. However, the Sanyo's price is so comparatively modest that you could consider owning both a TV (for day-to-day use) and a projector, reserving the latter for movie watching.

Certainly it's an accommodating little beast. There's ample input sockets, including component video, and the Sanyo will also accept NTSC and PAL progressive-scan video, should you have a suitable source to hand. With a true 16:9 widescreen panel, you can take full advantage of anamorphic video content on DVDs, and Sanyo has sensibly designed the projector to give its best when plonked on a coffee table. It has a relatively short throw, meaning that it can generate a large image even when positioned relatively close to a projection screen, and a fold-up flap protects the lens when not in use, a design that's considerably more practical than the fiddly dust-caps commonly used on projectors like this.

> "The Sanyo's picture is the best we've seen from an LCD projector in this price category: it trounces its rivals"

And the image? It's surprisingly good: in fact, the best we've seen from an LCD in this price category. There's genuine depth of field and contrast to the image, due in large part to the Sanyo's decent black levels: it won't worry a good DLP projector, but it's far better than most comparably priced rivals. Things improve still more if you connect in a progressive-scan source. We used both Arcam's DV88 Plus (£1000) and the Toshiba SD-520E (£300), as well as an external progressive-scan box – the Silicon Images iScan Pro (£650) – all with great results. With Goldmember in the DVD tray, the Sanyo relays the complex colours of Austin Powers' pad with ease, and handles the movements of the helicopter gunship in the opening scene superbly.

Add a choice of silver/blue or silver/grey finishes and that modest price tag, and you're looking at an affordable projector that – for once – actually delivers on its promise. At £1500, there's no doubt that the Sanyo is something of a steal.

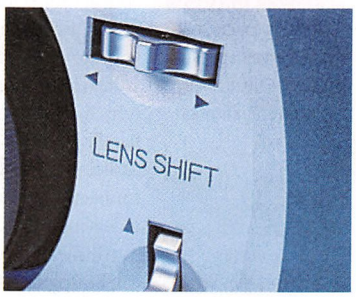
The Sanyo projector offers a useful manual lens-shift feature

SETTING IT UP



How the Sanyo helps you get a better image

THE HARDEST PART of an effective projector set-up is the relationship between the screen and the image source. Position the projector wrongly and you'll see a misshapen picture, one example of which is a stretched rectangle, where the bottom of the image is wider than the top. This is known as a 'keystone error'.

The Sanyo has a manual lens-shift control (on its front panel, pictured above) that moves both horizontally and vertically. This means you can adjust the image to fit your screen as accurately as possible.

Most projectors allow you to reshape your picture to your screen perfectly using something known as electronic 'keystone' adjustment – the Sanyo also has this feature – but the manual lens-shift function should ensure that, in the majority of cases, you can avoid using it.

ROTEL ALREADY HAS some pretty serious multichannel kit in its range, and now it's upped its game further with the RSP 1066 processor – a very flexible preamp/processor with seven-speaker potential. It's based on the key components from the RSX 1065 receiver, but has a larger toroidal transformer and greatly upgraded software.

The full range of the RSP 1066's modes is in our Rotel repertoire panel, but suffice to say it handles all the current home cinema modes, and has a 6.1 channel analogue input to support DVD-Audio, SACD and virtually any future surround-sound processor.

There are also plenty of connectivity options: eight line inputs (five with video switching), three electrical and two optical-digital inputs. All inputs are assignable, so you can decide which audio input works with which video feed – handy when running a complex system. In addition to various composite and S-Video connections there's also a pair of component video-ins and a component-monitor-out.

All the control and processing software can be upgraded, and the remote handset is a programmable/learning type that can control up to nine devices and also be set up to run macros, or chains of commands.

By comparison, the RMB 1075 power amp is a relatively simple device, with five channels of inputs and outputs for five speakers on chunky terminals. The power output is 120w per channel, all driven, and the 17kg unit is powered by a 1500VA transformer. No fewer than 20 output devices are used, four for each channel and each capable of delivering 130w and 15A. The power amp is designed for a high signal-to-noise ratio and can be switched on and off by the processor via a 12v trigger connection.

The Rotels are impressive, but to realise the RSP 1066's seven-speaker potential you need another two channels of amplification. The £495 RB-1070 would be a good match, or you could use the RB-1080 on the front left and right, with the RMB-1075 handling the other channels. For this test we used the Rotel power amp to drive left/right/centre and surrounds, and two channels of our TAG 100X5R for the rears.

> "The effects steering is able to generate the thrills as well as envelop the viewer in the movie action"

The overall impression is of clear, precise channel control, especially with DTS ES 6.1 soundtracks like Goldmember, where the effects steering is able to generate the thrills as well as envelop the viewer in the action. There's a good, firm handling of dialogue and a convincing soundfield.

Rotel makes great play of the RMB 1075's ability to drive at full power, even when all its channels are working. This pays off in the huge clout this pair can deliver without ever becoming rough or brash.

Rotel's amp pairing supports just about every surround-sound mode known to Hollywood

LEADING RIVALS

Pioneer VSA-AX10
£2700 ★★★★★ Awards 2002
This monster amp is currently the best one-box cinema solution

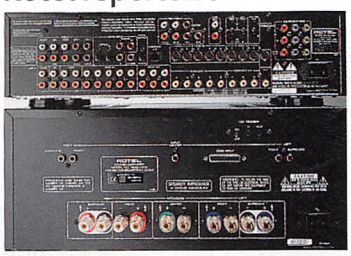
Rotel RSX-1065
£1795 ★★★★★ March 2002
This receiver needs an extra amp to fulfil its seven-speaker potential

What's more, it does the job in stereo, too, with a clean, well-weighted and nicely integrated sound good enough to be used with all but the most exotic of players. The power and scale of Jools Holland's big band is satisfyingly spine-tingling, while the intimacy of Norah Jones's voice is delivered in similarly convincing fashion. It's even adept with big classical works, having just the right combination of scale and detail, while the Pro-Logic II processing works smoothly to add ambience and atmosphere.

In fact, the Rotels' only minus is the need for those extra channels of amplification. Even with the addition of just the RB 1070 you've got a seven-channel combo costing over £2300, which puts it up against some serious one-box rivals. Bear that in mind, however, and this is still a solid five-star buy.

WHAT ELSE CAN IT DO?

Rotel repertoire



THE RSP 1066 will handle all the current cinema-sound modes, including the 5.1-channel versions of Dolby Digital and DTS, Dolby Digital EX, DTS ES, ES Discrete and Neo:6. In addition, the processor offers Dolby Pro-Logic and Pro-Logic II, and also has built-in decoders for HDCD-encoded CDs and CD-ROMs burnt on a computer using MP3 encoding.

There's a range of proprietary processing modes for music, and it's possible to link a surround mode with an input so it's always activated when that source is chosen. The Rotel also auto-detects the surround information coming from a DVD source and, as usual, all the set-up and control is via extensive, if functional, on-screen menus.

Mission update: these are special

Mission 780SE
Loudspeakers
£350

FOR
Detail; rhythm; small size

AGAINST
Massively tough competition; compact cabinet restricts ultimate bass extension

VERDICT
Mission takes an Award-winning speaker and makes it better, but has it done enough to catch up with the class leaders?

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH. The Mission 780s held our Product of the Year title until the pesky Quad 11Ls appeared and knocked them off the winner's rostrum. So how does Mission respond? Simple, it designs a 780 Special Edition.

The SEs use many of the originals' features. The front-to-back folded MDF cabinet is maintained, although the new and only finish is Alder real wood veneer. The original damped-driver isolation system reduces the effects of front-baffle vibrations on the tweeter, and the tried-and-tested resonance-reducing foam design gets Mission's vote of confidence. The sensitivity is unchanged at 87dB/w/m, as is the frequency, which runs from 65Hz to 20kHz.

But Mission insists the SEs are more than 780s with a go-faster suffix, and to be fair they are. For example, in the quest for more detail, a newly designed 25mm microfibre unit replaces the 780's soft-dome tweeter. The remaining changes are hidden within the cabinet. The wiring is Mission's twisted cores within polyethylene insulation, and all drive units, not just the crossover, are hardwired. The crossover itself – the circuit that splits the incoming signal, and sends high frequencies to the tweeter and low ones to the woofer – is reworked entirely.

The main aim is to increase detail and resolution throughout the frequencies, and after a 50-hour run-in, this wish seems to have been fulfilled. But the most obvious and welcome change is to higher-frequency performance. Spin Johnny Cash's American IV: The Man Comes Around and the new tweeter delivers the steel-stringed acoustic guitar with improved levels of detail and an enjoyable sweetness. Midrange contains extra ridges of detail, revealing more of the emotion in Cash's voice. Like the previous model, the SEs punch out lower frequencies rhythmically and the depth of bass continues to contradict the pint-sized boxes.

The revamped Mission 780s are hugely enjoyable: anyone with up to £400 to spend should consider these standmounters. Mission's clever move has paid off.

Junior Cyrus amp matches all but big brother

Cyrus 6
Integrated amplifier

FOR
Control; openness and simplicity; upgradability

AGAINST
If you can afford it, the £800 Cyrus 8 is even better

VERDICT
The less expensive of Cyrus's two new amps is a fine buy: a quality offering with the option of upgrading to Cyrus 8 specification later

THERE'S A PRETTY simple way to sum up the new Cyrus 6 amplifier: it's almost as good as the £800 Cyrus 8. That may seem a somewhat downbeat way to start this review, but if you read our test of the 8 last month, you'll know that means the 6 is very good indeed. In fact, the people at Cyrus are saying that the new junior amp is as good as, if not better than, the outgoing £700 Cyrus 7, and we wouldn't disagree.

And there are good reasons for this performance: the Cyrus 6 uses the same circuit as its pricier stablemate, but a smaller power supply means it delivers a lower output. Here you get 40w per channel against the 70w of the Cyrus 8. The other major omission is the PSX-R power-supply upgrade: the socket is there, but it's not connected. The PSX-R option, along with the hike in power, comes if and when you decide to have the 6 upgraded to Cyrus 8 specification. This process – at about £250 – costs a little more than the price difference between the two amps.

The Cyrus 6 closely resembles its Cyrus 8 sibling, and can be upgraded to the same specification

As you'd expect, the Cyrus 6 hasn't quite got the 8's effortless power delivery, but it has the oomph and control to drive even tricky speaker loads. It sounds fast and dynamic, and while it hardens slightly when cranked up very high, it'll be more than enough for most users.

And most of the attributes of the 8 are readily apparent, from the high levels of detail to the openness of the high treble, ensuring there's fine ambience and excellent character to voices and instruments. The bass is also impressive: tight and well-extended whether with hard-hitting dance music or large orchestral forces.

Add a sensible spec – six line-ins and a tape loop, remote control, plus a headphone socket – and you have a superb amp for £600.

VERDICT
Another bargain from Wharfedale: this is a very good DVD player for very little money. It has style, too

WHARFEDALE STARTED THE whole budget DVD thing in this country with its DVD-750 models. These were made in China and sold in supermarkets at prices way below the Japanese majors' entry-level machines. It didn't take long for the responses to come: soon budget DVD players were everywhere, and within a fairly short time the big Japanese names answered with ever more affordable models.

With the M3 Wharfedale is fighting back against its traditional rivals, and challenging those who think budget machines should be a bit clunky and old-fashioned. This is a sleek, slim – under 5cm tall – player with an air of class that's completely at odds with its giveaway price. It plays DVDs, CDs, CD-R/RW discs and CDs containing MP3-encoded music. The usual audio outputs are provided – stereo analogue plus optical and electrical digital feeds. Video is available on RGB Scart, component, composite and S-Video terminals, giving bags of flexibility when it comes to connecting the M3 to a TV or projector.

Even better, it's region-free straight from the box, or at least our sample was. It plays any disc you care to throw at it, looks extremely good and its digital output provides a clean signal for an AV amp or receiver to get its teeth into.

Whether playing the all-out action of Men in Black II or the DTS ES 6.1 soundtrack of Goldmember, the Wharfedale delivers plenty of detail to match its crisp, clean pictures. There's a range of picture adjustments available, but using the factory defaults give as good a result as you can get from the machine, which is impressive enough to worry quite a few more expensive bits of kit. It's worth knowing, however, that pressing the 'restore defaults' button turns the player back to a Region 2 machine! Fortunately there's a hack available from the company's helpline number.

The M3 is a bit shabby playing CDs, with the usual rather flat and compressed DVD player performance, lacking in sting and excitement, and a bit thin in the bass. But then again we are talking about a £100 player, and for that money the Wharfedale must be seen as a major bargain.

Portable Pure broadens digital radio's appeal

AGAINST

At last – an affordable, compact digital radio

DIGITAL RADIO HAS been slow to take off in the UK because early hi-fi tuners were expensive, but Pure's cut-price portable Evoke-1 unit should help broaden its appeal.

One of the major advantages of digital radios is that they're easy to tune. In the case of the Evoke-1, all you have to do is plug it in, switch it on and it will automatically search for all the DAB stations in your area. Once done, just turn the tuning knob on the front panel and the station names will scroll across the LCD display. When you see the station you want, push the knob in and it will automatically be selected. There are also nine preset buttons to give you instant access to your favourite stations.

The Evoke-1 is a mono design in its standard form, but there's a stereo output on the back panel for hooking up an optional second speaker, the ST-1, which costs £30. There's also a 3.5mm headphone socket, and a line-out for connecting the unit to an amplifier or a recorder.

Pure's Evoke-1 is the first portable DAB tuner and is simple to use

When listening in mono, the first thing you notice is the lack of interference on every station (at least in our listening room in south-west London). Speech stations are crystal clear, especially sports ones such as BBC Radio 5 Live, which is a big improvement over their analogue AM transmissions. Tune in to classical music on Radio 3 or Classic FM and there's none of the hiss or crackle during quiet passages that can afflict FM. Pop stations inevitably suffer from the compression used by the broadcasters, but the Dynamic Range Control option allows you to increase or decrease the DRC scaling to suit your tastes. On one or two occasions we did suffer signal dropout, resulting in a strange squelching noise, but this usually passed after a couple of seconds.

However, it's important to remember that not all parts of the country can yet receive digital transmissions, so check our DAB coverage map on p103 before you buy.

This isn't the loudest radio in the world, but then it's likely to be used in a study, bedroom or kitchen, for which it's ideal. The Evoke-1 is just what digital radio needs – an affordable, easy-to-use tuner that sounds good in mono and can be upgraded to stereo.

The Award-winning D-M30 now has a suitably classy big brother: the DF-101

Another star Denon system

Micro-separates system

FOR
Clarity and detail; open midrange; precise bass

AGAINST
Doesn't flatter harsh recordings

VERDICT
Denon manages to blur the distinction between micro and serious hi-fi

DENON HAS ARGUABLY been king of the micro system for some time now, largely because of the extraordinary success of the triple Award-winning D-M30. According to Denon, the DF-101 is the direct replacement for the DF-100, but should be considered "the D-M30's big brother".

The DF-101 is actually a micro 'separates' system rather than a micro system. It consists of the DCD-F101 CD player and the DRA-F101 receiver – a combined integrated amp and FM/MW tuner. This pair can be bought for £350, or along with dedicated Mission-made speakers for an additional £100 – a move we'd recommend, as some thoughtful tuning has been done here.

The Denon has an impressive array of sockets for the price. There are five line inputs, including two tape loops, plus the pleasing addition of a phono stage and a subwoofer preamp output for the bass crazy.

But it was the performance that made the D-M30 such a star, so does this system measure up to those sound-per-pound standards? Compared with that system, the DF-101's bass is less weighty, its midrange more open and its treble more pronounced – in fact, before getting warmed up, the 101's treble is quite hard and unforgiving.

After proper running-in, however, the performance improves considerably, leaving a blisteringly dynamic and detailed soundstage. The bass, though slightly leaner than its famed sibling, is really quite special. Powerful, tight and subtle, it delivers the monstrous riffs of Audioslave with serious punch and precision. And it's not just a powerhouse: the complex bassline on David Bowie's Slip Away from the Heathen set is presented with real insight and detail.

Given the openness of the presentation, there is a tendency for the system to be wrong-footed by harsher recordings. It's not a serious problem, but fans of badly recorded 1970s punk albums might need a smoother-sounding system than this.

That said, there's much to enjoy here, and the real star of the show is the system's midrange detail. The interweaving lines of Shostakovich's string quartets are given an accurate blend of sharp timing and musical realism. Natural and detailed, the Denon goes a long way toward closing the gap between micros and 'proper' hi-fi.

That gap will never close entirely – for good technical reasons – but we've got to praise any attempt as good as this. The D-M30's big brother? This is some sibling.

WHAT'S INSIDE?

Origins of the DF-101

THE DF-101 DIRECTLY replaces the DF-100. In terms of design, it is 'a scaled-down version of the 201', according to Denon. In short, this means a more-affordable take on Denon's top-of-the-range rival to budget hi-fi separates.

The new system shares a lot of technology with Denon's PMA 255 integrated amp and DCD-835 CD player. For example, the DF-101 has a power supply very similar to the 255's, plus high- quality smoothing capacitors and an all-metal chassis and front fascia.

Like the D-M30, Denon has turned to Mission for the speakers for this system, working with the company to tune the speakers to suit the electronics.

Jamo's Ultra-surround solution

Jamo D7PEX
Multichannel speaker system
£5250 (with two subwoofers)
★★★★½

FOR
A lot of speaker technology for your money; massive bass; smooth, controlled sound

AGAINST
Slight coloration at high volumes; not especially musical

VERDICT
Sofa shaking sound

THE JAMO D7PEX is all about numbers. Big, big numbers; our test sample, a full seven-speaker, two-subwoofer array, has no less than 41 separate speaker drive units of varying sizes, including two whopping 38cm bass units, each one of which is actively driven by 400w of internal amplification. It grabs your attention, in other words.

Funny, then, that Jamo has specifically styled its new speaker system to be so discreet, although we have to confess, we kind of like it. The idea is that each speaker can be wall-mounted, producing a minimalist set-up that doesn't intrude on to your floor space too much. Well, apart from the D7SUB subwoofer, that is: at nearly 50cm high, 60cm wide and 45cm deep, and a back-breaking 33kg, it's not exactly shy, retiring or compact. Oh, and just for added low-frequency fun, our test set-up came with two – the system costs £4250 with the standard one – which made for 66kg of sofa-shaking muscle. Nurse...

> "The explosions during Attack of the Clones' finale are wondrous, as is the impact across the front of the room"

Naturally, all this air-shifting ability means that Jamo's new system can't fail to deliver a gutsy sound, but muscle is only part of the story with the D7PEX. The whole package has been designed to conform to THX's strict Ultra2 performance guidelines (see panel), and as such employs some fairly complex thinking in its design. The D7LCR (left, centre, right) speakers are identical, true to THX form – the theory being that only then can you ensure cohesive surround panning, because each speaker 'voices' consistently. However, in a change from older-generation THX set-ups, the Ultra2-certified Jamo also uses this design of front speaker on two of its four surround channels: the two centre-rears, to be exact. This is so that multichannel music is replayed with the proper sense of sonic focus that a standard speaker provides, and effectively means that both the front and rear of the soundfield should sound tonally identical. However, regular THX thinking still applies to the main left and right surround channels, which are handled by D7SUR multi-directional dipole speakers. In a standard room set-up, you'd place the two main surrounds alongside your seated position, with the two 'centre-rears' behind you.

So we know it's big and powerful: how does it sound? Big and powerful, funnily enough. The D7PEX has enormous energy, especially if, as we did, you choose to drive it with a THX Ultra2 certified amp (we used both the Pioneer VSA-AX10 receiver, at £2700, and Arcam's £5500 AV8/P7 combo). As you'd expect with two 38cm subs, it shifts serious air, although the tight, forceful nature of the bass is every bit as welcome as its sheer weight.

The explosions during Attack of the Clones' finale are wondrous, as is the impact across the front of the room. Having said that, the Jamo remains largely smooth and cohesive, except when you push the volume high, at which point a spot of midrange harshness begins to creep in. The surround speakers are highly capable, too, wrapping you in surround ambience effectively.

For music? Well, you're unlikely to buy a system like this for its purist imaging qualities, though the Jamo does largely give a respectable account of itself. The chief gripe is some coloration in the midrange, which can make some voices sound a little unnatural. But with THX MusicMode engaged and a Queen DVD (on DTS) playing, the system certainly provides enough drive, slam and bass agility to satisfy, even if it's not quite the last word in hi-fi.

This is an interesting and effective package. For most rooms, one sub will do – cutting the cost to £4250 – and that makes the Jamo a good choice for a flagship THX receiver or pre/power owner.

HOW IT WORKS

What is THX Ultra2?

THX Ultra2 is the latest evolution of the long-standing THX performance specification standard, and is designed to provide optimum performance with seven-speaker surround audio.

Ultra2-certified equipment covers processor/power amp combinations like the Arcam AV8/P7 (£5500), integrated receivers such as the Pioneer VSA-AX10 (£2700) and speaker packages such as this Jamo design. Ultra2 kit uses seven channels of amplification to replay any multichannel-encoded piece of software back through seven loudspeakers, partnered by a sub.

Like Dolby's Pro-Logic II system, THX Ultra2 post-processing employs two dedicated modes, one for use with movies (called Ultra2 Cinema) and the other for use with music – called MusicMode.

Toshiba lifts plasma TV standards

Toshiba 35WP26P
Plasma TV
£5000

AGAINST
Only the quality:cost ratio of plasma screens

VERDICT
Quite simply an excellent plasma TV from Toshiba

IT WASN'T VERY long ago that we were hailing our product-of-the-year plasma (Pioneer's 433HDE) for being among the first of its kind to include a tuner box, making it a bona fide TV as well as a living-room movie screen.

Never a company to be left behind, Toshiba has wasted little time in coming up with this, the first 35-inch plasma TV. The 35W26P is a well-built and good-looking unit: the screen sits atop a pedestal that houses the tuner circuits and, on the back plate, all the sockets. This pedestal is somewhat thinner than the screen itself, leaving space for the two detachable speakers, through which the TV will deliver 20w each of NICAM stereo sound. However, we'd expect – and recommend – a product like this to be integrated with a decent surround-sound amplifier and speaker set-up.

The Toshiba provides component video inputs as well as S-Video and RGB Scart sockets, meaning you can connect this screen to your PC or games console, as well as to your DVD player.

The screen itself has a depth of just 10cm and the whole unit manages to retain a sleek and minimalist feel. The installation and set-up process is refreshingly simple, with extremely clear on-screen menus all easily negotiated with the sensible – if rather basic – remote handset.

> "What's clear is that the Toshiba is one of a handful of plasmas raising the standards of the format"

A word about price. While plasmas are undoubtedly getting more and more popular, we've had our doubts as to whether the picture quality they deliver is always worth the money. But one thing to bear in mind is that – while the price tag looks fairly hefty – this screen may be purchased over the internet for less. A lot less. The vagaries of plasma pricing mean that you can easily find a five-grand screen like this for around £3600, which is some saving.

All of which, of course, is meaningless if the screen itself doesn't offer the quality to impress in the first place. But this screen is truly impressive. From the very first minute, it's clear that the 35W26P is among a handful of new plasmas that are raising the standards of the format. The Toshiba's colour balance treads a near-perfect line between realism and richness, picking out the vivid colours in Monsters Inc one minute and delivering natural flesh tones in Austin Powers' Goldmember the next.

What's pleasing about this Toshiba is how little it suffers from the problems that tend to haunt plasmas, such as lack of detail, digital noise, absence of depth and blacks that simply aren't.

Spin high-octane thriller The Rock and blacks are very dense, there's a good sense of depth to long-range shots and, best of all, the screen handles highly complex action scenes with excellent detail and insight. There's very little of the unwanted artefacts and hazy 'blocking' effects from which many plasmas suffer.

The Toshiba 35WP26P is the bearer of good news: while plasma prices are slowly dropping, standards are getting higher. This may not yet be an affordable product for most, but it's certainly a good one.

A display only – so no onboard TV tuner – but its performance makes it worth the price

HOW DOES IT WORK?

CRT vs plasma screens

Despite the aesthetic benefits of having a flat screen, the conventional cathode ray tube (CRT) still creates a better picture. The trouble is, you can't make a flat screen with it.

A cathode ray tube TV uses a heated cathode, which directs heated electrons towards a phosphor-coated screen. Electromagnetic 'steering coils' control this beam of electrons, allowing them to be dispersed all over the screen. But the bigger the screen, the longer the tube has to be in order to disperse the electrons. This leads to an inescapable equation: more width means greater depth and, ultimately, a bigger television.

Not everyone can accommodate a big TV, hence the huge rush of interest in plasmas. They work by running an electric current through a plasma gas (xenon or neon), which causes florescent lights – red, green and blue – to illuminate in each of the screen's thousands of tiny pixel cells. So there's no need for depth.

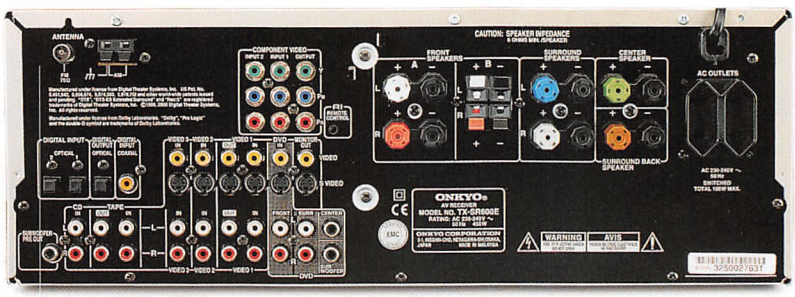
SOMETIMES COMPANIES CAN become too obsessed with filling every price niche, creating a series of products that are very similar to each other. At other times a relatively small sum of money can make the world of difference to a product's competitiveness, and that's certainly the case with the Onkyo TX-SR600E.

We looked at its junior partner, the £400 TX-SR500E, back in October, and weren't overly impressed; in basic 5.1 terms it delivers the goods, but it lacks the ability to provide extended surround sound, and in this market, that's a crucial failing. But for only £50 more, the TX-SR600E gains considerable capability and, as a result, puts up far more of a fight against its deadly Denon and Yamaha rivals.

Let's begin with the key features. The TX-SR600E has six, not five, main channels of amplification, which means it is compatible with all the latest forms of surround decoding and processing. You get Dolby Digital Surround EX, DTS-ES Matrix and DTS-ES Discrete 6.1 decoding, as well as DTS Neo:6 – all of which were unavailable on the junior model. Pro-Logic II is still present and correct, though, as is Onkyo's frequently used and very beneficial Cinema Re-Eq mode, which can be used to help control the brightness of a variety of movie soundtracks. There are also revised and enhanced DACs for the main stereo channels – 24-bit/192kHz designs – and component-video switching. It's immediately obvious that this Onkyo receiver offers you a lot for the £50 price premium over the junior model.

Of course, a long specification list isn't the only thing that matters, but the Onkyo also happens to deliver an impressive level of performance. As we pointed out in our review of the TX-SR500E, the basics of the design aren't bad. The front-speaker performance is smooth and cohesive, and with the Cinema Re-Eq mode engaged, the balance is rich and largely controlled.

However, the TX-SR600E both adds a noticeable layer of polish to the presentation across the front speakers – a result, we can only assume, of those enhanced DACs – and transforms the balance on the surround channels. A single speaker (we tried both a KEF 2005 'egg', and one of our reference M&K S-150THX rears) makes an enormous difference to the cohesion and effectiveness of the surround panning on Goldmember, and revolutionises Star Wars II: Attack of the Clones. Steering details are much more convincing, ambience is vastly better, and you find yourself altogether more immersed in the action.



Colour coding of the speaker terminals makes them easier to identify when hooking up speakers

So it's all good? Not quite. The Onkyo is a little more musical than its junior brother, but still lacks the stereo character of the best in this class. It goes loud, but so do most surround receivers. But for all that, the TX-SR600E is so much better than its little brother that it begs the question why anyone would want the lesser model?

SETTING IT UP

Optimising the Onkyo

IF YOU INTEND using the Onkyo in its maximum six-speaker mode, then the key to producing an effective surround soundfield is to configure the receiver to suit the speaker system you employ. First, find the low-frequency point the speakers can reach. With most compact speaker systems this will be around 80Hz, but in some cases the low-frequency point can be much higher, at around 120Hz or more. The Onkyo offers these two crossover points, plus a 100Hz middle ground. So after you've set each speaker as 'small' in the Onkyo's main menu, adjust the crossover point in the bass management set-up zone to the value that most closely matches the performance of your speakers. This will provide proper bass management, ensuring your speakers are protected against excessive low frequencies.

Bose looks cute but is overpriced

Bose Acoustimass 6
5.1 channel speaker package
£550

Single-cube satellites are cute; well built

AGAINST
Rather rough and raw, lacking the finesse of its big brothers; pricey compared with rivals

VERDICT
A bit of a triumph of form over function: the Acoustimass 6 promises much but is bettered by similarly priced rivals

IT'S HARD NOT to like the Bose concept: if we're honest, most of us like the idea of great sound and no room-filling boxes, which explains the popularity of subwoofer/satellite systems. The Acoustimass 6 is Bose's least-expensive 5.1 channel speaker package, but unlike the 15 we reviewed last month it doesn't use the manufacturer's Direct/Reflecting dual cube speaker system – technology that's designed to create a more diffuse soundfield and greater air-shifting power for the midband and treble. Instead you get single-driver speakers that are just 7.8cm tall and wide. They're not quite cubes, measuring a little over 10cm front to back, but you get the idea – they're tiny.

Coupled with these is the Acoustimass module itself: a powered bass unit that also contains the connections from an AV receiver to the speakers. Everything can be linked up at speaker level – where the system will extract bass from the full-range signal – or there's a dedicated subwoofer connection on a phono lead. Cables from the Acoustimass unit connect to the Cube speakers.

We'd like to report that the 6 has much of the 15's performance for half the price, but we can't. Without the benefits of the Direct/Reflecting system, and with only one driver in the bass module – the 15 has three – the Acoustimass 6 sounds raucous and weedy. Play movies at low levels and it's OK, if a bit on the bright side, but push it more vigorously with action soundtracks and things soon get rough. The little speakers sound like they're being worked too hard and the bass underperforms, resulting in a balance that lacks true extension and is prone to deliver nothing more than midbass thump. Neither is it tuneful: you really wouldn't want to use this Bose for music.

The Bose combines five tiny speakers with the massive sub

A very capable DVD player that gives the class leaders a serious run for their money

WE EXPECT GREAT things from this new Toshiba: its SD-510E predecessor was a five-star machine and its SD-220E little brother was an Awards 2002 Best Buy.

The SD-520E certainly looks the part. The fascia is sensibly laid out and a transparent cover completes a neat front panel. The maker uses its customary frosted finish and build feels solid and secure. Visually, the remote is not as slick as the player, but most importantly it is easy to navigate.

So why buy this model instead of the £180 SD-220E? First, this Tosh has progressive scan – the method of scanning individual lines in sequence rather than alternately – which aims to maximise the clarity of digital images. Your display must be compatible for this feature to work, but the visual improvement is at least equivalent to that when you switch from composite to component connections. Second, the SD-520E supports DVD-Audio, if multichannel music appeals.

And then there's the performance. No matter how vivid the screen colours, this Tosh copes marvellously: spin the gaudy Goldmember and the '520E responds with impressive definition and composure. Rapid movement doesn't fox this player either, and it handles the fast-moving scenes of Men in Black II with pleasing smoothness.

Play some music and the '520E continues to excel. This machine is highly listenable and should not disappoint DVD-A fans; it may even convert the uninitiated. Tunes are rhythmic and the detail levels will embarrass most similarly priced players.

The Toshiba SD-520E lives up to our expectations: it's a thoroughbred addition to Toshiba's already impressive DVD player stable, making it well worth the money.

VERDICT
Stylish, forceful, beautifully made and very cohesive – a superb set-up

BOWERS & WILKINS MANUFACTURES speaker systems to suit a positively enormous variety of styles and budgets. Take a look at the VM 1 system on page 56 for a fine illustration of what we're talking about. Made by the same company, the VM 1 costs £850, or roughly the same as this DM 300-series system, but the two couldn't be more different in execution. The VM 1 is style-orientated, although in sonic terms it's no slouch, while the DM 300 package has its roots firmly in hi-fi performance, although as you can clearly see from our picture, it's not a bad looker either. Your money, your choice, as the saying goes.

The key to this new B&W package lies in integration. Every main speaker in the system uses the same design of 25mm alloy-dome tweeter, a cornerstone of good multichannel design practice that helps to ensure more cohesive surround panning.

However, while the same technology underpins each bass/midrange driver (with drive units constructed from woven fibreglass), each speaker in the set-up uses different driver sizes: the front speakers use 13cm designs, the centre has 11cm units, and the surrounds employ 16cm drivers. That's not necessarily a huge problem given that each speaker still represents roughly the same nominal impedance and sensitivity, but it's worth highlighting because such disparities could mean differences in sonic balance from speaker to speaker.

It's to B&W's immense credit, then, that this is not the case here. The DM 300-series system is very cohesive and blisteringly good. It doesn't suffer from being driven by affordable receivers such as the Yamaha RX-V430RDS (£290), but it positively flourishes if you use it with something meatier.

With the mighty Arcam AV8/P7 pairing in the saddle, the B&W system simply flies. It's beautifully balanced, muscular when called upon, and presents every sonic nuance in pristine detail. There's also a lot to be said for the somewhat 'old-school' virtues of a large full-range loudspeaker on the front channels: it's refreshing to hear a speaker system that still musters genuine midrange snap and venom, and as all those who heard the B&Ws rip through Audioslave's Cochise will attest, the presentation in stereo is memorable, too.

The ASW 300 sub can be used for even more low-end welly if you wish, but such is the power of the DM 309 floorstanders, we reckon that most living rooms will survive without the added ministrations of the sub.

Now we're under no illusions about the modern-day realities of multichannel surround. For most living rooms, most of the time, the slimline VM 1 system will be a lot easier to live with and install effectively. As we highlight in our panel, the DM 303 rear speakers are just plain big, and attractively styled as they are, they're hardly discreet. You'll also struggle to accommodate the DM 309 floorstanders in many rooms. However, if all-out performance is your bag, we'd urge you to give this system a go. It's one of the very finest we've heard, and the first to give Acoustic Energy's outstanding Aegis Evo 3B a run for its money.

A sense of direction

THE B&W PACKAGE uses standard two-way speakers on its surround channels, the DM 303 hi-fi designs. This can be an excellent solution for some applications: it ensures you get proper stereo reproduction for multichannel music, and provides a decent level of bass output from your surround channels.

The downside is that standard two-way loudspeakers tend to be more directional than dedicated surround designs such as dipoles or bipoles: these spread sounds in multiple directions, in an attempt to reproduce the acoustics of a true cinema, which utilises the power of many pairs of surround speakers. You can, if you so desire, attempt to address this by 'bouncing' your surround channels off your living-room walls, angling each speaker to fire off nearby surfaces.

WE KNOW THAT surround receivers need a bit of bulk to ensure their kit-rack kudos these days, but still, the AVR 8500 is just massive. We were slightly surprised to find that it 'only' weighs 25kg, because on first sight it looks like a monster.

However, one key fact should give you an indication of where Harman Kardon is coming from with this new receiver: it has only five channels of amplification as standard. Five channels, 25kg: you do the maths. This giant has huge, high-current amplification (for more, see panel), and claims to deliver a comparatively modest 110w into each speaker output (rising to 125w in stereo), but in practice, it's capable of producing truly thunderous levels with disdainful ease.

Of course, in this day and age the capability for extended-surround performance is essential, and the AVR 8500 is ready and willing, with preout sockets for use with the company's range of power amplifiers. Add, for example, a £700 PA 4000 amp to the preouts and stab a couple of buttons on the remote handset, and you can run the AVR 8500 in full seven-speaker THX Surround EX mode: not quite as cutting-edge as THX Ultra2, but close enough. You can also indulge in all the other key processing or decoding modes of the moment, connect an arsenal of additional components, and even stream in HDCD or MP3-encoded material for direct digital-to-analogue conversion via Crystal 24-bit/192kHz DACs.

When it comes to performance, the AVR 8500 not only surprised us, it impressed us mightily. This is a muscular, refined receiver that presents an intriguing alternative to Denon, Pioneer and Yamaha – the traditional masters of this receiver class. With a full, rich-sounding balance and masses of drive, the Harman Kardon presents action movies effortlessly and with ample spirit and composure. It can shake the living room with Attack of the Clones, but harshness and edginess never creep in. In some ways it's reminiscent of our reference Lexicon MC-12 processor, which is both unsurprising (Lexicon is owned by Harman International) and a large complement.

> "This is a muscular, refined receiver that presents an intriguing alternative to Denon, Pioneer and Yamaha"

While it's possible to bemoan the five-channel-only specification in terms of price-competitiveness, the compensation – the effort devoted to the AVR 8500's main amplification – is immediately obvious when you switch to stereo. Whisper it softly, folks, but this is a surround receiver with plenty of facilities that still – gasp – sounds excellent in stereo. Use a decent pair of main stereo speakers – we tried our reference Wilson Benesch pair, as well as the B&W CDM-series designs – and the results are seriously impressive. Rhythmic grip, focus, stereo imaging, timing, it's all there.

So, to sum up: our backs ache, but our ears don't. Quite the reverse, in fact. The AVR 8500 is going to make quite an impact on the market. It certainly did on us.

HOW IT WORKS

Plentiful power

High-quality amplification has long been a hallmark of Harman Kardon receivers, but the extraordinary specification of the AVR 8500's outputs takes the biscuit. The five channels of amplification each employ matched pairs of discrete output devices for each channel, with dual amplifier power supplies and a positively gigantic toroidal transformer. The resulting high-current amplification (±85amps) is enough to cope with pretty much any load, and is intended to remain clean, without distortion or coloration, whatever volume level you choose to listen at (and with a THX receiver, those can be quite high!). The aim is simple: whatever you want the AVR 8500 to drive – 6 ohm speakers, 4 ohm speakers, hell, even brick walls – it can cope.

Effects-panning capability doesn't match the very best

VERDICT
An excellent-value receiver with lots of features and weighty delivery – this Denon simply loves belting out blockbusters

DENON IS GUNNING for the Award-winning Yamaha RX-V430RDS with this budget multichannel receiver. The '1603 costs £50 less than its predecessor and enters the fiercely competitive £300-and-under receiver market. Power is raised from 70 to 80 watts per channel, and there's a six-channel input for DVD-Audio or SACD multichannel sources. A nice touch is the set of video audio and digital inputs on the front panel. These enable easy connection of, say, a games machine and a set-top box. But the most welcome transformation is the colour-coded remote control. This may sound trivial, but in the technically daunting world of home cinema anything that makes setting up easier is good news.

And preparing the Denon is simple. The receiver's front display, straightforward manual and logical remote work in harmony to get you up and rolling within 10 minutes. Crank up the volume and the potent receiver immediately fills the room with sound. It delivers Men in Black II with ease, and explosions reach your ears with a forceful thump. Receivers of this type spend much of their lives pumping out high-octane Hollywood action movies and the '1603 has the muscle for the job. Composure is excellent and even with complex film soundtracks the Denon remains unruffled.

However, it can occasionally struggle with the nuances of a film, such as delicate music or soft voices when the delivery is locked into the treble. This can make it tricky to follow dialogue without increasing the volume. But the main area in which the Denon falls short of the class leader is effects panning. Don't get us wrong: the '1603 is good, but it doesn't quite match the incredibly high standards set by Yamaha.

Spin a CD and the Denon is capable, if slightly harsh – it prefers thumping hip-hop and dance to delicate acoustic sets.

What we have here is a well-built, carefully thought out, fine-sounding multichannel receiver. But it can't quite match the performance of the class leader.

Plain Quadral sub/sat system fails to electrify

sub/sat £399

Integration; tight low frequencies

AGAINST
Falls short in the excitement stakes; brightness; lightweight presentation

VERDICT
Doesn't drop any clangers, but lacks the the ability to upset the class leaders

THIS PLAIN-LOOKING sub/sat system is unlikely to become a design icon, although it's discreet in its silver finish and the build quality is up to Quadral's usual high standards. Our only gripe is the use of fiddly springclip speaker terminals, which we only expect on much cheaper systems.

Quadral includes all you need to set up the system, including plenty of speaker cable and a small set of spikes that help secure the slim sub. Once everything is connected we suggest you set the DVD player to repeat and go on a weekend break. These satellites benefit from a long run-in and sound rather bright straight out of the box. Running in helps, but it doesn't entirely cure the 1280's treble problems, and the presentation remains a touch harsh at the top-end. This is most noticeable at higher volumes and with action-movie explosions.

A lack of detail in the midrange adds to the problems, and consequently voices lack emotion and dialogue is less than clear.

Happily, lower frequencies sound far better. Many sub/sat systems in this price bracket are notorious for a fat-sounding bass, but the 1280's subwoofer stands out from the crowd because of its sonic capabilities. It's a rhythmic performer that delivers bass notes that have an obvious beginning, middle and end. The key here is to refrain from cranking up the subwoofer's volume level too much. Resist the temptation and the Quadral rewards you with enjoyable bass as well as good integration between the sub and satellites. Turn up the subwoofer too loud and the lower frequencies strain and stand out from the treble and midrange.

Musically the package is competent rather than brilliant. Comparatively lower levels of detail mean it prefers the big beats of Groove Armada's Lovebox to the rich vocals of Elvis Presley, but it creates an acceptably tuneful background.

Overall this is an innocuous and uninspiring package – it looks bland and has the sound to match. Yes, it's reasonably composed but ultimately the system plays it too safe, robbing movie soundtracks of excitement.

The Quadral set-up looks plain, and sounds it, too

VERDICT
Appealing package, average performance

MISSION SEEMS TO be on something of a, well, mission at the moment. It is releasing such a diverse range of subwoofer/satellite surround-speaker packages that it seems to be trying to cater for every taste. Several current Mission offerings are in this same price category: the FS1 AV (£450) and the Supertest-winning Cinema m70 (£480) are now joined by this set, the m7s.

Style is clearly very important to the m7s. The five satellite speakers are made from an injection-moulded plastic, and boast a unique shape, with a curved-triangle fascia.

Look at the back and the ingenuity of the design becomes obvious. The main body of the satellite is spherical, with a curved mounting bracket. This bracket has an adjoined 'foot' that, because of the curved bracket, can be tightened at different points on the speaker. This means it can be mounted with great ease on a TV, stand, wall or just about anywhere you can think of.

Each satellite has a single circular speaker grille, surrounded by a suspiciously Audi-like metal ring as decoration. But this is not a single-driver speaker: instead, a 25mm moulded-dome tweeter and an 8cm moulded-cone midrange driver are combined in one coaxial drive unit.

In keeping with the satellite speakers, the active subwoofer is a similarly intriguing shape; its curved profile is a welcome change from the standard box design of many subwoofers. It has a 20cm pulp-fibre cone driver, and a 100w onboard amplifier. All the sub/sat crossover details are dealt with inside the sub/amp, so set-up's very straightforward. Simply set your AV amp's speaker outputs to 'large' and subwoofer to 'on'.

> "With the wealth of products like this on the market, the m7s' performance doesn't help it to stand out"

Once installed, the m7s system is as discreet and room-friendly a speaker package as we've seen. It needs a decent running-in period, but after 50 to 60 hours it gets stuck into soundtracks with a decent tonal balance, clear vocal reproduction and plenty of deep bass from the sub.

However, challenge it with some heavyweight movie action, and that bass starts to disappoint. The low-end has fairly soft and slow delivery, lacking punch and resulting in a rather bloated bass. Precision and clarity in the bottom-end are clearly not the m7s' strong points.

While the coaxial driver design gives the satellites a fairly open and revealing midrange, there is, at louder moments, a question mark over the quality of this package's treble performance. Some singing voices, especially the close-miked female variety, can come across as excessively sibilant and thin.

The speakers' styling reminds us of Audi cars

INSIDE INFORMATION

The flexibility of the M7s

THE M7S SATELLITE speakers have an ingenious design that's room-friendly in terms of placement as well as looks.

Each injection-moulded plastic speaker is fitted with a curved bracket. The spherical speaker turns inside this bracket until it's at the desired angle, at which point you simply tighten a nut to hold the speaker firmly in place.

This allows great flexibility: it's as straightforward to mount the speaker high on a wall, pointing down at you, as it is to have them in the more usual recommended position directly in front.

This ingenious bracket also makes it easy to alternate between mounting them on a shelf and, say, wall-mounting them (or both – wall-mounting the front three and having the rears on shelves, for example). If you want them freestanding, Mission also provides speaker stands – also appropriately curvaceous – for £70.

Pure cuts price of DigiTheatre

Pure DigiTheatre Platinum
Home cinema package
£399

FOR
Compact design; good power and fine integration; price

AGAINST
Lacks a little detail; basic specification; looks cheap

VERDICT
A great-value product suited to smaller rooms

PURE DIGITAL IS tidying up its DigiTheatre range: the £400, four-star, DTS model is discontinued and the price of the Platinum reviewed here is reduced by £150 to £400 – neatly filling the gap. This 5.1 model targets owners of DVD players, PCs that play DVDs, or Xbox and PlayStation2 games consoles. In truth the satellites feel like cheap computer speakers and the 13cm-tall boxes are so light it's hard to believe there's anything inside them. The plastic cabinet and chain-mail-effect grilles increase the cut-price feel, and the centre speaker/ control unit has the looks of a rather basic car radio. This unit – located in the middle of the grille – controls the volume, surround modes and input selection; the Dolby Digital, Dolby Pro Logic and DTS decoder/amp lives in the sub.

The controls for the system are found in the centre speaker

Despite the bargain-basement looks, it's an inconspicuous system: with the subwoofer hidden away in a corner, the only equipment left on show is four small satellite speakers and the 34cm-wide centre unit. So the package is ideally suited to small living rooms or as an add-on to a computer.

The set up is simple, and the out-of-the-box brightness settles down after a short running-in period. With Men in Black II spinning in our test DVD player, the Platinum impresses. The triple-ported, 20cm long-throw sub copes well with the demanding soundtrack and delivers explosions with a decent thud. When positioned in free space the subwoofer doesn't have the muscle to shake the room, but put it near a wall or in a corner and bass depth becomes respectable.

> "The DigiTheatre is impressive when fed a diet of blockbuster movies and modern pop"

The satellites have a smooth integration between their 7.5cm polypropylene mid/bass cones and 10mm polymer-dome tweeter, although at very high volumes we detected a hint of brightness. The centre speaker sounds good and the twin drive units with concentric tweeters deliver clear, easy-to-follow dialogue. The only major gripe is a lack of detail in the midrange, which can deprive voices of passion, but at this price that weakness is hardly unusual. The Platinum set-up can also become slightly confused when bombarded with complex surround-sound effects, but this doesn't detract from an otherwise highly enjoyable listening experience.

Switch to music and the Platinum lacks the finesse to handle classical or jazz tracks successfully, but spin some well-produced pop tunes and the result is an exciting listen.

The Platinum is good value. It's not high-end home cinema, but if fed a diet of blockbuster movies or modern pop the system performs impressively. Only jazz or classical music fans will find it wanting, but then this is primarily a system for movies. Add the Award-winning Toshiba SD-220E DVD player and you have an excellent first step into home cinema for under £600.

But here's a way to find out: put the sub in your listening position and disconnect the speakers, leaving the unit on and turned up. Play a bass-heavy CD, and walk around the room, listening to the character and volume of bass. Make a note of where the bass sounds best, pop the sub down in that spot, and enjoy.

Digital TV hit by set-top box recall

Unexpected pay-or-return demand on former ITV Digital subscribers could hamper uptake of Freeview

Freeview

ITV DIGITAL'S CREDITORS are threatening to credit-blacklist former subscribers to the digital TV service if they refuse to either return their set-top boxes or pay £39.99.

A letter detailing the pay-or-return deal is being sent out under the TV service's original ONdigital name to over a million UK households. In it the company's liquidators, Grant Thornton, urge former subscribers to buy their boxes and use them to receive the recently released Freeview range of free-to-view digital channels.

Ex-subscribers who choose not to buy or return their set-top boxes "are in danger of a black mark being put on their credit rating", warned a Grant Thornton spokesman.

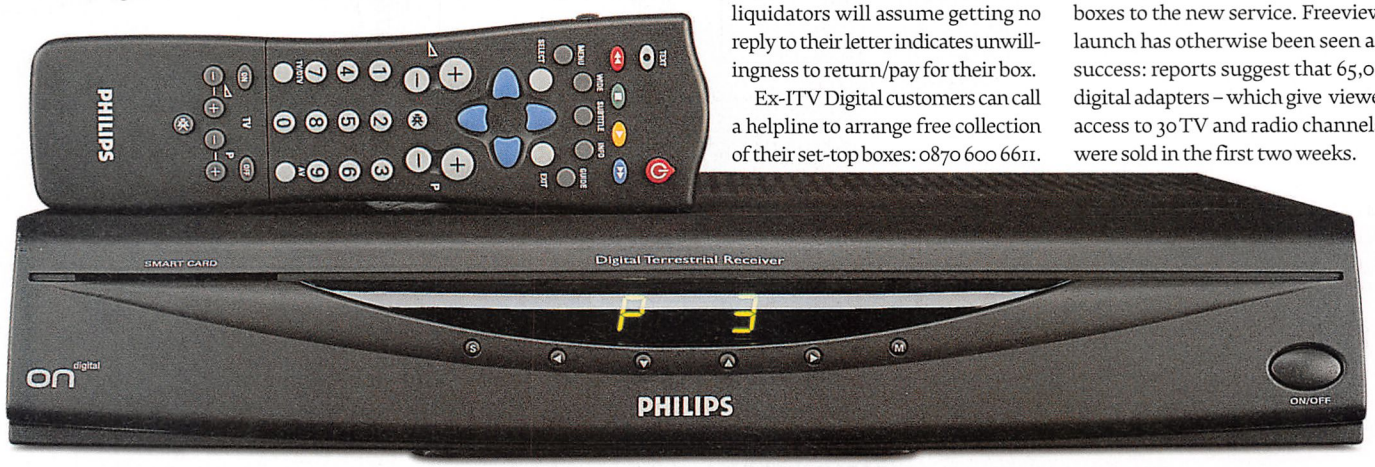
He confirmed that there would be no clemency for users who disposed of their boxes following ITV Digital's demise last year. "They shouldn't have disposed of property that wasn't theirs; they owe us £39.99," he stated. However, he said the cases of former pre-pay subscribers – many of whom are themselves ITV Digital creditors – would "be judged separately on an individual basis".

Subscribers who have since moved house could also face being credit-blacklisted at their old address, as the liquidators will assume getting no reply to their letter indicates unwillingness to return/pay for their box.

Ex-ITV Digital customers can call a helpline to arrange free collection of their set-top boxes: 0870 600 6611.

If users pay to keep their boxes, they can also spend a further £9.99 on a year's breakdown insurance for the unit. Grant Thornton said this offer represented "a significant discount" over the price of other digital adapters.

However, many people are expected to return the boxes, which is a blow to Freeview: it was predicted that two-thirds of ITV Digital's 1.2 million former subscribers would retune their boxes to the new service. Freeview's launch has otherwise been seen as a success: reports suggest that 65,000 digital adapters – which give viewers access to 30 TV and radio channels – were sold in the first two weeks.



It was estimated that 800,000 of ITV Digital's former subscribers would retune their set-top boxes to receive Freeview – but the pay-or-return move threatens that switch

DVD recorders plunge in price

DATA FROM MARKET-research specialist Gfk shows DVD recorder prices fell from an average of £1284 in September 2001 to just £483 in October 2002. Last June's upward blip was caused by the launch of Pioneer's latest premium recorder.

Sony uses digital amp for multichannel DVD/SACD receiver

ANYONE SEEKING A one-box solution for their hi-fi and home cinema system should take a careful look at Sony's intriguing new AVD-S50. It's an AV receiver, DVD-Video, CD and multichannel Super Audio CD player all in one unit. It's expected to sell for around £750.

It also includes a digital amplifier, because, says Sony, conventional amps give off a lot of heat, which can be detrimental to the performance of DVD-Video and SACD players. The S-Master digital amp in the AVD-S50 uses the one-bit technology Sony originally developed for SACD. All input signals, whether Direct Stream Digital (DSD) from SACD or Pulse Code Modulation (PCM) from CD, are converted into a stream of one-bit pulses. This means there is no digital-to-analogue converter like in conventional amps. Rather, the amplifier accepts the output of the digital-signal processing stage directly, which means the signal remains digital until the last moment before being sent to the speakers.

Sony's AVD-S50 handles everything but DVD-Audio

The power output is 80w across five channels, and Dolby Digital, Dolby Pro-Logic II and DTS decoders are built-in. You also get an AM/FM RDS tuner with 30 presets, RGB Scart inputs and outputs, three digital inputs and one digital output.

Deal of the month

As we note in this issue's CD recorder group test (p50), Sony's storming RCD-W3 can be snapped up for much less than its £250 list price. The best deal we've found is at www.hifibitz.co.uk, where the Sony costs a mere £195, including free UK delivery.

Rega updates its sound and look

REGA HAS ADDED a new tuner to its hi-fi line-up, alongside a series of upgrades ranging from radical technical changes to the introduction of a 'satin metal' finish option.

The Radio 3 is an analogue tuner designed to offer better performance, usability and looks than its Radio 2000 predecessor. Rega claims the Radio 3 is "one of the most sensitive and selective tuners available", with features such as a double-tuned detector stage and 20 station presets on AM and FM. The Radio 3 costs £374.

The key product updates affect Rega's Cursa 3 pre-amplifier and Maia 3 power amplifier. The manufacturer claims the upgrades offer radically improved performance compared with previous incarnations. Technical changes include a new volume-control mechanism and a double-sided circuit board. The Maia 3 power amp costs £498, as does the basic line-level version of the Cursa 3. To suit users of Rega's turntable range, two versions of the Cursa 3 featuring built-in phono stages are also available: the moving-magnet and moving-coil models cost £548 each.

The same enhanced volume-control system makes an appearance in the manufacturer's Mira 3 integrated amplifier, and Rega claims it has made "a marked sonic improvement". The new Mira 3 model costs £548.

Rega's Jupiter and Planet compact disc players (priced £998 and £498 respectively) have been upgraded to improve their DAC, power supply and coupling capacitors. In fact the updated Planet has been available for some time: it was first tested in WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION in November 2002.

Full details of the technical updates are available on Rega's website at www.rega.co.uk.

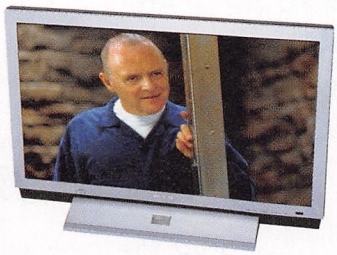
POTTER AND 007 SPRING DVDS

Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets is expected to be released on DVD at Easter. There are no details yet, but like the first Potter film a Dolby EX 6.1 extended surround score is available for transfer. It's set to be followed onto DVD in May by the latest James Bond film, Die Another Day, a disc that has potential for DTS-ES and Dolby EX 6.1 sound.



CUT-PRICE SAMSUNG PLASMA

Richer Sounds has signed an exclusive deal to sell Samsung's entry-level plasma screen for £2200. The 42in Samsung PS-42P2S is a display rather than an integrated TV, so buyers will also need to buy a set-top box (from £99) with a wall-bracket or plinth for an extra £150.

Unbeatable.co.uk ends delivery date confusion by clarifying kit availability

POPULAR ONLINE KIT shop Unbeatable.co.uk has clarified its stock-level indicators to give customers a better idea of when to expect delivery of purchases.

The site formerly only flagged items as either being available in two-three days – meaning the product was in stock at the site's warehouse – or seven-14 days, where kit needed to be ordered from a manufacturer. These descriptions have been joined by a third "currently in short supply" indicator, which will appear alongside products that may take longer to source.

Unbeatable is providing more detailed delivery info

Unbeatable's move was prompted by huge demand for Sony's STR-VA555ES receiver, which it – like many retailers – struggled to meet due to limited supply.

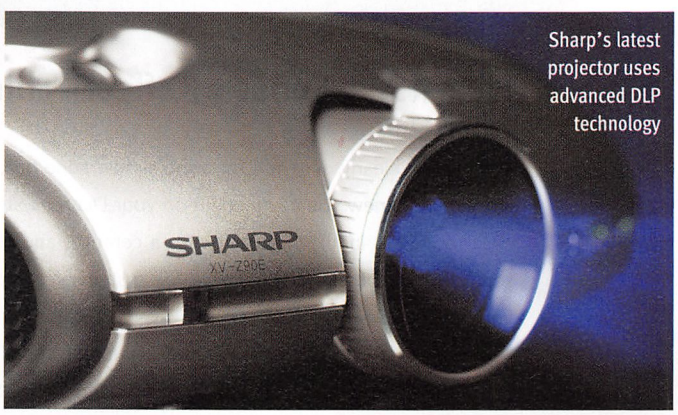
"Our customers can now make an informed decision whether to order and wait for a product or choose an alternative," said Gary Parker, Unbeatable MD.

Sharp's DLP projector 'bargain'

SHARP HAS LAUNCHED an entry-level DLP projector at the relatively bargain price of £2395. The XV-Z90E's 150w lamp delivers 600 ANSI lumens of brightness, with the projector displaying 16:9 and 4:3 ratio images at a 800x600 pixel resolution.

There's a generous array of connection options, including two component-video sockets, S-Video and RGB computer ports.

The projector weighs in at 4.3kg and measures a fairly compact 36.8 x 32.7 x 15.3cm, enabling it to be mounted on a coffee table, shelf or ceiling. Sharp also claims the XV-Z90E is "whisper quiet", with only 29dB of fan noise.



Sharp's latest projector uses advanced DLP technology

What's new

A friendly bass face from KEF

KEF HAS LAUNCHED a powered subwoofer designed to integrate with its Reference, XQ and Q series speakers, and to be good-looking enough not to have to be hidden away.

The PSW 4000 model features an integrated 500w amplifier, a 30cm long-throw bass driver and a frequency response of 25-250Hz. Its living-room-friendly looks conceal a neighbour-unfriendly maximum output of 113dB.

The hefty (38kg) sub is built into a hand-finished MDF cabinet measuring 49.5cm square and 46.5cm high. If you do want to hide the unit away, its radio remote control capability enables the concealed sub's output level, phase and low-pass filter frequencies to be adjusted from your seating position.

The PSW 4000 costs £1200 and is available finished in a choice of black-ash, cherry (as pictured above) or maple real-wood veneers.

The glass-topped PSW 4000 comes in a choice of three finishes

Titan has also unveiled a living-room friendly subwoofer in the shape of its Saturn model. Styled as a portable coffee table – 90cm square and 46cm high – the active sub features a 200w on-board amplifier, a 30cm bass driver with an aluminium sandwich cone and an acoustic bass radiator on top of the enclosure. The Saturn has a claimed frequency range of 20-250Hz. It is available in light oak, cherry and black-ash finishes, priced £799.

More information on the Saturn is at www.titanloudspeakers.co.uk.

Toshiba to launch hybrid hard-disk/DVD recorder

TOSHIBA IS PLANNING a spring/summer launch for a hybrid DVD/hard-disk recorder with a massive 160Gb of storage space.

The RD-X3 supports the DVD-RAM and DVD-R recording formats, with its hard drive – which can hold up to 208 hours of video – enabling editing of recordings before transfer to disc. The Toshiba also offers a time-shifting facility, allowing users to start watching programmes from the beginning that are still being recorded.

The recorder even offers PC and internet connectivity, which will let users download a range of content plus remotely control the RD-X3.

Pricing for the RD-X3 recorder will be announced at the product's launch later this year.

Warner steps up 'new' DVD-A releases

FOLLOWING ITS PLEDGE to increase the range of DVD-Audio software (see January issue), Warner Vision has launched seven DVD-A discs – though the majority are remastered back-catalogue titles rather than true new releases.

Two of the titles – Faith Hill's Cry and Believe from Disturbed were only released in stereo format last autumn. Of the other five, Neil Young's Harvest dates from 1972, REM's Automatic for the People from 1992, Yes's Fragile from 1994, Linda Ronstadt's What's New from 1986 and Donald Fagan's Night Fly from 1987.

All the new DVD-A titles offer advanced resolution multichannel and stereo mixes as well as Dolby Digital 5.1 downmixes – enabling them to be played in any DVD player.

Key extras available on the new selection of discs include a bonus track (America) on Yes's Fragile, exclusive video footage of Neil Young on Harvest, and an in-depth 'Making of' on REM's Automatic for the People – including Michael Stipe talking through the original handwritten lyrics.

As promised, Warner has cut the price of its DVD-A releases. Although the new titles cost more than the equivalent CDs, we found them for as little as £12.99 each online.

MONITOR AUDIO SILVER S8

Monitor Audio has revamped its Silver 8i floorstanders to include new cabinet engineering and driver technology. The Silver S8s feature all-new bass and bass-mid drivers with larger cone areas. Despite this more powerful design, the drivers themselves take up less space than in the 8i speakers, allowing the use of a more slimline cabinet for the S8s. That cabinet is made from veneered MDF, available in warm beech, black oak, natural oak and rosemah finishes.

LONG WAIT FOR XXX IN UK

The UK DVD of Vin Diesel action-fest XXX will go on sale on 24 March – almost three months after the 31 December release of the Region 1 edition. The disc will feature a 2.35:1 anamorphic widescreen picture and Dolby Digital 5.1 sound.

Disappointingly, neither the US nor UK editions are slated for a DTS or extended surround-sound option, despite such a mix being available for transfer – Columbia Tristar has opted to add a bucketful of extras instead.

THOMSON'S WHITE TELEVISION

Thomson is adding to its Scenium TV range. The limited-edition 32WZ841W targets style-conscious home cinema fans and is available in almost complete white, including a matching gloss-white stand. The switchable 100Hz/50Hz £1099 set's clip-on-frame feature enables owners to swap the colour of the surround should they so desire.

ISOTEK DISTRIBUTION UPDATE

Readers looking for more information and stockist details for Isotek products – including the Isoplug mains power isolator featured in the January issue – should contact Active Distribution on 01635 291357.

STAR AV NEWCOMER

Infinity sub/sats aim for home cinema style and substance

Infinity's new Oreus sub/sat package (£650) consists of four dedicated satellites, a centre-channel speaker and high-powered subwoofer, each encased in a die-cast aluminium enclosure. Each satellite contains a custom-made, 8cm low-frequency driver and a 10mm tweeter, capable of handling up to 100w with a claimed frequency response of 95Hz-22kHz.

The subwoofer uses a 100w amplifier and a 21cm driver, supplemented with two 21cm Auxiliary Bass Radiators that together provide a claimed frequency response of 50-150Hz. All five main speakers come with fully adjustable bases/wall-brackets for optimum positioning – matching floor stands cost an extra £150 per pair. We'll have a full First Test next month.

Onkyo's flagship receiver, the TX-DS989 has been upgraded. The updated version of the seven-channel amplifier retains support for all the latest surround-sound formats, including Dolby Digital EX, Pro-Logic II and THX, but with the upgrades comes full THX Ultra 2 certification. The new version is also equipped with the latest audio format DTS 96kHz/24-bit decoder.

The TX-DS989 – which is available in black or silver finishes – costs £2850, but the good news for those of you who have the older units is that the upgrade is available for an extra £400.

Supra's new Dual interconnect claims to offer high 'noise immunity' and the best musical delivery. It costs £40 per 0.75m pair, with five- and six-cable AV packs also available.

If you're after a speaker/sub combo to match your new MP3 jukebox when not on the move, one stylish new option is Creative's I-Trigue 2.1 kit. The £90 set will also suit PC users.

TELEVISIONS

Panasonic TX15LV1 £1400 This 15in LCD TV has a built-in DVD player.

HOME CINEMA IN A BOX

Sony DAV-DS1000 £2500 A high-end system with DVD/SACD player, wireless rear speakers and a solar-powered remote.

VIDEO RECORDERS

ACCESSORIES

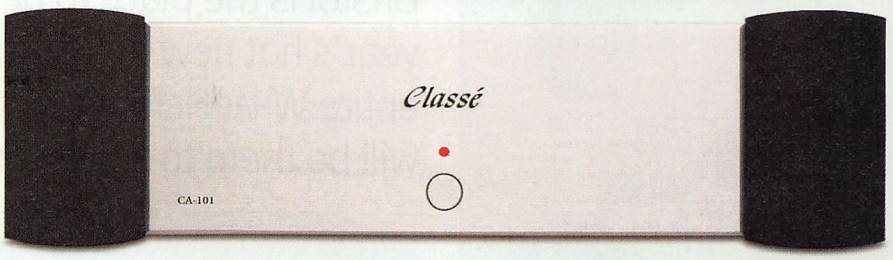
The IsoTek Qube is a mains-isolation unit, providing either 1kw (£1195), 2kw (£1495) or 4kw (£2250) capacity.

Revolver Speakers has returned to the UK, thanks to the Acoustic Partnership. The first model in the new range, which will include bookshelf, floorstanding and centre-channel speakers, is the £500 R33 above.

UK company Vivadi has released its second range of plasma TVs. The 42in Saturn system has a subwoofer and centre speaker built into its cabinet, with 5.1 surround sound completed by a pair of floorstanding front speakers and two wall-mountable rears. The Saturn costs £8000, with a range of cabinet and speaker finishes on offer.

STAR HI-FI NEWCOMER

Classé introduces its most affordable CD player and amp



Classé, the Canadian hi-fi manufacturer, has introduced the CDP-10 CD player and the CA-101, a new entry-level power amplifier, to the UK market. They complement its range of high-end pre/power and integrated amps.

The CDP-10 uses the very latest high-performance components, including the new Philips VAE1250 transport and PCM 1783 D/A converters from Burr-Brown – a 24-bit/192KHz differential stereo chipset is used for each channel.

The CA-101 is designed to partner the company's CP-35 preamp, and uses a high-end transformer, which is claimed to allow the amp to deliver "double its rated 100 watts per channel into a 4-ohm load". It also offers both single-ended and balanced input connections.

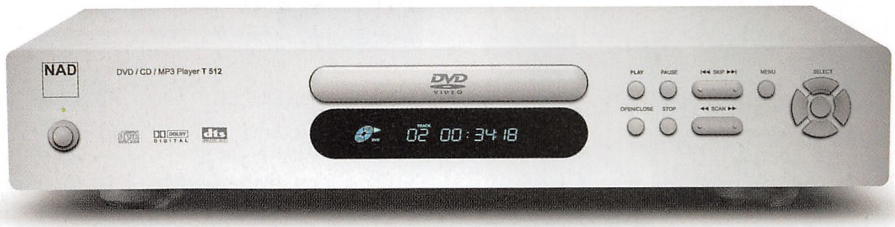
The CDP-10 and the CA-101 are each priced at £1600 and will be distributed in the UK by B&W.

Toshiba's entry into the world of one-box home cinema comes courtesy of the SD-42HK. Comprising a DVD receiver, and 5.1 channel speaker set-up, the kit includes a Dolby Digital and DTS decoder and a built-in digital amp. Like Tosh's other DVD players, it offers component-video output.

KEF's 206DS is a new home cinema speaker in the company's Reference range. This dedicated dipole rear surround incorporates two of KEF's Uni-Q point source arrays, as used in the Reference Series, together with two 19mm titanium-dome hyper-tweeters and twin 16.5cm low-distortion bass drivers. The 206DS costs £3500 per pair, and comes in black ash, maple and cherry real wood veneers to match the rest of the Reference Series of speakers.

Sound & Vision
THE BRISTOL SHOW 2003

Bristol is the place to be if you want to see all this year's hot new hi-fi and home cinema kit. And the entire WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION editorial team will be there to solve your technical problems



KEF's XQ speaker range was first seen at the Consumer Electronics Show in Vegas and will be launched in the UK at Bristol. The XQ5 costs £2000, and is available in this striking red.

NAD's T512 DVD player (£250) will make its debut in a 'titanium' finish. The T742 receiver is also available in this style.

Celestion's new electronics range includes a DVD player and home cinema receiver combination. Price: £800.

Naim Audio, who will be located in the Marriott Presidential Suite, will show its new CDS3 CD player and matching electronics.

Yamaha will take the wraps off its eight-speaker DSP-AZ2 home cinema amp. The £1000 unit delivers 130w across the six channels, and 25w for the front effects channels.

Loewe's latest TV is the Aventos, a 32in 100Hz widescreen model priced at £1149. Features include picture-in-picture, Virtual Dolby Surround and a split screen for showing TV images and Teletext.

Tivoli Audio's Model Two radio (£170) is a stereo version of the Model One with an extra matching speaker. The tuner and amp circuits have been completely revamped, and visitors to Bristol can hear it in action.

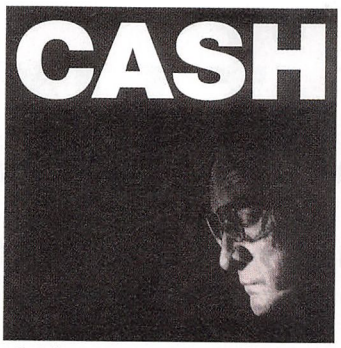
Test CDs: February

The discs we used to make this month's hi-fi systems work harder

Johnny Cash

American IV: The Man Comes Around | Lost Highway Records



THIS IS NOT a country music album – it's a Cash music album. The 70 year-old legend, who has racked up sales of 50 million albums, performs covers from an eclectic mix of artists ranging from Nine Inch Nails to Depeche Mode, and makes them all his own. The result is an occasionally frail yet always powerfully emotional test of your hi-fi's midrange. Cash is back on form.

MOST TESTING TRACK

In My Life

WHY? There's more gravel in Cash's voice than on all the driveways in Surrey, and this cover of one of the finest Beatles ballads is a beautiful test of midband ability. Listen for Smokey Hormel tapping his guitar and for Cash's classic, sometimes wavering vocals. If your system is up to scratch, everyone in the room stops and listens.

Andrea Bocelli

Sentimento | Phillips

THE TENOR STRAYS from his familiar operatic territory, teaming up with Lorin Maazel and the London Symphony Orchestra to record a collection of ballads. Bocelli's moving voice is a wonderful test for hi-fi but the icing on the cake is Maazel's violin obbligato parts, which dance delightfully round pieces by composers including Offenbach and Tosti.

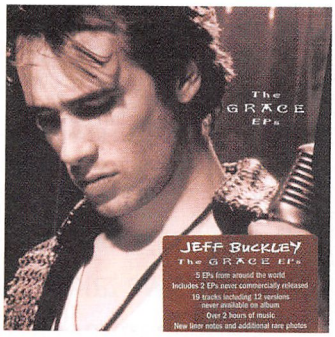
MOST TESTING TRACK

La Danza

WHY? Your system needs masterful control to deliver the quick and complex rhythms of this upbeat track. Maazel's bow furiously darts back and forth across his Stradivarius and your equipment should clearly reproduce the rapid note changes from the violin. Spot-on timing is essential to marry the dancing vocals to the fast-paced beat.

Jeff Buckley

The Grace EPs | Columbia



ANOTHER SINGER WHO died young; another retrospective album. But this release is not just an attempt by Buckley's estate to flog some CDs – it's a collection of beautiful melodies and thoughtful lyrics to treasure. The top testers are the live performances, which capture the intimacy of performer-and-crowd interaction.

MOST TESTING TRACK

The Way Young Lovers Do

WHY? The historic French venue, the Bataclan, is the setting for this 1995 performance. This is a test of your system's ability to recreate the feeling of attending a live performance. If your hi-fi locks the performers and crowd into place you feel an irresistible urge to rush out of the house and buy tickets for a real, live concert. It'll also make you mourn Buckley's loss afresh.

Groove Armada

Lovebox | Pepper Records

HOW CAN YOU categorise a band whose earlier 'dance' album includes a trombone solo? We're not sure either, but this release is a system workout of epic proportions. Andy and Tom include 'phat' beats, intricate mixes and delicious vocals from guests Neneh Cherry and Richie Havens. The musical variety alone makes this a great test disc.

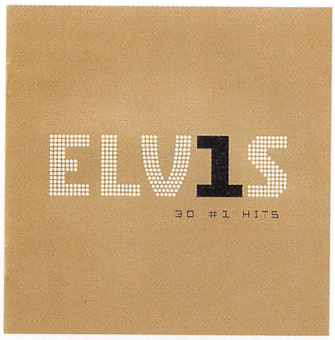
Be Careful What You Say

WHY? Pump up the volume and this track tests bass extension, speed and rhythm and also examines your system's muscle. The deep bass pumps on relentlessly, with no respect for drive units, and the quick percussion exposes splashy tweeters. Beware the jackhammer effect – ideally it sounds deep, metallic and menacing.

Elvis Presley

Elv1s 30 #1 Hits | RCA



THE REMASTERING TEAM'S stated intention is to ensure the King's songs contain the full dynamic range of bass and treble. The result is that some hugely familiar chart-toppers get a fresh sound. But the real beauty for testing purposes is that practically all the tunes on this disc are totally live – recorded in one take with no overdubs.

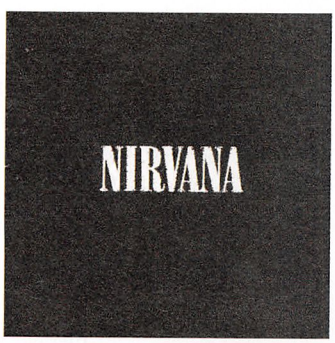
MOST TESTING TRACK

Suspicious Minds

WHY? OK, this track does contain one background vocal but everything else is a one-take wonder. The toughest test is surprisingly not found in Elvis's vocals but is located in the lower frequencies. The bass should be delivered as a magnificent romp that stops and starts as if the guitarist fitted ABS brakes and fuel injection to his instrument. Glorious stuff.

Nirvana

Nirvana | Geffen



THIS IS A collection of Nirvana's (arguably) best-known tracks, plus the previously unreleased You Know You're Right. Surprisingly, there is only one song from their awesome debut album Bleach, but for testing purposes there is more than enough power, emotion and speed to give your hi-fi components a rigorous shakeout. Not one to try on a ropey mini system.

MOST TESTING TRACK

You Know You're Right

WHY? It's time to test the treble... and bass... and midrange for that matter. Cobain's growling vocals and a pumping beat demand a superior performance from the drivers, but the percussion proves the toughest test. The crashing cymbals are unbearable on the ear if your system is bright and lacks ability in the higher frequencies.

The Meadowcrofts' existing kit is starting to look rather old – there's certainly room for system improvement

What do you do when your chimney's getting in the way of your music and movie pleasure? Call in our experts to find a solution...

What's the problem?

ARCHITECTURE CAN BE the enemy of hi-fi. Nick and Jackie Meadowcroft have a large living room, but it's effectively split in two by a sizeable chimney, limiting their system options. Despite this inconvenience, Nick and Jackie want to improve their set-up, possibly by integrating the whole system on one side of the room. One thing's for sure: their existing kit is starting to look rather old and there is certainly room for improvement. For one thing, we can suggest a better DVD player than the PlayStation 2 they currently use. However, this may be a tough job: Jackie's sceptical as to what improvements can be made by new kit. And then there's that chimney...

We suggest...

Short of taking a sledgehammer to the chimney – an option firmly ruled out by Jackie – we're going to have to work out a clever compromise. First impressions of the room have us leaning toward a plan of integrating the system at one end. A budget of £1000 leaves us further convinced that this is the right move.

First of all, we listen to their current system to hear what kind of improvements can be made. The set-up at the 'hi-fi' end of the room is unconventional to say the least: two pairs of small speakers are used for all music listening – a pair of Mission 730s and a pair of SCM-50s, more usually seen as part of the Award-winning Denon D-M30 micro system. Nick explains: "I leave all four speakers at the back end of the room when listening to music, but I bring the Denons to the front when we watch DVDs and leave the Missions as rear speakers."

But, we object, that means you hear no stereo image at all when you listen to music. "That's right," says Nick, a tad sheepishly. "But to be honest, we don't get a lot of time to sit and listen to music. We just have it on quite loud as we're doing other things."

Nick plays us some tracks – Santana, Chris Rea and Queen, among others – on the old system, and we hear plenty of room for improvement. While the system performs to a decent standard in terms of scale and dynamics, a lack of detail and strident treble tend to undermine the system's qualities. Despite the limitations of the room, we're confident we can make the sound better within the budget.

Nick's still having a hard time deciding whether to have two separate systems – one for music, the other for home cinema – or whether to integrate. Luckily, we can adapt to both scenarios. For option one, we've got a Sony DAV-S550 home-cinema-in-a-box package that can take care of the TV side of the room, while the new Denon DF-101 micro-separates set-up is an affordable way of achieving a new two-channel system on the other side of that chimney.

However, after spinning some CDs in the Denon system, Nick and Jackie make up their minds. Despite the Denon's sonic qualities, they've decided that two systems won't solve the problem. Better, they say, to spend the budget on one system that will do everything well, and install it at the front of the room where they can hear it properly. We agree wholeheartedly and, with sighs of relief all round, set about unveiling the components that might make up such an integrated system.

A solution quickly presents itself. First, we unveil a two-box system from Pioneer: the DV-454S DVD player and the VSX-C100-S surround receiver. Sold together for £430, this product is designed to blur the distinction between a style system and 'proper' separates. The bonus is that it sounds great for both movies and music.

However, we still have to settle the speaker issue. Luckily, we've also brought the Mission Cinema m70 package, which at £480 brings us in under budget – or rather leaves us some cash to spend on

> "Unless we take a large sledgehammer to that chimney – an option ruled out by Jackie – we're going to have to compromise"

Despite a chimney and lots of healthy scepticism getting in the way, we find a great set-up for the Meadowcrofts

KEF UNI-Q® LOUDSPEAKERS

XQ series

eXQuisite

If you're into sound, there's huge pleasure to be had from wideband formats like SACD and DVD-A. But to get the full benefit, you need a bit more than the same old speaker technology in a square wooden box.

That's where the new XQ Series comes in. Sure, they look the part – but what makes them so special is how they perform. The illusion of presence they create is so real it's scary. The detailing is phenomenal, wherever you sit - even at super audio frequencies. We're talking total immersion in a way that's simply not possible with conventional systems.

No wonder – the XQ is packed with high end technologies from the latest Reference Series, including KEF's radical new Hypertweeter™ and the most sophisticated Uni-Q® arrays ever made. Hardware that changes your pulse rate.

"This is definitely a lot better than my old system, and that's just with music. There's much more body and richness to the sound" important things like speaker cables. While the Mission speakers are neither as small nor discreet as many sub/sat systems, their sound-per-pound status is impressive.

However, Jackie remains sceptical about our plans. In fact, "Everything just sounds the same as turning on the radio to me," were her exact words. Hopefully this system will inspire a change of heart.

We get the whole lot wired for sound and sit back to listen to the results. Nick is interested in the new system's music performance, so we decide to replay some of the CDs we spun earlier.

As Chris Rea's Burning Feet from the recent Dancing Down the Stony Road set emanates from the speakers, Nick is immediately impressed. "It's definitely a lot better than my old system, and that's just with music," he says. "There's a lot more body and richness to the sound."

One thing that is particularly impressive about this Pioneer/Mission set-up is the quality of bass integration, with the Mission m70s 'handing over' to the ms8 subwoofer very effectively. There's no lower midrange hole that some sub/sat speaker systems suffer from.

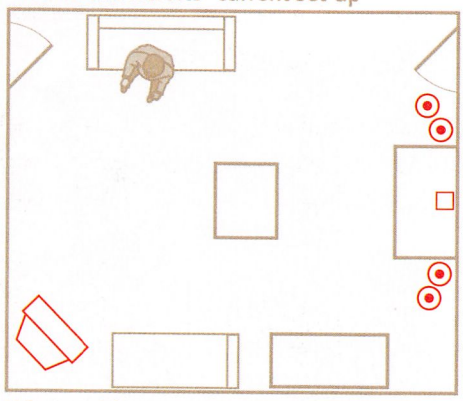
This is meant to be an integrated system – remember, these products were designed primarily for home cinema – so let's spin some movies. A couple of scenes from The Matrix later, and we think we've got a result. "I really like it," says Nick. "It's a good, rich sound, with a lot of bass." Not too much, we hope. "Oh no," he says. "It's really clear and not overpowering at all."

Conclusion...

Because of those room considerations, the options available to this month's rescuees were very limited. However, in the Pioneer DV-454-S/VSX-C100-S system we've discovered a player/amp combo that works remarkably well for both music and films. By partnering them with the Mission Cinema m70 speaker package, we've managed to integrate a whole system for Nick and Jackie – and one that doesn't have to be compromised by the chimney at the centre of the room.

Nick is impressed. "We can use it as background music like the current system," he says, "but it also gives us the chance to sit on the sofa and listen to our music and movies properly." And has Jackie's scepticism been assuaged? "Yes, I admit it," she says. "It does sound better."

The Meadowcrofts' current set-up

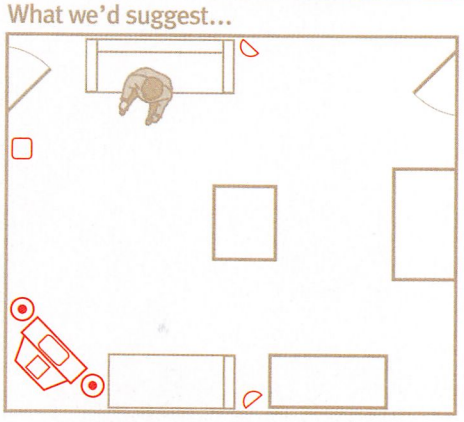


The main problem is the chimney, but as a structural feature of the house it's somewhat non-negotiable. But the surrounding kit arrangement can certainly be improved.

A 5.1 surround speaker system, well positioned in the front half of the room, will let them use one system for both music and films. The front speakers on either side of the TV will deliver some long-lost stereo imaging, while the Mission centre speaker fits on top of the TV and locks movie dialogue to the screen.

For both front and rear speakers, some Atacama stands will get the best out of the Mission m70s.

What we'd suggest...



KEY ⦿ Front speakers ⌓ Rear speakers ▭ Centre speaker ▢ Subwoofer

What we tried

First we used two separate music and movie set-ups: Sony's DAV-S550 home-cinema-in-a-box kit and the new Denon DF-101 micro-separates system. We then moved on to an all-in-one system based on Pioneer's DV-454S DVD player and VSX-C100S AV amp plus the Mission Cinema m70 sub/sat speaker kit.

What they picked

The slimline Pioneer DVD/AV amp combo, plus Mission's Cinema m70 speaker package.

What next?

The Meadowcrofts plan to switch from their current 25in 4:3 TV to a larger widescreen set.

BIG BOLD BARGAINS

If you want your speakers to dig deeper into the bass and offer bags of power and scale, floorstanders are just the job. We test six...

TIRED OF SMALL speakers? Want a sound that's big and bold? Here's the good news: the price of a pair of high-quality floor-standing speakers is dropping, with musical towers of awesome ability available for real-world prices.

For instance, there are some stunning stars among this sextet – all in the £300-£400 category. But what can you expect for this money? Power and scale? Acres of bass?

The answer is all this and more. These days, the kind of powerhouse performance on show here doesn't have to come at the expense of subtlety. Boasting as much detail as bombast, these speakers are must-hears – especially if you have a large room and bigger sonic ambitions. The best of this test manage to combine slam and punch with true transparency and realism. Dare we say it, it's the best of both worlds...

VERDICT
The AEs are exceptionally musical and undoubted class leaders

LEST WE FORGET, the Evo Threes were released after a period in which many felt Acoustic Energy's products were somewhat off the pace. The Evo range was a direct attempt to rectify that situation, a strategy that has proved extremely successful.

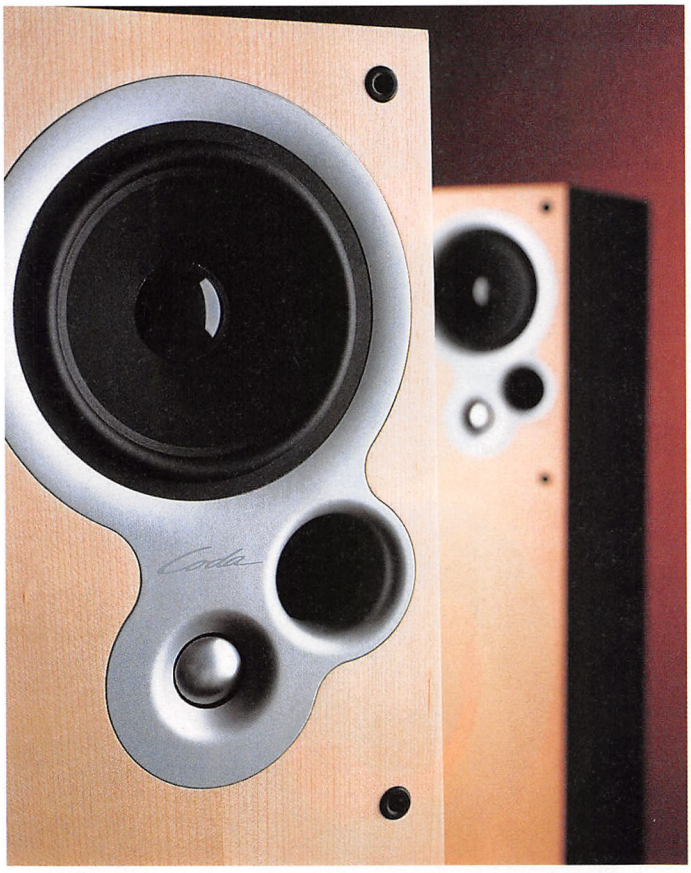
And these are the stars of the range. In replacing the old Aegis Threes, AE made a number of changes including a revised crossover, a new tweeter, and the use of an alloy cone bass driver (instead of one made from polypropylene) to match it more closely to the midrange driver of the same material.

The Evo Threes are of a three-way design, and benefit from the midrange/bass work being shared between two separate drivers. What impresses is the integration between all three of the units – not always the case in three-way designs.

There are no such problems here. In fact, the Evo Threes' integration is stunning, creating a huge, seamless soundstage that extends from the deepest bass to the highest treble. Suffice to say that the driver material change and crossover improvements have worked. With bells on.

All the other things you want from a floorstander – scale, bass power and punch – are here in spades, but the real key to these speakers is the manner in which they deliver detail. They unravel the complex sonics of Bjork's Vespertine set with consummate ease, and are equally at home with a disc of Shostakovich's String Quartet No. 4. Every dynamic sweep is delivered with insight, and the 12cm alloy midrange driver conveys the subtle details of voices, strings and guitars to a marvellous degree. And they manage all that while maintaining excellent cohesion, ensuring the whole presentation is huge, detailed and involving.

The Evo Threes continue to set the floorstanding standard at this price. It'll take something special to knock them off their perch.



KEF Coda 90 £380 ★★★★☆

FOR
Superb build and design; crisp and articulate performance

AGAINST
They lack the scale and punch of some floorstanding rivals

VERDICT
Smart and sophisticated speakers, but found wanting for outright attack

LIKE MANY PRODUCTS, the Coda 90s' outward appearance is a good indication of things to come. Their combination of excellent build quality and elegant design gives them an air of sophistication.

The 13cm coated pulp cone mid/bass driver is mounted above a 25mm metal-dome tweeter, both of which are housed – along with a front-firing reflex port – in an elaborately shaped aluminium chassis. This chassis locks onto the speaker's back panel via a rod, ensuring absolute rigidity for the drivers.

There's a third driver for the bass mounted low on the side of the cabinet. This side-firing unit has a 16.5cm coated pulp cone, and takes care of the frequencies below 80Hz.

The KEFs produce a richly detailed soundstage, with excellent placement and focus of instruments within the stereo image. They need careful placement: they perform at their best when given a reasonable amount of space from both rear and side walls.

Placed in open space, the Coda 90s perform extremely well, offering insight and detail to a wide range of recordings. Seamless integration and a highly detailed midrange contribute to a performance that lives up to those first impressions of refinement: from the natural acoustic lilt of Neil Young's Silver and Gold set to the subtle electronica of Boards of Canada, the KEFs sound very natural.

That said, they don't quite deliver the all-out punch and attack that some in this test offer. It's largely a matter of dynamics: moments of sudden slam are not, with the KEFs, quite the knock-out experience you might expect from floorstanders. For all their qualities of clarity and refinement, they're not the thrill-a-minute ride that some may demand.

Still, the 90s boast a superb design and could suit the more laidback taste perfectly.

Mission m74i £300 ★★★★★

FOR

Scale and punch; phenomenal bass

AGAINST

Rivals offer a slightly more refined treble, but that's all

VERDICT

Another pair of superb powerhouse speakers from Mission

UNLIKE SOME SPEAKERS in this test, the Missions utilise a two-way design, so the 16cm bonded, woven glass-composite drivers function as twin full-range mid/bass drivers. A 25mm soft-dome tweeter lies between them, and all are mounted on an ABS front baffle, moulded to optimise the 74i's dispersion characteristics.

The m74is are the biggest speakers in the test. Their slightly imposing presence means they're not particularly suitable for small rooms. However, put the foam bungs supplied in the large reflex ports and they can go fairly close to a rear wall without any significant loss of performance quality.

The improvements made to the 'i' range include changes to the crossover and better cabinet bracing, to reduce coloration and increase dynamics and bass response.

Ah yes, bass response. The low-end performance of the m74is is, to put it simply, fantastic. The twin mid/bass drivers pump out the low stuff with effortless scale, combining precise rhythmic timing with a superb sense of weight and power. From Bjork's Vespertine set to the jazz funk of Herbie Hancock's Headhunters, the Missions have a tasty way with a bassline.

Pleasingly, all this punch has not been achieved at the expense of subtlety. The m74is have a surprisingly open and detailed midrange, and its fine integration with the tweeter makes for a revealing treble performance.

That said, the tweeter's treble delivery is not quite a match for the performance of some rivals. Careful system matching is advisable: bright-sounding electronics could lead to a harsh response from the tweeter.

But this is a minor point. The Missions manage to balance admirable resolution and detail with a zestful, exciting delivery that with the right recording will knock you out of your seat.

Monitor Audio Bronze B4 £350 ★★★★½

FOR

A big, bold presentation; good-quality bass and dynamics

AGAINST

Some coloration evident at points in the midrange

VERDICT

A pleasurable listen, but not the most transparent or faithful in the test

YOU'VE GOT TO hand it to Monitor Audio. The company doesn't run with the crowd, preferring instead to work out its own designs for everything from crossovers to driver materials.

The Bronze B4s use Monitor Audio's by-now-familiar 'C-CAM' 25mm metal-dome tweeter, designed to avoid the problem of sonic harshness that can plague metal tweeters.

Each B4 also utilises a pair of 16.5cm MMP (Metal Matrix Polymer) mid/bass drivers: it's a two-and-a-half-way design, so the upper of the two is a full-range driver with the second 'filling in' the bass frequencies.

The mounting of the drivers gives the B4s an unusual look; and at 16.5cm these are the biggest drivers on test (excluding the KEFs' bass drivers).

Get them working and the B4s quickly make plain their intention to entertain. Their presentation is particularly suited to dance and rock: superb dynamics and plenty of punch turn any vibrantly rhythmic music into an exciting listen.

The B4s' only flaw is that, while some of the competition excel at a cleanly transparent sound, the Monitor Audios do have slight coloration, points in the frequency range where their presentation is not as natural and convincing as some. While they execute the deepest basslines with admirable weight and punch, the upper bass/lower mid region occupied by the bass guitar on Neil Young's Rust Never Sleeps set lacks a degree of realism.

That said, the Bronze B4s are a highly enjoyable listen, with a presentation somewhere between the AEs and the Missions in this test. Weighty, muscular bass matched by high resolution and strong dynamics all make for a listen that's big on the thrill factor. Despite their coloration, these speakers are very easy on the ear.

Rega Alya £398 ★★☆☆☆

FOR

Decent detail; good scale for their size

AGAINST

Below the standard set by others; price

VERDICT

An intriguing solution, but hard to recommend for the money

REGA DESCRIBES ITS new Alya speakers as 'a specific solution to a specific problem'. This is an extremely small pair of floorstanders, designed to work in the kind of space normally considered the territory of stand-mounted speakers.

So, if you have a very small room but you desperately prefer floorstanding speakers to standmounters or bookshelf speakers, the Alyas are aimed at you. At just 74.5cm tall, they're a good 20cm shorter than this test's biggest boxes, the Missions, so it's fair to say that what we have here is a very different type of floorstanding speaker.

They work well in a fairly confined space, with a bass reflex port that doesn't prevent them from sitting close to a rear wall; in fact proximity to the room boundary gives them a bit more scale and bass weight without compromising on the precision of their low-end presentation.

The Regas are quite charming speakers in a sense: they're capable of powerful dynamics, and can deliver a very listenable rendition of Shostakovich's string quartets.

Levels of detail and resolution are not, however, anywhere near the best in this test. Where some rivals scintillate with insight and realism, the Regas have a sluggish, closed-in response that doesn't excite the listener.

This is not to condemn them – they can provide a reasonable performance in a small room, and their look and dimensions might fit some buyers' needs exactly.

But our biggest problem here is price. While the Regas are by some way the smallest speakers in the test, they also happen to carry the heftiest price tag. Put them up against any of the competition and it's impossible not to notice how little you're getting for the money – in sound as well as size. At £300 they'd be an intriguing solution suited to certain consumers. At nearly £400 they're hard to recommend.

Sony SS-B4ED £330 ★★★☆☆

FOR

Build quality; dynamics and plenty of bass punch

AGAINST

Lack of rhythmic drive; not the sweetest-sounding treble

VERDICT

Decent all-rounders, but rather overshadowed by the quality of rivals

WHERE SOME BIG speakers impose themselves on a space, these compact floorstanders from Sony have a room-friendly presence. Unlike bigger rivals, they're capable of integrating well into smaller and mid-sized living rooms. They're also very well designed and built, their beech wood veneer and twin Kevlar mid/bass drivers giving them an attractive look.

A lot of manufacturing expertise has gone into the SS-B4EDs. They boast internal multiple bracing, a custom reinforced terminal board and spade-terminated cable links for single-wired use.

The Sonys benefit from being biwired, with a slightly clearer and more open presentation if you do. They're a touch fussier than most about eliciting their optimum performance: a lengthy running-in period is particularly beneficial. They also need slightly more toeing-in than some speakers if they are to achieve a genuinely solid and focused central image.

The tweeter used here is a 25mm carbon graphite dome unit. It's an Extended Definition design with a frequency capability up to 70kHz, making it ideally suited to the large-bandwidth response of Super Audio CD.

The Sonys deliver a powerful and dynamic sound whether you feed them Bjork or Beethoven. An articulate and extended bass creates plenty of excitement, resulting in visceral power and punch.

However, their lack of timing and precision let them down. The timing of the Missions and AEs is of another class compared with the Sonys. Spin Herbie Hancock's Headhunters disc, and while the SS-B4EDs offer clarity and dynamics, they don't capture the band's rolling grooves with zest.

The Sonys have their strengths, but the heat of the competition renders them average by comparison.

Acoustic Energy Aegis Evo Three

IT'S AN IMPRESSIVE group, this, but it's not hard to pick the stars. The Monitor Audio Bronze B4s deserve a mention because they deliver what can only be described as a real knock-you-out performance with scale, dynamics and bass power a-plenty, despite some frequency coloration at certain points in their range.

For the more refined taste, the KEF Coda 90s are an attractive package, both visually and sonically: but don't expect the dynamic thrills of some rivals – especially the Missions.

Ah yes, the Missions. For their balance of weight and articulation, their low-end presentation is the best on show here, and they don't – unlike some recent Mission designs we've tested – achieve this at the expense of detail and insight. Make no mistake, the m74is are excellent floorstanders.

But, surprisingly, they're still not quite good enough to win this test. Why? Because of the Acoustic Energy Aegis Evo Threes, that's why. Tonally even, totally insightful, blisteringly musical: the Evo Threes are simply too good to be beaten at the price. Oh, and they're beautifully built as well. That makes them our worthy floorstanding favourite, and the ones we'd buy if it was our cash. At £350, they're bang on the money.

DIY DISCS

After years of supporting MiniDisc, Sony has finally launched its first CD recorder. Can it beat Pioneer's and Yamaha's heavyweight contenders?

CD RECORDERS ARE big business. If you ever needed convincing of that, here's the evidence: this test features the first consumer CD recorder from Sony, the inventor and major proponent of MiniDisc. For a long while after hostilities ceased in the battle between MiniDisc and Philips' Digital Compact Cassette, Sony seemed to be going head to head with the makers of CD-R, a format that at the time was becoming established. However, it soon became clear that the two could coexist, and with Sony still launching MD hardware, the arrival of the RCD-W3 should be seen as a logical move, not a complete change of strategy.

Whatever, the Sony finds itself up against the big hitters of the CD-R world, in the form of Pioneer's multiple-Award-winning PDR-609 and Yamaha's latest hard-disk/CD-R hybrid. But it could just be that the Sony has a major weapon up its sleeve...

Denon CDR-W1500 £450 ★★☆☆☆

FOR
Twin-deck convenience; solid build; makes good copies

AGAINST
Outgunned in every department by the others in this group

VERDICT
Not so long ago, this machine would have been a contender. Now it's too expensive and simply can't live with its rivals

THE DENON IS a good machine to start this test because it's the most obvious direct rival of the new Sony. It's the only other twin-deck recorder in the test, which means it's possible to make copies without hooking up another player. It also provides a range of facilities designed to simplify duplication, such as double-speed copying and high-speed finalisation of discs for playback in standard CD hardware.

Other features include separate analogue and digital outputs for both decks, which allows the Denon to feed two amplifiers, perhaps to play music into a couple of rooms. And like all twin-deck recorders, it's possible to load two discs and let the machine play them in sequence, or play tracks at random from both. Inputs for recording and playback are provided on optical and electrical connections, as well as analogue sockets.

All well and good, but while the Denon makes very good copies from CD to CD, and sounds impressive when an analogue input is fed in and recorded, its own playback ability is limited; in fact, it is bettered by all rivals in this group. There's a rawness to the presentation and this, together with some vagueness, means the CDR-W1500 isn't a machine you want to listen to for long. It certainly can't compete in the replay stakes with a similarly priced, playback-only CD player.

When listening to classical music you can hear a 'wash of sound' effect, which makes it hard to pick up the subtleties of the music. Rock loses impact because of hardness in the treble, lack of bass warmth and drive.

It's the kind of sound we might find acceptable from a budget CD player, but the relatively high price of the Denon makes it hard to overlook. Most people who spend this kind of money will be looking for a machine that can act as a main CD player as well as recorder, and the CDR-W1500 really doesn't justify its price. Sadly, the Denon is not the do-it-all solution it appears to be.

Pioneer PDR-609 £280 ★★★★☆

FOR
Impressive copy quality; very well built; easy to use

AGAINST
Edgy playback; challenged strongly by Sony's new machine

VERDICT
Still an impressive product, but our double Award-winner might just have met its match

RECORDERS COME AND go, but Pioneer's CD-R machines have kept on winning Awards, as you might expect from the company that, er, pioneered CD-R as a home-recording format. The PDR-509 picked up the top recorder gong, and this, its replacement, won in 2001 and 2002. The new model gained 24-bit/96kHz digital-to-analogue conversion, a result of the trend for CD hardware to adopt readily available 'made for DVD' converters rather than chipsets made specifically for CD playback. That doesn't reflect badly on Pioneer – most manufacturers are standardising on this kind of conversion these days.

Otherwise this is a completely standard CD-RW recorder, albeit one that's well put together and has a logical control layout.

It takes very little time to get the PDR-609 up and running, although, of course, you need another compact disc player to act as a source for copies. It's also possible to record from other digital sources, such as a digital radio tuner, using optical or electrical inputs, or from analogue sources – FM radio, a turntable or whatever – by hooking up the Pioneer's line in/outs to an amplifier.

You can pick up this machine for around £200, especially if you shop around online, and for that money the Pioneer's a very good system add-on. The quality of the copies it produces is excellent, which soon becomes clear when they're played in a highly revealing CD player. On the Pioneer, however, they sound rather edgy and lack bass power, and the Legato Link system seems to emphasise some treble thinness. This is a trait we've noted in past Legato-equipped players: when the system's good, it's excellent, but the results can be unpredictable, and it seems that home-cooked discs are particularly prone to problems.

However, that shouldn't detract from the Pioneer PDR-609's ability as a disc copier, even if the biggest threat to its dominance is at the top of the opposite page…

Sony RCD-W3 £250 ★★★★★

FOR
Great copies and good playback; convenience; value

AGAINST
Digital connections are optical-only; at this price, that's all

VERDICT
Sony's first consumer CD-R deck is a real cracker. The performance is good, the price is right and it's a breeze to use – excellent

SONY MAY HAVE a reputation for innovation, but it's not averse to following market trends when it makes commercial sense. Even back in the infamous days of the Betamax/VHS wars, Sony started making VHS recorders long before it gave up on its own format. In fact, production of home Betamax recorders only stopped last year – it remained popular as a professional recording format.

So the arrival of this domestic CD-RW machine, only a year after the company rolled out a higher-end deck for the Japanese market, should be seen as Sony covering all the bases – not a sign that it's given up on the ailing MiniDisc format.

And given how well-executed the RCD-W3 is, how competitively it's priced and how simple it is to use, it seems the wait has been worthwhile. This classy-looking unit could soon become the only affordable CD-RW deck to own.

Like the Denon, it's a twin-deck machine, meaning it's a doddle to make direct disc-to-disc copies – in real time or at high speed. The controls on the fascia are minimal and logically laid out, while the overall impression is of quality, precision and efficiency.

And it does just what it's meant to: not only is this a pretty respectable player for the money, it also makes copies that sound excellent, whether used on the Sony itself or a reference-quality CD player. We'd put the sound of the RCD-W3 a notch or two above the company's CDP-XE570 player, which is one of the best sub-£200 buys around: what the presentation lacks in absolute bass power or treble resolution it makes up for in the honesty and integrity of its music-making. Classical CDs sound richly enjoyable, while dance and rock tracks have excellent drive and a good deal of character.

Yes, the Sony has some limits as a player, but that doesn't stop it being an attractive, musical buy. This machine is excellent value and looks set to take the market by storm.

Yamaha CDR-HD1300E £600 ★★★★★

FOR
Flexibility, quality and the excellence of discs made with the AMQR system

AGAINST
Not cheap in the context of this group; takes some getting used to

VERDICT
This superb machine combines the benefits of high-quality CD-RW with the editing flexibility of a hard disk. It really is the best of both worlds

Everyone who's trashed a CD-R disc by making a recording mistake – at least back in the days when blanks were expensive – will have wished there was a way of editing the music and checking it was OK before burning it to a CD-R in one hit. A little over a year ago, Yamaha came up with the CDR-HD1000 which – thanks to its onboard hard disk – allowed you to do just that. That machine was extremely good, and missed out on a WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION Award only because it was being discontinued in favour of a new model; the CDR-HD1300E was first tested back in November, and it was less expensive and even better.

This machine combines a CD-RW deck with an 80GB hard drive. It can hold 120 hours of music – like the last Yamaha, this one uses no compression – which are then available for playback or editing before being stored or burnt to the CD-RW drive. Copying from CD to hard drive is possible at up to 10-times normal speed, while the burn to CD-R is at up to eight-times. However, there is another option, and this is what gives the Yamaha its quality advantage.

The Audio Master Quality Record system, as it's called, can be used only with unedited material being burned to CD-R blanks. It works by writing slightly longer pits onto the disc to improve readability. This reduces running time – you get 63 minutes on a 74-minute blank disc, for example – but it does create copies that in many cases sound even better than the original.

Spin a CD such as Murray Perahia's recent recording of Chopin Etudes and, when both are compared on the CDR-HD1300E and a couple of reference players, the copy made on the Yamaha seems to have more vitality and power than the original. It's a subtle gain, but one that's well worth having.

This machine has all the ins and outs you might want, along with a sample-rate converter. It also has a rich and detailed sound when it's just used as a player, making it a great buy.

Sony RCD-W3 ★★★★★

THERE ARE TWO winners here, one representing the budget end of the market, the other showing just what can be done with a combination of old and new technology.

The two to fall by the wayside are the Denon, which is too pricey, and the Pioneer, which has had a very good run but loses out to the Sony on convenience and value for money. Yes, you can find the PDR-609 for around £200, but we've seen the Sony for the same kind of money, so it's no contest.

The Sony wins because it not only sounds good when used as a CD player, it's also simple to use and the discs it produces are of a very high standard. It's stylish and logically laid-out, making the Pioneer and Denon look fussy. The only downside is that all its digital connections are optical, but if you're only going to use it as a machine for copying and compiling music from CD, that's hardly a drawback.

The Yamaha, meanwhile, is simply a superb machine. It plays music extremely well, whether from CD or its hard drive, and the discs it makes are excellent at standard quality, and even better when the AMQR system is employed. Add its editing options, its ability to play 120 hours of music from the hard disk, and Yamaha's refusal to use data-compression, and you're looking at the best consumer CD-RW machine in the business.

If you can afford the Yamaha, you should buy it; if not, the Sony's a very desirable recorder for sensible money.

Sharp sub/sat speaker packages £750-£1695

SO YOU WANT a home cinema system but can't stand the idea of filling the front room with big, ugly boxes? Join the club. Many argue that bulky speaker design is one of the major factors holding back the growth of home cinema; well, that along with the need to trail cables across the room to the rear speakers.

We can't do much about the cables, but we can test eight of the most stylish home cinema solutions around, from British, German and even Canadian manufacturers. Our 2002 Product of the Year, KEF's KHT2005, is in the running, but it's up against some strong new products...

A sixth Cube can be added to the Bose

A combination of simple design and striking looks

Bose Acoustimass 15 Series II

★★★★☆ £1050

FOR

Plenty of power; smooth integration; seamless soundfield

AGAINST

Some may think the sound is too unusual; lots of competition

VERDICT

The Bose's sound hangs together very well: it's much better than some would have you believe

WE WERE SURPRISED by how good the Acoustimass 15 Series II sounded when we reviewed it for the First Test section last month, but now it must square up to a wide range of very accomplished rivals. Time for pleasant surprise number two: the Bose still does rather well.

The company is reluctant to give precise specifications for its speaker systems, but it's apparent that a couple of drive units is used in each of the five Cube speakers, with their Direct/Reflecting technology designed to deliver a portion of the sound directly and bounce the rest off a side wall. The Acoustimass bass module – it supplies too much high-frequency sound to be a true subwoofer – runs three drivers in a labyrinthine enclosure. This trio of drivers is used instead of one large cone to provide air-shifting power as well as speed.

Hook-up is at speaker level: a cable plugs into a multipin connection on the sub and has six pairs of bare wires at the other end that run into your receiver's speaker terminals. There's also a phono connection for the subwoofer-out socket on the receiver. Six phono sockets on the Acoustimass connect to the satellite speakers via cables provided: a sixth Cube speaker is available as an option for 6.1 systems.

The Bose is very good in home cinema mode, even if the sound takes some getting used to with multichannel music. Its strength is the way the diffuse soundfield produced by those Direct/Reflecting speakers envelops the listener seamlessly; the trade-off is a slight lack of pinpoint effects imaging. However, whether watching big action movies like Men in Black II or dialogue-heavy dramas, the Bose system soon becomes very enjoyable. The way it delivers thrills without filling the room with boxes is its most obvious appeal.

With music its failings are a slight lack of treble sparkle and ambience, whether with multichannel SACD or stereo CDs processed with Dolby Pro Logic II. But voices and instruments remain crisp and detailed, so few users will find too much to complain about. Yes, you could get a better sound by filling the room with large speakers, but then that's hardly the point.

★★★★★ £850

FOR

Style; power; flexibility; a superbly coherent sound

AGAINST

Speakers rather tall on their stands; simplistic subwoofer design

VERDICT

A great 'designer' system from B&W that sounds very good indeed

THIS STRIKING SYSTEM is bang on the money when it comes to hi-tech design, and it also has the sonic performance to ensure its success. Even better is the reasonable price: individual VM 1 speakers are just £125, while the dedicated AS 1 subwoofer is a very affordable £225. Put that together and you have a price of £850, with the tall aluminium stands for the VM1s costing an extra £150 a pair.

The VM1s come with both wall brackets and table stands. These slip into grooves on the rear of the speakers arranged to allow either vertical or horizontal mounting. It's a neat idea, meaning the centre speaker can be used as a horizontal bar atop the television – where it looks very good. However, the speakers tend to loom a little when used vertically on their stands.

But they do sound good: these are two-way units, packing a 25mm tweeter and a 12.5cm mid/bass unit, and using B&W's usual dimpled port on the rear to tune the bass. Partnering them is the simple but effective AS1 subwoofer, which has an 85w power amp and a single 16.5cm bass unit – again with that dimpled port – but minimal controls. For example, there's just a level control and a music/movies mode switch, so all the control of crossover frequency needs to be done in your receiver's set-up.

The system may be simple but it works startlingly well, whether with music or DVD films. It can go loud without any hardness setting in, and while it hasn't quite got the full-blooded richness of a bigger – and much more expensive – set-up, it delivers dialogue very clearly and successfully wraps the listener in sound. The speakers are designed for wide horizontal dispersion, and they succeed in producing a rear-channel spread that'll make you wonder whether you need a sixth speaker back there. The relatively narrow vertical dispersion means the centre speaker has a tight focus when used in a horizontal layout.

The result is a surround system that's exciting and capable of serious thump – qualities that are just as well adapted to music as they are to movies. This is one of B&W's most striking products of recent times and sets new standards in the 'designer' speaker field.

The Elacs look lovely but are a poor listen

Elac Cinema 3 ESP

★★★☆☆ £1000

FOR

Compact, sleek and beautifully made; good weight to the sound

AGAINST

Can sound bright and shouty; bass is slow; expensive

VERDICT

This is a case of 'nice idea, but...': the Elacs promise much but fail to deliver the performance their price demands

THIS IS A seriously classy-looking system, thanks in no small part to the extruded aluminium casework of the 301 satellite speakers and the shining drive units of the woofers, which are of a fibre/aluminium-sandwich design. The five matching speakers are tiny – just 12cm tall – but reassuringly chunky at 1.2kg apiece, and their feel of quality extends to the well-designed wall-brackets provided. There are good, substantial terminals on the rear of the speakers, for which slim floor-stands are available. Oh, and if you're not sold on the naked aluminium look, black is an option.

However, this does mean the SUB 301 ESP subwoofer feels a bit lightweight, even if its drive unit is another aluminium-sandwich cone, this time 18cm. The usual suite of inputs and outputs are provided, and the sub uses Elac's proprietary ESP system – we always suspect the initials come first, then the explanation – which is an 'electronic stabilising program' designed to prevent the sub from being overdriven. Most subwoofers have some sort of protection like this.

With the speakers hooked up to our AV system, as usual running the subwoofer at preout level and with roll-off set to 120Hz – the 301s are designed to deliver nothing below 100Hz – we were hoping for a real star turn given that the company's little Cinema 1 ESP was given Best Buy status in our 2002 Awards. Unfortunately, as you may have read in First Tests last month, while the Elac package is good it can't justify its price disadvantage against the likes of the KEF KHT2005.

Yes, the bass from the relatively compact sub is big and initially impressive when playing action sequences, but it's also slow and boomy, a trait that becomes clearer with music. The midrange is warm, leading to some loss of character in voices and solo instruments, and the upper frequencies are bright, becoming more so at higher levels.

It's a bit of a hotch-potch, this package. It's dangerously near to the old caricature of the German speaker sound – all boom and tizz – which means it's a fatiguing listen at odds with the cool, crisp styling of the little speakers. You can do much better for this kind of money.

★★★☆☆ £750

FOR

Excellent clarity; compact speaker design; sensible price

AGAINST

Lack of all-out welly – sounds a bit restrained and thin

VERDICT

The Energy system is compact and good-looking but it's outgunned by some similarly priced packages

THIS IS THE first of two packages in this test from the Toronto-based API group, and it's considerably more conventional than the same outfit's radical Mirage Omnisats. What we have here is four of Energy's little two-way Take 2.2 satellites plus a single Take 1.2 centre speaker and the S8.2 active sub.

The set-up follows the established pattern of having similar technology in the main and centre speakers but a different layout. The Take 2.2s have a normal vertical layout, with a 25mm metal-dome tweeter and a 9cm long-throw polymer/aluminium-coned mid/bass unit driven by a hefty magnet; a small front-venting port tunes the bass, and wall-brackets are provided as standard. The centre speaker adopts a horizontal layout, with twin mid/bass drivers and twin ports. The cabinets are made of MDF, with moulded front baffles and slightly cheap-feeling grilles.

The subwoofer uses a single 20cm drive unit of the same construction as the little speakers' mid/bass drivers, tuned with a front-venting port. Although both high- and low-level inputs and outputs are on the rear, level and low-pass filter controls are on the front, along with an audio/video switch. Unfortunately there are no markings on the level controls to help set-up, and though the mode switch gives more thump when in its video position, it does make the sub sound a little slow.

In use, the Energy system is reasonable, if unspectacular, and challenged by several similarly priced rivals in this test. There's good midband clarity, making voices easy to follow and creating reasonable ambience, but the lack of clout in the bass means big action movies are less thrilling than they could be. The 'Jeff' sequence from Men in Black II lacks thunder and rumble, and sounds over-bright. The same is true when you play driving rock music, whether sourced from multichannel SACD or processed using Dolby Pro-Logic II.

And that's the trouble: while the Energy package sounds cohesive enough, it never quite stops sounding small. The B&W and KEF systems in this test, which sell for not much more, are substantially better buys.

So close, but a midband flaw weakens the Sibs

Need we say any more about the awesome KEFS

Focal JMlab Sib & Cub

★★★★☆ £859

FOR

Style by the bucketload; impressive power and drive

AGAINST

A bit chesty with voices and instruments; tough competition

VERDICT

The Sibs and Cub have a great deal to offer but aren't as impressive as the best set-ups in this test

FANCY AN OUTDOOR cinema set-up? You could just about do it with this system from drive-unit supremo Focal because the stylish Sib speakers are splashproof. Oh well, at least that should make them party-proof, or allow their use in humid, steamy locations such as the kitchen, bathroom or maybe even the bedroom.

The curvaceous housing of the speakers is made from ABS plastic, a material that's known to reduce internal resonances, and there's a foot/wall bracket attachment. Of course, the drivers are Focal's own – a 19mm metallised plastic dome for the tweeter and an 11cm synthetic cone – and the same is true of the Cub sub, which uses a downward-firing 20cm unit, tuned with a forward-vented port. The power here comes from a 75w internal amp, and the cabinet is made from MDF and is about the same size as that of the MJ Acoustics Pro 50. The usual array of stereo line-ins plus speaker-level inputs and outputs are provided. Beside the innovative Sibs, which even have moulded bracing within their cabinets, the Cub is conventional but nicely screwed and glued together.

As soon as you fire it up it becomes clear that there's more to this system than just gimmicks. The sound is fast and dynamic, with plenty of punch and drive whether handling action-movie soundtracks or bass-driven music – Sibs and Cubs and rock'n'roll, anyone? The system also has an open, airy presentation in the high treble, which results in an excellent sense of ambience with multichannel SACD or DVD-A. The subwoofer is particularly impressive and slots in neatly while the main speakers roll off around 75kHz. If you're a fan of action movies played at full pelt then you won't go far wrong unless your room is massive.

In fact, were it not for a nasty, chesty coloration in the midband – which can occasionally make low-level dialogue tricky to follow and singing voices sound overly thick – the Sib/Cub system would be knocking on the door of greatness. As it is, it's just good, but some way off being a class-leader – perhaps a dedicated centre speaker would improve things?

★★★★★ £800

FOR

Style and build quality; excellent sound from speakers so small

AGAINST

A little thick-sounding compared with the very best in this test

VERDICT

The KEFs have dominated this market sector for a very long time, but they may have met their match

IT'S HARD NOT to like KEF's egg-shaped HTS2001 speakers. Thanks to their cast-aluminium casework they look and feel cool, as well as being chunky at 2kg apiece, while their metal foot/bracket provides a range of mounting options. The use of the company's Uni-Q driver technology, in which the 12mm tweeter is mounted in the throat of the 10cm mid/bass unit, promises fine integration across the frequency range, not to mention enhanced imaging. A front-venting port tunes and boosts the bass, and good terminals on the rear accept thick cables or even banana plugs. Like other systems here, the KHT2005 can be upgraded to six or seven channels with the addition of extra 'eggs' at £100 apiece.

Similar terminals on the sub accept high-level inputs, with matching outputs provided should you want to use a two-channel version of the system with stereo amplification. There are also line-ins and outs so the sub can be used between a preamp and power amp.

We encountered one strange problem with the KEFs – the speaker we'd parked atop our Sony TV to carry the centre channel reacted badly to the screen's static electricity when the set was powered up. We actually saw an arc of electricity between the speaker's foot and enclosure, and our reference TAG McLaren Audio system muted, only coming back on after we'd turned off the processor and power amp, waited a few moments, and then switched them on again. Curious...

That aside – and it's probably just a quirk of this particular combination – the KEFs were as good as ever and capable of captivating results. The speakers offer pinpoint steering of effects, if not the most homogenous 360° soundfield, and are as expressive with music as they are with big DVD soundtracks. There's fine bass punch, and the satellites integrate well with the sub, but there's a very slight thickness in the upper midband/lower treble that can emphasise sibilance.

But let's get this into perspective: for small rooms where an all-but-invisible system – or at least one that makes a positive design statement – is required, the KEF KHT2005 set-up is extremely good.

The Omnisats are a great idea but can sound vague

Solid, but more exciting choices are available

Mirage Omnisats/OM200

★★★★☆ £1695

FOR

Better bass than the standard Omnisat 5.1 package; wide, spacious and enveloping soundfield

AGAINST

Lack of focus compared with standard speakers; far from cheap

VERDICT

Yes, the new subwoofer makes a big difference to this package, but it does create a much more expensive set-up

THE MIRAGE OMNISAT concept should be familiar by now – it's five months since we first looked at the Canadian speakers with their angled, upward-firing drivers, designed to spread sound in an omnidirectional pattern. It's a fascinating idea, and while the speakers look odd, and will sound so to some listeners, they definitely work.

Rather like the Bose Direct/Reflecting system, some acclimatisation from the listener is required because of the Omnisats' dispersion pattern. The design means they cast a soundstage above and behind the speakers, so they could either be used on the optional low stands or even on the floor. Or, if you need to mount them up high they could be used upside down on the ceiling. But wherever you put them the effect is one of seamless integration and fine imaging, even though it's a little odd not to be hearing sound from any of the speakers directly.

This is a two-way design, with a 25mm tweeter and an 11.4cm mid/bass unit, and as a result is capable of an excellent rendition of vocal and instrumental timbres, whether with dialogue, sound effects or multichannel music. But if there was a failing with the first Omnisat system we tested it was in the bass, a matter Mirage has addressed with the inclusion here of the OM-200 'Omnipolar' subwoofer. This uses a 200w amp and a pair of horizontally opposed 20cm bass drivers, each with its own port. The result is more bass – those twin drivers really shift air in the big scenes of Men in Black II – and less localised low stuff. There's plenty of punch and less boom compared with the original Omnisat set-up.

The Mirage package is just as effective with multichannel music, even if the lack of pinpoint imaging takes a little getting used to. What the Omnisats do well is surround you with a wash of sound, which is fine when the music is mixed to be heard on this kind of speaker, but can sound vague.

We like the Omnisat concept, and feel this package has real benefits for home cinema applications, but given the cost of some classy rivals it does look rather pricey – it seems you have to pay for innovation.

MJ Acoustics Pro-Cinema 1/Pro 50

★★★★☆ from £799

FOR

A fine subwoofer matched with good satellite speakers

AGAINST

Too warm for some listeners; strong competition

VERDICT

Not the most zinging system around, but a smooth, enjoyable set-up for movies and music

MJ ACOUSTICS IS a relatively young company best known for its subwoofers. Its original product, the Pro 50, is the holder of a 2002 Best Buy Award, and it has now developed a whole range of models, from the tiny to the massive. But unlike some sub specialists, MJ wasn't content to see its products used with other manufacturers' speakers, so it created the little Pro Cinema 15.

There's something traditional about these speakers: they eschew hi-tech driver and cabinet materials in favour of a 25mm soft-dome tweeter and 10cm paper-cone mid/bass unit housed in a sealed 23cm-tall box of 15mm MDF. There's even a wood-veneer finish to match the same subwoofer option (the package as tested sells for £979). If you want to save almost £200, the whole set-up is available in basic black or metallic silver for just £799.

The Pro 50 shouldn't need much of an introduction. This demon little subwoofer – a 30cm cube – combines a 50w power amp and a 20cm long-throw drive unit, and is capable of prodigious bass for so small an enclosure. It's tempting to see it as an option for the smaller room, but the Pro 50 delivers much more than that: even in large spaces its fast, tuneful low-end reinforcement is appreciable.

As a package, the MJs are deft and hard-hitting, although those who like their home cinema really upfront and no-holds-barred may find the overall balance a little too warm and refined. However, this system has subtlety on its side, and will tame the bright balance of many a low-priced AV receiver.

They can belt out action-movie soundtracks in a manner that's more about enveloping the listener in an effective soundfield than zinging effects from speaker to speaker. This balance is also advantageous when multichannel music is on the menu, from the SACD Frankie Goes to Hollywood collection to the excellent Teldec Bach St Matthew Passion on DVD-A (yes, an impressive DVD-A release!).

There are other speaker packages in this Supertest that offer more all-out thrills for this kind of money, but if you're looking to take the smooth option the MJs are well worth a listen.

What our testers said...

"I love packages like these, which is why I'd like to see more of them. An £800 sub/sat package works best with a receiver in the £450 bracket like the Yamaha RX-V630RDS. But it would be good to see more sub/sat packages in the £1500-£2000 bracket to go with the likes of Sony's STR-VA555ES."

"Our Award-winning KEFs have finally met their match in the form of the B&Ws – but the distinctive 'eggs' remain a superb option. In fact that's the great thing about our recent tests of sub/sat speaker packages – there's a size, style and price to suit just about every room, taste and budget."

Clare Newsome
Managing Editor

"Think very carefully about where you plan to place the speakers. First you should consider the room's furnishings and dimensions and only then should you demo possible purchases. To obtain the very best results from your system, read the manual carefully and adjust the settings correctly – a sound meter is a wise investment."

Murdo Mathewson
Staff Writer

"No longer does style have to mean poor sound quality. There are a couple of designs here that not only look extremely smart, and will actually fit an average-size living room, but sound great, too. And if you've invested in a home cinema amp with extended surround sound, you can upgrade some of these packages with a sixth speaker."

Tricky terms explained

Crossover The key to creating an integrated sound balance is to use the crossover control to determine the amount of work that the subwoofer does. Check your manual to find the 'low-frequency cut-off' of your main loudspeakers – say, 80Hz – and then adjust the crossover point on the subwoofer to a figure slightly above that number. That way, the subwoofer will slowly begin to do its work as the speakers begin to kick into life. However, if you're using these speakers with a surround receiver, you might find that this is unnecessary: electronic crossovers built into most receivers can be used to bypass the crossover in the subwoofer.

Dolby Digital Surround EX Development of Dolby Digital 5.1 that includes a 'matrixed' centre-rear audio signal to provide additional surround envelopment.

DTS Discrete 5.1 channel home cinema sound system – rival to Dolby Digital with higher bit-rate.

DTS-ES Matrix 6.1 Variation on the Dolby Digital Surround EX theme; offers similar results with an additional centre-rear audio signal.

Gain A fancy way of saying 'volume'. An active subwoofer has an internal power amplifier to drive it directly, so turn up the gain to make the subwoofer louder. With most modern surround receivers you'll find that a dedicated test-tone control is available, along with individual channel-level adjustment, that allows you to electronically tweak the sub to your tastes. With that in mind, you may find that all you need to do is set the volume level to the 11 o'clock position (roughly) and then let your fingers do the tweaking via a remote.

Impedance Electrical property. A low impedance draws a high current from the source component, while a high impedance draws a little. Speakers with a low impedance are more difficult for an amplifier to drive, while a high impedance is easier.

Phase A sub can go anywhere in your room, and the phase control can be used to help it integrate into your room more effectively. If you can hear exactly where the bass is coming from, the phase control can compensate. As a rough guide, try inverting the phase if the subwoofer is behind you, and leaving it in phase if it's in front of you.

Satellite A small speaker used in systems such as these for front, rear and centre sound effects.

Sensitivity The sound pressure level the speaker will produce for 1w (or 2.83v), when the measurement is taken one metre from the speaker.

Subwoofer A separate woofer box designed to produce the deep bass notes that smaller satellite speakers aren't able to reach.

THE OVERALL WINNER

★★★★★ £850

IN GENERAL TERMS the sub/sat speaker packages in this test were hugely impressive, and really showed that you don't have to compromise on sound to get the style. And nowhere is that more true than with our current Product of the Year, KEF's KHT2005 system. It's been on the market for a couple of years, and while it was radical when it was launched, it's now more of a benchmark for many similar systems, a role it still fills exceptionally well. The aesthetics are classic, and the performance still shines.

The MJ Acoustics package is more conventional but delivers a highly credible sound and is particularly well-suited to multichannel music. The Mirage Omnisat system has a unique sound, and one that's hard not to enjoy once you get used to it. But it is expensive in this company.

The Bose Acoustimass 15 MkII defies those who traditionally dismiss the company's products as overpriced and not very good: for an all-enveloping surround experience, the Bose Cube set-up takes some beating.

However, it's the new B&W VM1/AS1 system that takes top honours, simply because it offers the best of all worlds. There's that same well-integrated soundfield along with excellent localisation of effects, and while the 'satellites' are the largest in this group, that pays off in a full, rich but highly detailed sound, as strong with music as it is with movie soundtracks, and particularly good with voices. Dialogue is clear, music sounds fine and those explosions will rock your lounge, despite the relative simplicity of the subwoofer. What more could you want?

SYSTEM PRICE £2160

ONE OF THE major appeals of the B&W system is that it's so easy to drive: thanks to higher-than-average 91dB/w/m sensitivity and an undemanding 8 ohm impedance, the VM 1 speakers don't need huge amounts of power to get them moving. That results in an effortless sound, even at the kind of high levels at which action movies are best enjoyed. Just about any AV receiver on the market will drive them extremely well, but for this system we've chosen a receiver with a bit more clout.

The Yamaha has a healthy 75w on offer to each of its six channels, and uses the company's tried-and-tested Top-ART design philosophy, which majors on maximum digital quality and minimum analogue circuitry.

Yes, this is a 6.1-channel unit, handling Dolby Digital EX and both Matrix and Discrete versions of the DTS 6.1 format, but you can just as easily start by using it as a 5.1 system, as we have here, and upgrade later. All you need do is add another B&W VM 1 and its attendant speaker cabling – say about another £200.

As a source we've chosen Pioneer's Award-winning DV-656A, combining excellent DVD-Video performance with fine DVD-Audio and Super Audio CD playback. And for the vision we've added Toshiba's Award-winning 32ZD26P 32in widescreen TV.

With the whole system wired up and fired up, the immediate impression is of scale, power and detail. From those zinging, pounding movies we've already mentioned to multichannel music such as the full-on Frankie Goes to Hollywood SACD or the fine Teldec Bach St Matthew Passion on DVD-A, this is a very accomplished system. It imposes very little of its own character on what's being played and, aside from a little thickness in the low treble, sounds crisp and atmospheric. Driven by the slightly warm Yamaha, the B&Ws' abilities are maximised, allowing them to envelop you in the sound and simultaneously startle you with their well-focused effects.

This system is fast, agile and musical, as well as able to turn on the thunder when required. It has subtlety and clout, proving that the B&Ws' striking looks are more about audio engineering than over-exuberance on the part of the design department. This is true home cinema with style.

Super-slim LCD TVs are all the rage, and while they look groovy, they have price tags to match their high-tech status. So do they justify the money?

JUST LOOK AT the TVs on this page. Gorgeous, aren't they? Sleek, slimline slices of high-tech desirability – statement pieces that show off your cutting-edge, techno-cool lifestyle. Or alternatively vastly overpriced portable tellies that shout 'I've got more money than sense'.

Let's deal with a few facts. You can buy a 32in Toshiba TV, our Award-winning widescreen set of last year, for less than Samsung will ask for its 17in LCD portable. Alternatively, you could buy seven or eight conventional 14in portables – less sexy, but undoubtedly better value.

So what exactly is the point of these models? Simple: style. The LCD TV occupies the minimum possible space, and can be hung from the wall, if you like, much like a plasma display. And for many, that's a price worth paying, especially in a cluttered, space-hungry environment like a kitchen or bedroom. Get ready to drool...

Don't even think about it

THE LG HAS the distinction of being the most-affordable LCDTV in this test – and by some considerable margin at that – but let's get some perspective here: £500 is still a lot of money for a 15in portable. It's also a lot of money for something that, to be frank, just doesn't cut the mustard.

Let's start with the plus points: the LG looks brilliant; it's slick, the silver finish is classy and there's a decent array of sockets, including a RGB-compatible Scart input for connection to your DVD player. And now the bad points: the picture is awful, with virtually no contrast, off-axis problems that ensure the image almost disappears if you move around the room, and colour realism that borders on the cartoonish. There's no widescreen option, so you'll have to select a 4:3 letterbox mode on your DVD player and set-top box, assuming you intend to use such niceties. Oh, and any fast motion that whizzes across the screen is accompanied by a horrible digital 'vapour trail'. Not good.

Throw in spectacularly tinny sound, which somehow manages to eliminate virtually any trace of bass, and you've a nice-looking television that makes no sense whatsoever. We'd advise you to either bite the bullet and spend twice as much on a rival model that actually produces a decent image, or save a fortune and buy a regular portable.

Panasonic TX-15LT2

VERDICT
Excellent combination of performance and style. An utterly desirable set

PANASONIC HAS AN enviable reputation for TV design, but even so we were surprised just how good the TX-15LT2 is. There's no point beating about the bush: this is the set we'd buy. Of the contenders here, it's the only one we'd even consider, and there's a simple reason: it's the only one that delivers a genuinely good picture. The Panasonic has all the comforting and familiar assets of a conventional TV, producing a picture with contrast, three-dimensionality and realistic colours, and you can even watch it when you get up and walk around the room. Considering that on many LCDs any semblance of contrast virtually disappears the minute you stray half an inch 'off-axis', that's a spectacular achievement.

Just in case you need any more convincing, consider this: the Panasonic's true 16:9 shape makes it suitable for watching DVDs, the styling is truly gorgeous, the remote control and on-screen graphics are lifted directly from the company's mainstream TVs (and are therefore superior to those of any rival here), and the set takes up the smallest footprint.

Sold? Well, of course, we can't let this one go without mentioning that £1150 is a heck of a lot for a 15in portable, but if you must have an LCD telly, buy one of these. It's a stunning piece of kit.

Samsung LW17N13W

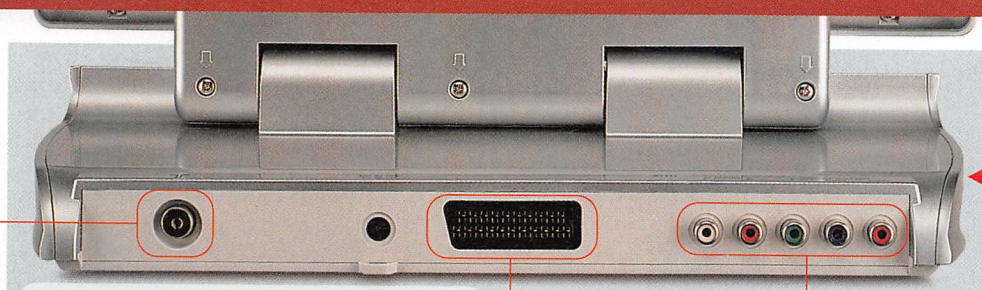
£1700 ★★☆☆☆

FOR
Widescreen shape; good array of sockets
AGAINST
Picture lacks crispness, sharpness and three-dimensionality; pricey
VERDICT
Distinctly average and not cheap

YOU'VE PROBABLY SEEN this Samsung advertised by now: the firm seems terribly proud of its new LCD widescreen range, and the LW17N13W is undeniably a thing of beauty. The first and most obvious virtue is the widescreen-display shape, which has obvious benefits when watching either DVDs or off-air video via a digital set-top box. You'll also find extensive inputs on the Samsung's bulkier chassis, which includes twin Scarts (rather than the standard single item sported by most rivals) and full AV inputs for camcorders or games consoles.

Downsides? The chassis seems deeper and more curvaceous than that of many rivals, and the price is steep: you're paying a hefty premium over the Panasonic for the privilege of an extra two inches of screen.

So, is it worth it? No, in a word. In fact, the Samsung is almost as bad as the LG for its lack of sharpness, and while you can actually watch the picture if you're sitting to one side of the screen (which is more than can be said for some rivals), the resulting image is not exactly what we'd call 'good'. The sound is a little better – the Samsung actually has some bass presence – but for £1700 you've a right to expect something truly impressive. For us, the LW17N13W just doesn't have what it takes.



Getting connected

Aerial
Plug your roof aerial in here. These sets have good-quality analogue tuners built-in, but a roof aerial is still essential to get top-notch reception. If you don't have one, get a good model installed for under £100.

RGB Scart
This single socket carries both picture and sound in high-quality form, and can be used to connect the set directly to a DVD player, or to an external set-top-box decoder for digital TV. Use a good-quality Scart cable.

Component-video inputs
Found on all-too-few LCDs (or indeed, TVs) these video inputs provide exceptional picture performance potential, but you'll need a DVD player with component-video output sockets to make the most of them.

AV inputs
Normally located on the front or side of the set, these are for use with camcorders or games consoles such as PlayStation 2. Ideally, you should find composite and S-Video inputs here, as well as stereo-phono sockets.

Wall-mount bracket
While many LCD TVs can be mounted on the wall, few offer a bracket as standard. Vogel's EFW1005/S wall bracket will handle any LCD set up to 30in and costs £100. Contact BBG on 020 8863 9117.

Sharp LC-20B2EA

£1800 ★★☆☆☆

FOR
Big (if 4:3) screen; decent sound

AGAINST
Picture lacks contrast, black depth and a sense of three-dimensionality

VERDICT
Sharp proves that big isn't always better

SHARP HAS BEEN in the old LCD game for some time – well, longer than most rivals, anyway – so we switched on the LC-20B2EA with some sense of expectation. It's a shame, then, that our hopes were to be so comprehensively dashed.

The Sharp is certainly a stylish set, and the merits of a 20in screen (even if it is 4:3 rather than widescreen) are undeniable, but it just lacks contrast. Tweak away using the fine remote-control handset, and you can improve things a bit, but only at the expense of video dynamic range. Adjust the black level so that blacks actually look black and the three-dimensionality of the picture virtually disappears. Boost the brightness and contrast so that you can see what's going on and, hey presto, all the blacks look grey. Oh, and don't even think about straying off-axis while you're watching. What contrast there is will disappear almost immediately.

On a more positive note, the sound quality is a notch up on most rivals, thanks to substantial speakers flanking the screen, while colour rendition – so long as you stay on-axis – is solid and vivid. But the Panasonic is vastly superior, and if you want a larger-screen set the TX-15LT2 has a 22in big brother that we suspect would trounce the Sharp every bit as comprehensively.

Looks good...

AGAINST
...until you turn it on

VERDICT
Not especially enticing

ON FIRST INSPECTION, the Toshiba certainly looks the part: the lower end of the main unit is designed to function as a stand, and includes an ample array of input sockets and integral speakers, leaving the slimline screen on a simple pivot above it. The Toshiba also tempts because it has component-video inputs for direct connection to a similarly equipped DVD player, coupled with a corresponding set of analogue inputs. This means the Toshiba has the best on-paper potential of all the LCD TVs here for DVD viewing.

However, potential is one thing and delivery quite another. Sadly, the Toshiba just doesn't have that good a picture. Fed from an aerial, off-axis contrast isn't bad – well, it's better than the Sharp's at any rate – but for colour accuracy, three-dimensionality and black depth, the Toshiba is put firmly in its place by the best in this class.

Switch to DVD and the picture gains a welcome air of refinement, although there's no hint of a 16:9 mode, and surprisingly, the component sockets don't accept progressive-scan video, either in NTSC or PAL form. So there's no chance of a better picture from a progressive-scan DVD player.

Add a sound that's basically tinny, and you've got a fairly average component. That's not something we say about Toshiba kit very often, but it was bound to happen sometime.

Panasonic TX-15LT2 ★★★★★

SOMETIMES, FINAL VICTORY in a group test can be a tough call, with several five-star contenders slugging it out for top honours – but that clearly isn't the case here. The fact is we've been thoroughly underwhelmed by most of the LCD TVs that we've reviewed to date, and what we've seen in this test has done little to change that opinion. They simply cost too much.

OK, fair cop: the same was once true of the plasma display, but plasmas are getting better and becoming more affordable with each passing month, so much so that you can almost begin to view a plasma as a rational, rather than emotional, purchase. Around £3000 for a 42in screen is beginning to look reasonable.

By contrast, even our winning LCD set, the Panasonic TX-15LT2, makes no rational sense: while it actually performs well (which, as should be clear, is more than you can say for most LCDs), it's still far too expensive for the size of screen it gives you. No, the Panasonic only really begins to earn its spurs as a trinket, an expensive adornment to a relatively wealthy person's bedroom, kitchen or study; in other words, in areas where space is a vital consideration and cost not an issue.

Having said that, at least the Panasonic performs well enough to convince us that the LCD concept as a whole has potential, and we'd expect prices to fall over time, just as they have with plasmas. If, a couple of generations down the line, the market is awash with £400 widescreen models from the big brands, don't be too surprised. ■

New age jukeboxes

Music on the move has never been more flexible, thanks to the latest breed of digital jukeboxes

ONCE UPON A time, if you'd wanted to take a selection of several thousands of songs to play on the move you'd need a suitcase to carry all the discs or tapes. These days all it takes is a pocket-sized portable music library – the digital jukebox.

The average digital jukebox has a 20GB capacity – enough to hold 333 hours (or around 5000 tracks) of music recorded in acceptable-quality 128kbps MP3 format. Accompanying PC and/or Mac software lets you 'rip' tracks from audio CDs into digital files, as well as create customised playlists, to transfer onto the jukebox. The latter is achieved by hooking the jukebox up to your computer's USB or FireWire port – the FireWire is preferable because you'll be able to download your tunes at up to 10 times the speed.

The latest models tested here have new features including larger capacities, the ability to simultaneously recharge the player's battery as you transfer files, and software that monitors your musical taste. But which are the jukebox hits and misses?

Apple i-Pod | £329 | ★★★★☆

FOR

Ultra-slim, stylish design; in-line remote; easy to use; PC and Mac models available; great sound

AGAINST

No USB support – your PC or Mac must have a FireWire port; price

VERDICT

If style and ease of use are your jukebox priorities, look no further than the Apple i-Pod, but there are better sound-per-pound options available

WHEN WE REVIEWED the first, Mac-only iteration of the i-Pod last year, we were blown away by its style and usability, but felt it could do with a more powerful sound.

Since then Apple has upgraded the Mac version and added (gasp!) a PC version, with both flavours available with 5-, 10- and 20GB hard drives. We tested the 10GB PC i-Pod, which comes with the decent Musicmatch Jukebox Plus software suite – a good substitution for Apple's own i-Tunes 3 program that comes with the Mac version, though one that only works with the latest versions of Windows.

New features include a neat in-line remote – with basic playback controls – plus improved in-ear headphones and a protective cover for the i-Pod's FireWire port. The port allows fast file transfers and simultaneous battery charging, but as before there's no supporting USB option for users of older computers.

Otherwise the i-Pod retains its unique look and feel: the combination of its large display, good software and intuitive scroll-wheel make it a joy to use (especially when you add the pose factor of that desirable design!)

But enough of the stunning ergonomics: how does the i-Pod sound? Well, it's certainly beefier than the original model, offering more volume potential and a bigger bass to underpin its generally crisp, lively delivery. The in-ear headphones impress, too. However, despite all these upgrades the i-Pod still can't quite match the Creative Jukebox 3 for either detail or depth of bass.

And there you hit the dilemma – is style or value your portable jukebox priority? A 20GB i-Pod costs £400 – £100 more than the Jukebox 3. But then the Apple option is so much smaller and desirable, not to mention easier to use. You pays your money...

The i-Pod is by far the most stylish jukebox available

The Jukebox 2 has a fairly small display

FOR

Price; decent sound

AGAINST

PC-only at present; no FireWire transfer option; clumsy controls

VERDICT

If you can only afford a cut-price jukebox, this Creative is ideal – but £100 extra will buy you considerably better performance

ANOTHER MAJOR ADVANCE in the digital jukebox world has been the fall of prices. Creative's Jukebox 2 provides a new entry level to the sector, yet on paper offers plenty for its £200 list price. There's 10GB of storage space – enough for almost seven days of continuous music playback – connectivity via the faster, 2.0 version of USB (though no FireWire support), a generous 16-hour battery life and a pocketable weight. Another plus is Creative's easy-to-use PlayCenter software, which makes it simple to create custom music mixes and transfer them from your PC.

Outwardly the Creative Jukebox 2 looks like its Jukebox 3 big brother (tested opposite), but examine it more closely and you can see where the cost savings have been made. The display is smaller and there are no line-in or out options, merely a headphone socket – but then you could level that charge at most of the jukeboxes here.

Of more concern is the build quality: the Jukebox 2's casing feels less sturdy, with lightweight buttons and a stubborn scroll wheel that has none of the smoothness of that of its pricier Zen and Jukebox 3 siblings.

The Jukebox 2's sound is of a similarly lighter weight – although neither a harsh nor horrible performer, music simply sounds less detailed and dramatic than on the best players here, compounding the compressed nature of the MP3 format. The lack of bass weight is the most noticeable factor, with dance mixes from Apollo Four Forty and Basement Jaxx robbed of their potential.

If £200 is all you can afford to spend on a digital jukebox, this Creative is a reasonable offering, but if you save up a while you'll be able to splash out on the far more sophisticated 5GB Apple i-Pod (£259) or the class-leading Jukebox 3 (£300).

Creative Jukebox 3 | £300 | ★★★★★

FOR

Rich sound; superb battery life; lots of connectivity and recording options

AGAINST

PC-only at present; fairly bulky design

VERDICT

Our Award winner retains its crown by virtue of its superior sound and unrivalled flexibility

A RECENT £50 price cut has made our 2002 Award winner look like even more of a bargain, but with more competition than ever – most noticeably from sleeker rivals – is the Creative 3 still the jukebox king?

It's certainly kingsize – after the palm-sized i-Pod and Zen portables the Jukebox 3 seems like an unwieldy monster, but that added bulk means room for lots of extra features. For example, there are two rechargeable battery slots – the standard battery lasts up to 11 hours, with an optional second cell (£40) giving you almost a day of playback power.

In addition to the headphone socket (including support for an in-line remote option, see p83), the Jukebox 3 has two line-out sockets. Hook it up to your hi-fi and you get a surprisingly powerful sound. Optical and analogue line-ins mean you can bypass your PC and record direct from a source, though you'll need to return to your PC at some stage to rename these recordings, unless you're happy with a lot of "Track 1, Track 2" type entries in your music library.

The bundled PlayCenter software makes it easy to create playlists and transfer tracks (via USB or FireWire) to the Jukebox 3, though the unit's own interface – involving several buttons and a scroll wheel – can take some time to master.

But it's in action that the Jukebox 3 really impresses. Whether using the supplied, good-quality headphones, our reference Grados, or hooked up to a hi-fi, the Creative really belts out the tunes. Within the limitations of the MP3 format it delivers a detailed sound with bags of bass, making it as at home with Jools Holland's big band as Basement Jaxx's big beats.

Bulky the Creative 3 Jukebox may be, but it delivers a heavyweight sound that its rivals still can't match, and offers line-out and direct recording options that give it potential beyond a standalone portable player.

The Jukebox 3 remains the class-leading player

Creative Zen | £329 | ★★★★☆

FOR

Compact design; great sound; battery charging via USB port

AGAINST

PC-only at present; not as sleek as its main i-Pod rival

VERDICT

At last, a pocketable Creative Jukebox. The well-specified Zen offers the performance, if not the style, to match its Apple competitor

MOTIVATED BY CRITICISM of the relatively bulky, portable-CD-player look of its earlier Jukeboxes – not to mention the superb sales figures of the sleek Apple i-Pod – Creative has responded with the more i-Pod-like Zen. Ironically, however, more than one person who spotted this tester using it mistook the latest Jukebox for a cassette player...

As well as aping the Apple i-Pod's dimensions, the Creative Zen also adopts its handy ability to recharge via your PC when it's transferring files – though bizarrely this only works when you're hooked up using the slower USB connection, not the much faster FireWire option.

Under the skin, however, the Zen shows its Creative family values. There's the intuitive PlayCenter software, the rather clumsy if effective button/scroll-wheel navigation system, good-quality headphones and a decent battery life. At present the Zen is PC only, but Mac drivers are planned.

There are a couple of key areas where cutting the Zen down to size has meant sacrifices. First, the customary line-in/out Creative Jukebox connectivity has been ditched, so there's no direct-recording potential, and the headphone socket is your only line-out option.

More crucially, the Zen can't match the big-bass delivery of the Jukebox 3. Otherwise the sound is impressive, with plenty of detail and dynamics and no harshness, even with pop pap.

If it weren't for the heavyweight presence of Creative's Jukebox 3, this test would be a straight style vs value fight between the i-Pod and the Zen – the Zen can't match the i-Pod for style or ease of operation, but it equals it for performance and offers twice the storage capacity at the same price. Another sound or style quandary...

Neo Pocket Mini 25 £329 ★★★☆☆

FOR

Large capacity; PC and Mac support; dynamic sound

AGAINST

Poor battery life; USB-only; buttons feel cheap; can sound harsh

VERDICT

The Neo doesn't sound bad, and offers plenty of storage potential, but rivals deliver considerably more in terms of performance and ease of use

UNTIL THE RECENT launch of a whopping 40GB version of the Creative Jukebox 3, the Neo 25 Pocket Mini was the largest-capacity digital jukebox around, and with a 30GB hard drive it remains several thousand songs above the rest of its rivals here.

One very good reason to have a high storage capacity is if you want to use your jukebox as a portable hard drive for your computer, allowing you to shuttle files between home and work, for example. The Neo comes with excellent support for such transfer, with the added bonus of being happy working with both PCs and Macs.

Shame, then, that the Pocket Mini only has a USB connection, making the transfer of music or data files a considerably slower process than via the FireWire connections on offer from the best jukeboxes here.

This is just one of the usability problems that hamper the Neo. For example, the Pocket Mini 25's fascia buttons feel cheap and make a horrible clicky noise – and you need to use them a lot because they're the only navigation device the jukebox offers. Then there's the poor battery life – a mere four hours, which rather defeats the object of having thousands of songs at your disposal.

Also shocking is the quality of the folding headphones that come with the Neo. Dump them in favour of a decent pair and you'll appreciate that this jukebox is capable of delivering its musical payload well. Everything from rock to reggae and classical are blasted out in toe-tapping fashion, with only a touch of harshness on mass-produced pop and a slight lack of bass with dance music.

The Neo Pocket Mini is a lively sounding jukebox with an excellent storage capacity, but a variety of usability issues mean it'll never rise above an average rating among such strong competition.

The Neo is able to belt out a decent tune

Rio Riot £290 ★★★★☆

FOR

PC and Mac support; built-in FM tuner; great software

AGAINST

No FireWire port; no data file support

VERDICT

Its good range of features – including that built-in radio – makes the Rio Riot a solid buy, though it can't quite match the best jukeboxes here

DESPITE BEING RELEASED nine months ago, the Rio Riot is holding up well against newer rivals. The only notable omissions are a FireWire slot – making the transfer of tunes a rather tedious process – and support for data files.

But if it's purely a music jukebox you're after, the Rio Riot does the job very well. Compiling and navigating playlists of music is a simple task, aided by the Rio's excellent large display. The supplied over-ear headphones are a good example of the breed, though things improved further with our reference Grados.

Playback is impressive: the Riot produces an open, detailed sound with good dynamics – this is an excellent player to get you moving on the move, especially when its relatively powerful bass kicks in. If you're a big fan of poorly recorded pop (quick question: why?) you could find the Rio's treble a bit strident, but this is a common MP3-player flaw so we won't judge the Riot too harshly.

Two extra features of the Rio Riot boost its status here: its built-in FM radio, which works well when you're out and about, and its exemplary DJ software. Not only does the latter make it easy to compile custom mixes, it also it offers 'TopTunes' - which gives instant access to the tracks you play most frequently – and 'Memory Lane', which dredges up the songs you've listened to least.

In fact the only design gripe we have is the positioning of the headphone/line-out socket – slap bang on the bottom of the unit, meaning you can't stand it up to read the display when using it at home.

It may not be as stylish as some players here, and the lack of a FireWire port is a pain, but the Rio Riot is worth considering if you're after a solid music jukebox that's easy to use.

Creative 3 ★★★★★

DIGITAL JUKEBOXES: AS Fatboy Slim would have it, you've come a long way, baby. There's more ability and diversity than ever and all of these models surpass the original options in some way. There are four above-average products here, starting with the Rio Riot, which is the most usable option, though starting to lag behind better-value rivals. Next up is the undoubted style leader – Apple's i-Pod – and its cut-price lookalike, the Creative Zen. Both offer great performance in a smaller format, but if you want the very best sound from your digital music library, the less portable but more powerful Jukebox 3 is the clear class leader.

Creative's Award-winner also offers the best battery life and unsurpassed flexibility – you don't even need a computer to use it. Oh, and did we mention that you can now buy a huge 40GB version for £370?

A further boost to the Jukebox 3 is the recent addition of an inline remote-control option. As well as allowing you to manage key playback features, the £53 control includes a 32-preset FM tuner and a built-in microphone that allows you to record 'live' audio.

Best of British?

Well-known British hi-fi companies have taken a high-end approach to DVD – but can they compete with less-expensive imports? We test four

THE UPGRADING GAME used to be easy. All you needed was a new amplifier, new CD player or better speakers; the map to your brighter audio future was clearly laid out, and all you had to do was find the cash.

The route to home cinema enlightenment is, as you'd expect, rather more complex, and nowhere more so than for DVD players. If you fancy taking the step up from your trusty entry-level player, your options are far from clear. Do you want DVD-Audio, Super Audio CD, progressive scan or recordability? These and many other features can be yours for £1000, and in some cases, much less.

And there's another less tangible but equally significant factor to consider: kudos. In traditional two-channel hi-fi, the British brands reign supreme for kit-rack cool and stereo credibility. In the relentlessly high-tech world of home cinema, that advantage is perhaps less clear-cut, but the concept of a British DVD player is still an attractive one to many.

So do the British contenders offer significant advantages over their imported rivals? And do they provide better CD replay as well as top-notch movie performance?

Arcam DV88 Plus £1000 ★★★★★

FOR

Sensational picture in progressive-scan mode; strong specification; good value

AGAINST

Only the lack of DVD-Audio or Super Audio CD replay

VERDICT

The Plus is a winner in every sense and does enough to justify its price

THE ARCAM DV88 has been around for a while, but the latest "Plus" model is radically enhanced over its forebears.

The most notable improvement is the provision of a Zoran Vaddis V chipset (replacing the older model's Vaddis III), which massively boosts the player's capability at no extra cost. It allows the DV88 Plus to include both NTSC and PAL progressive-scan compatibility as standard, the latter being a first for any DVD player. Owners of older-generation DV88s can also upgrade to full progressive-scan, but this requires a £350 circuit board with Silicon Images processing. Arcam also plans to offer a DVD-Audio module as an upgrade in the near future.

However, it's the PAL progressive scan that really floats our boat, and be in no doubt, it works, assuming you've got a compatible video display. You get outstanding video contrast and three-dimensionality, beautifully smooth motion and, in particular, razor-sharp edge definition. The opening sequence of Goldmember looks superb, the dense black of the helicopter gunship providing a spectacular menace against the sun-drenched Utah desert. Colours, meanwhile, are wonderfully bright, notably during the sequence set in Austin's pad.

Even if you're not a plasma or projector owner, the Arcam provides RGB Scart capability, too, which results in a fine picture when connected to a conventional television. The player also delivers the goods with music, something we've already experienced with the DV88. The only problem remains a slight slowness in the bass.

But ultimately the point of a £1000 DVD player is that it offers premium performance in a high end set-up, and that's precisely what this new Arcam achieves. It's brilliant, end of story.

Cyrus DVD8 £1200 ★★★★☆

FOR

Fine CD performance; solid specification; component-video sockets mean a better picture with big-screen displays...

AGAINST

...but it's still not that special, given the player's high price

VERDICT

Excellent if music is your first love, but not so outstanding with movies

THE DESIGN TEAM at Cyrus has obviously been listening to us. When we tested the DVD8's predecessor, the DVD7, we criticised it for its lack of component-video outputs (so vital for plasma owners) and performance-enhancing features like progressive scan. So enter the DVD8, equipped with – wait for it – component-video sockets, although sadly there's still no progressive scan.

Other improvements include revised control circuits, upgraded control and operation functions, and considerably more powerful disc-reading software. Owners of existing DVD7 players can return their machines to the factory for a full upgrade to DVD8 status if they want.

However, what you can't do, unlike the Arcam DV88, is enhance the video side of things. And that remains a problem. While the component-video output sockets do make a notable difference to the DVD8's ability with big-screen displays, it still can't match the best efforts of a progressive-scan player like the Arcam – or, indeed, the more-affordable Toshiba SD-520E (see First tests, page 19). Images are bright and colourful, but simply lack the three-dimensionality offered by the best DVD players in this class.

Of course, Cyrus could argue that the typical DVD8 consumer is more musically orientated than many, and the new model retains all the stereo strengths of its forebear. It rocks, has punch and drive, and proves to be a very worthy do-it-all solution.

But the DVD8 is not the most impressive visual solution, and therein lies the rub. If you're a movie buff, and especially if you own a plasma or a projector, then you'll find other players will offer more.

Linn Classik Movie £1995 ★★★☆☆

FOR
Looks good; very flexible and capable

AGAINST
Limited video performance is a letdown; pricey

VERDICT
Brilliant idea, largely well executed, but undermined by the ability of certain rivals

YES, WE KNOW the Linn Classik Movie is in fact a complete DVD player and audio system, not just a DVD player. Your £2000 buys you a five-channel amplifier (offering 5 x 40w into 8ohm loads), a DVD player and a tuner, which, in the context of DVD player-only purchases like the Cyrus, makes it look good value. You can even use it as a standalone DVD player, since it has an optical-digital output that will provide both Dolby Digital and DTS 5.1 sound to an external surround decoder.

On the other hand, the Linn lacks the video-output capability of some of its rivals, with only S-Video and composite (via Scart) on offer: you can forget about RGB, component or progressive scan. That's a shame: a unit like this is likely to be used with other components that are similarly stylish, such as plasmas, which benefit from component sockets. Indulge in a back-to-back comparison between the Linn and the Arcam, and there's no contest in video terms, whether with a plasma or a conventional TV.

But surely the Classik Movie fights back with its extensive list of other capabilities? To some extent, yes. We remain highly impressed by the flexibility of the 80-preset RDS tuner, the multiroom capability (via ordinary CAT5 cable) and the home cinema performance, even if it is 'basic' Dolby Digital and DTS 5.1.

Yet strip the Linn down to its separate elements, and the sums look more shaky. You could have the Arcam DV88 Plus and a Pioneer VSX-D2011 receiver (£900) for less money, and in performance terms the pair would trounce the Linn, offering a better picture, bigger muscle and more channels of amplification. On a sound and vision per pound basis, the Classik has to lose out here.

Roksan Kandy DVD £650 ★★★☆☆

FOR
Good sound and vision from DVD; OK with CD, too

AGAINST
But only OK; this kind of DVD quality is now available for around £200

VERDICT
A good try, but the Kandy DVD's appeal is undermined by the presence of fine sub-£200 DVD players and good £300-£400 CD machines

ROKSAN CLAIMS ITS Kandy DVD offers 'excellent audio quality for CD playback', and unusually for a British player, has onboard Dolby Digital/DTS 5.1 processing and 5.1 channel analogue outputs. Combine these with a volume control and speaker delay (but not level) settings in the set-up menus, and the player can be used as part of a simplified surround system.

The trouble is, none of this is rocket science: players with onboard decoding, multichannel analogue outputs and volume control are available for less than £200, and they offer a reasonably high standard of sound from DVD sources. Similarly, even the provision of component-video output is nothing to get excited about these days: again it's standard on many budget players, and delivers very good picture quality. The Kandy DVD delivers perfectly acceptable picture quality with fine colour control, even if images are a bit lacking when it comes to solid blacks, and a little soft.

So maybe it's best to look at the Kandy DVD as a CD player that also plays DVDs, which would be fine if this was a truly sparkling music machine. Trouble is, while it's good it sets no new standards in terms of stereo ability from a multipurpose machine. The performance is adequate rather than breathtaking, certainly by the standards of the good CD players you can pick up for around £300.

All of which leaves us with a DVD player that's good, but which offers little you can't get in rival players for well under £200. Yes, it sounds better than your average DVD player when spinning CDs, but the best dedicated CD machines in the £300-£400 sector sound better. Sadly, it's hard to make a strong case for the Kandy.

How compact can a full-fledged Home Cinema system be? With the Movie 10-MX-II, Canton proves that outstanding cinema sound is not a matter of speaker size. The four mini satellites and the center speaker deliver opulent, room-filling Surround Sound otherwise encountered only in big speakers. Assuring powerful support in the deep bass region is a high-performance active subwoofer. Arcam DV88 Plus

"The Arcam DV88 Plus offers a brilliant picture and is easily upgradable"

WE DON'T WANT to sound negative about British DVD players, but it's a tough, highly competitive market out there, one in which budget players from the big brands are not only competent – they're exceptional. If all you want is a half-decent movie player to entertain you on a Saturday night, then a Toshiba SD-220E, for under £150, will work perfectly well, and will match the video performance of some players in this test. Which is startling, given that some of them cost nearly ten times as much – the price of a good TV.

No, you need to be a dedicated home cinema enthusiast to find a good reason to spend £1000 or more in today's DVD-player market. Assuming you're upgrading in order to go for superior performance (rather than added flexibility, as with a DVD recorder), you will also need a high-quality surround system, a good TV or, even better, a plasma display or a projector. Only then will you really see the benefits of your £1000 outlay.

But even then the Brits are up against some stiff competition. At £750, Denon's outstanding DVD-2800 Mk2 is a sensational video source, and it's a pretty good CD player. Against it, only the Arcam DV88 Plus stands a chance – the rest of our British group are comprehensively trounced. True, perhaps the Cyrus DVD8 offers more musicality, but whether it offers nearly £500-worth of better performance is open to debate.

This is why, as if you hadn't already guessed, our winner is the Arcam. The DV88 Plus provides everything you could ask for: a brilliant picture and fine sound – basically enough capability to justify its high price. We're also impressed by the upgradability: should DVD-A ever become an indispensible purchase, the DV88 Plus has you covered. Make no mistake, you'll only get the best from this player if you opt for a video display that allows it to really shine with PAL progressive scan – and we'll be covering this technology in more depth in our next issue – but if you do, this is one patriotic purchase you can make with your head as well as your heart.

B&W has given its Nautilus 805s a makeover to produce the Signature model, and the changes go way beyond a glossy finish

B&W Signature 805 £2500

FOR	Superb insight into recordings; articulate presentation; fabulous build and finish
AGAINST	If you want monster bass weight then these aren't for you
SOUND	★★★★★
BUILD	★★★★★
COMPATIBILITY	★★★★★
VERDICT	★★★★★ One of the most impressive B&W designs we've heard. They're small and pricey but worth it

MAKING SUCCESSFUL HI-FI is all about getting the details right, as the Signature 805s prove. They cost £1000 more than their little brothers, the Nautilus 805s, and to the casual observer the only difference is the cabinet finish. Yet it takes six days to apply the lacquer to the Red Bird's Eye veneer of our review sample, and the result is stunning.

If the story ended there we would complain about style over substance. Thankfully, the engineers have put into practice everything they've learnt in the four years since B&W launched the original Nautilus 805s.

On paper, the changes are small. The mid/bass driver is still a 16.5 cm woven Kevlar unit, and the tweeter remains a pod-mounted alloy dome. Finish apart, the cabinet is unchanged, too.

So, where does the extra grand go? The enhanced cosmetics understandably take a large chunk, but there are improvements to both drive units and the crossover. The Kevlar mid/bass driver has a bigger magnet to help control low frequencies, and produces less harmonic distortion because of internal tweaking. Its central 'bullet' is made of aluminium instead of plastic, which reduces resonance.

B&W has added silver-plating to the tweeter's magnetic centre pole to reduce distortion, and there has been a bit of tinkering with the voice-coil bobbin and dome design. The crossover is simpler than that of the standard 805 model, and has a gentler roll-off for the mid/bass driver.

The standard B&W speaker stands are worth upgrading

The sum of these changes is staggering. The two versions of the 805 are closely related, but take a listen and the superiority of the pricier model is clear. We could write at length about the Signature 805s' detail resolution, which is exceptional, or their agility, which makes most rivals seem leaden, but dissecting their performance doesn't do justice to the way these speakers make recordings come to life.

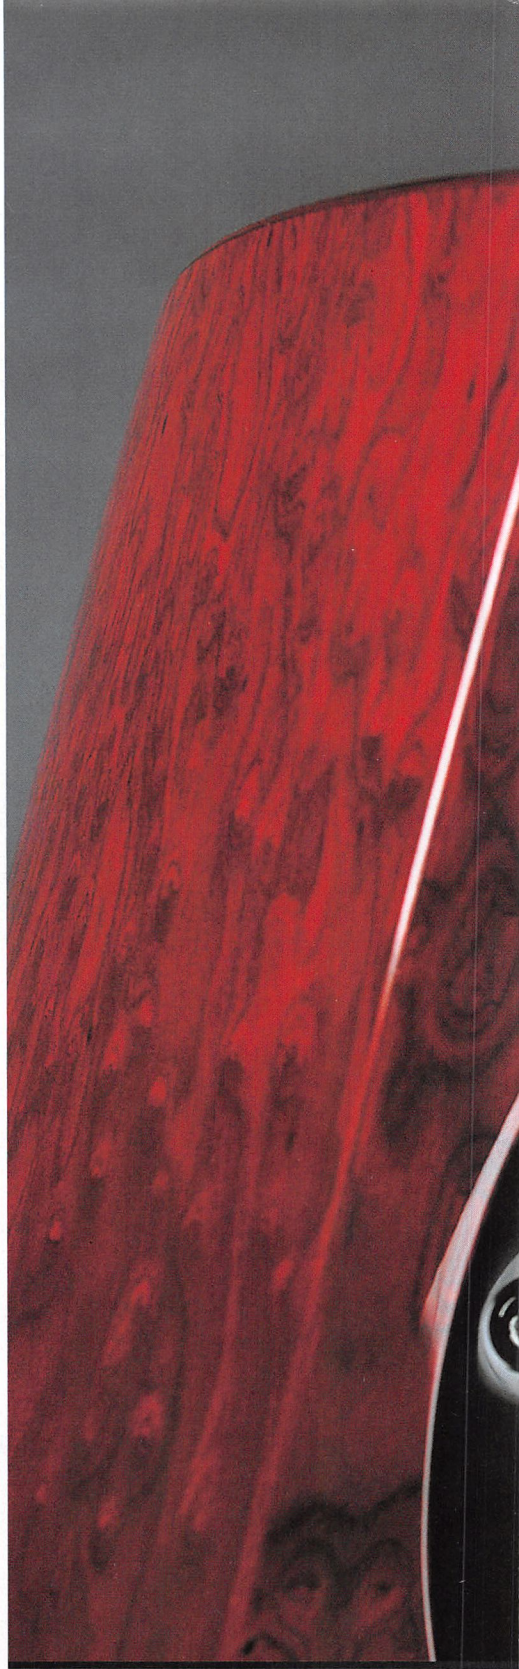
Play a top-class disc like Eric Bibb's Good Stuff, and it's easy to sit back and believe the skilled bluesman and band have taken up residence in your listening room. Of course, the recording has to be of a high-quality to start with. Play Eminem's The Eminem Show and the attack and drive is impressive, but the listener is always aware of the heavy compression applied by the recording engineer.

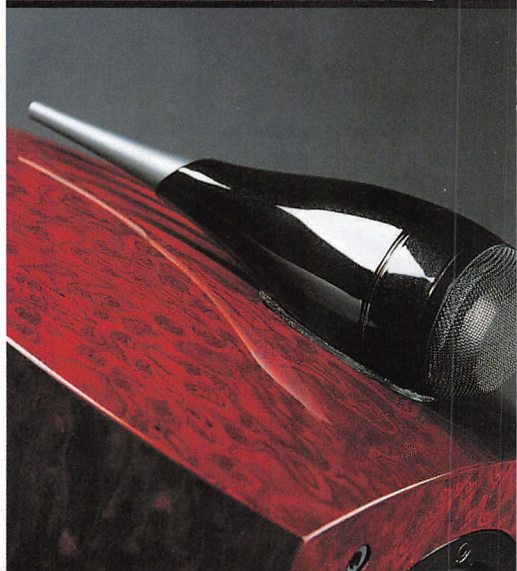
Listen to a less-processed disc such as the Lord of the Rings soundtrack and the dynamic prowess of these elegant monitors is obvious. Speakers of this size are never going to deliver massive bass, but the S805s go deeper than expected, and stay rock solid even as volume levels rise. And the articulation at low frequencies is astonishing: rarely have we heard standmount speakers track basslines with such enthusiasm.

A major surprise is the quality of the metal-dome tweeter: though the engineering tweaks are relatively minor, this unit sounds far more refined and detailed than before, with absolutely no hint of aggression. The stereo imaging is also excellent.

Biwiring is essential to make the most of the impressive transparency, as is a pair of sturdy supports. B&W's dedicated stands look better than they sound, so we would go for Kudos's S100s for £380 or HNE's hefty granite stands for around £100 more.

We realise £2500 is a mountain of money for standmount monitors, especially since similarly priced floorstanders from KEF and Proac, for example, deliver more outright authority and bass depth. However, take the Signature 805s' stunning array of strengths into account and recommendation is mandatory. These are the best B&Ws we've heard.





Did you know?

- The Signature 805s were originally only intended for the Japanese market.
- George Lucas's Skywalker ranch uses Nautilus 802s for monitoring purposes, and Abbey Road Studios in London has the full 800 series range.
- B&W manufactures half a million speakers a year in the UK.

It takes six days of careful lacquering to produce the distinctive Red Bird's Eye finish of these speakers – the result is stunning

Men in Black II

Columbia Tristar | Cert PG

THE SECOND MIB outing has the same breathless pace and short overall running length, and much the same sense of comic-book pizzazz as its forebear. Where the movie differs is that this time around everyone seems more certain that they are supposed to be playing it for laughs.

Smith, in particular, seems to revel in his role, firing off a succession of one-liners that might not be especially original, but still have you grinning.

Like the first two-disc package, the DVD is laden with extras and both looks and sounds fine – but we can't help wondering if, in the fullness of time, Columbia Tristar is going to pull off the same Superbit Edition trick with this disc as it did with the original. And if it was our money, that'd be the version we'd buy...

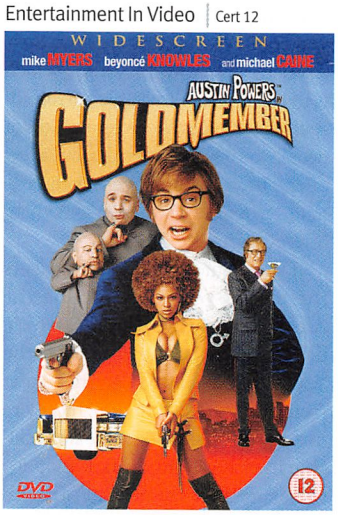
Entertainment In Video | Cert 12



THE THIRD OUTING for cinema's most dentally challenged hero since Dustin Hoffman in Marathon Man, this is a beautifully presented DVD.

Sonically it's fully loaded, with about every worthwhile mode on offer: in the opening scene in particular, the DTS-ES Discrete 6.1 audio really makes its presence felt, adding great depth and space to Austin's duel with a helicopter gunship. Meanwhile, for colour brilliance and sheer vitality, this is a superb tester of your TV's mettle.

Unforgiven Special Edition

Warner | Cert 15

ONE OF THE very earliest DVDs, Unforgiven has since languished in extras-free obscurity. Until this new two-disc set, that is, which offers extensive directorial insight, plus a full episode of TV show Maverick, featuring a young Clint in an eerie forerunner of his William Munney character.

The picture remains a little dark in places, but it looks colourful enough, and the film remains a good ambience tester, especially during the storm that provides a sonic backdrop to the movie's bloody finale.

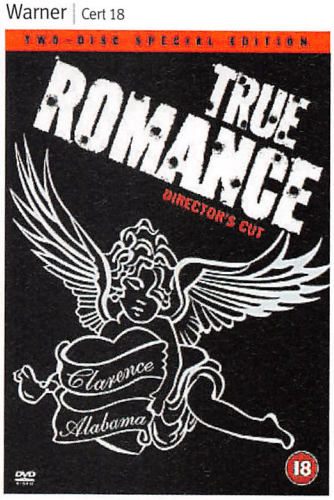
True Romance Director's Cut

Warner | Cert 18



THIS LAVISH TWO-DISC set continues the recent fad for remastered, extras-heavy Tarantino movies – although Tony Scott directed, with Quentin limiting himself to writing. The package offers a high-quality transfer of the movie, and tons of background insight.

It's no crash-bang-wallop score, although the final shootout delivers plenty of surround-steering effects. Check out the confrontation between Christopher Walken and Dennis Hopper for outstanding ambience effects and expertly selected music.

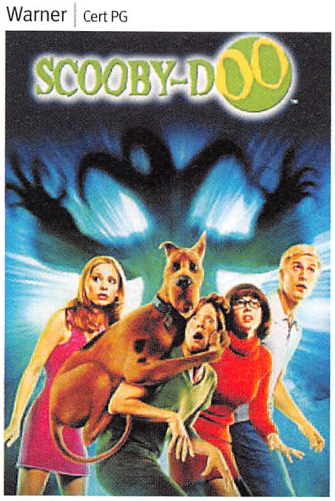
Scooby-Doo

Warner | Cert PG



MATTHEW LILLARD'S IMPECCABLE Shaggy is by far the highlight of this Scrappy Doo of a movie, which boasts some of the ropiest CGI effects you'll have seen in years. Anyone with fond memories of the Scooby cartoons should stay well away, because the movie's smart-alec attempts at post-modern character reinvention irritate even more than the animation.

As for the DVD, well, it comes with lots of extras and is presented in par-for-the-course Dolby Digital 5.1. Best bit? It's only 83 minutes long. Huzzah.

AV SURROUND SPEAKERS

SYSTEM ···› Marantz DV4100OSE DVD player, Rotel RSX-972 AV receiver, Ruark Sabre speakers

PROBLEM ···› The Marantz DVD player doubles as my CD player and I'm very happy with the sound it and the Rotel produce. At present I use the old Ruark standmounters but I want to make the most of the 5.1 opportunities the Rotel offers.

The problem is that I live in a 300-year-old cottage and the living room measures 5.5m x 3.5m (TV in the corner, of course!), and has a 2.2m-high ceiling and a generous selection of oak beams.

Given the limited space and my desire to put musical quality before movie muscle, I'm thinking of getting a 5.0 set-up initially, with floor-standers for the front speakers, either stand- or wall-mounted rears and a good centre. Once that's up and running I can consider whether I need a subwoofer. The front speakers could be up to 1ft away from the wall but the rears would have to be closer. I have a total budget (excluding the subwoofer) of around £1500, and I don't insist that all the speakers are the same make, but they must be discreet, especially the rears, and blend in with the room.

My music taste is wide, from rock, soul and jazz to classical, and my daughters unfortunately like pop!

Ian Gale

WE SAY ···› Well, you could do worse than check out this month's Supertest of stylish satellite and sub systems (p56). The little KEF KHT2005 eggs would be a good bet, while the B&W VM1s, complete with the AS1 subwoofer, would be perfect. As well as silver, the speakers come in black and white, and can be wall-mounted. If a complete set of VM1s is too big, you could even use the smaller LM1s for the rear channels.

Or, if you like its looks and sound, you could even plump for the Bose Acoustimass 15 MkII system, which is the ultimate in 'invisible' surround-speaker packages. Yes, we know lots of people aren't sold on the idea, but a few of the Bose systems we've been listening to recently have been something of a revelation.

If you want conventional speakers the obvious choice would be the Acoustic Energy Evo 3B system which, like the KEFs, was a Product of the Year winner in our 2002 Awards. Apart from the black ash in which they're usually seen, the speakers are also available in either light or dark maple – we're sure there's something to match your décor.

B&W's VM1 is a cracking sub/sat system

Who can convert my DVD player to read UK discs?

PROBLEM While on holiday in the Caribbean I bought a Panasonic DVD-LA95 portable DVD player. Unfortunately I was totally unaware that it plays only Region Three discs, not Region Two UK DVDs.

Back home, Panasonic's customer service department said they couldn't exchange the product, but mentioned that it could be 'chipped' to play UK DVDs. I have since contacted several electronic companies about this, but so far no-one has been able to help me – in fact one said it was illegal to chip DVD players. Is this true, or do you have details of a company that might be prepared to undertake this work?

Mr A Carey
Glasgow

WE SAY First things first: we recently contacted the Department of Trade and Industry and they clarified that it's not illegal to convert a DVD player to enable it to play discs from any country, whether by hardware modification or by entering a code via the remote handset to hack the machine. However, the former method – which is what your Panasonic portable requires – will invalidate its warranty (though we've heard of very few problems occurring with such kit during the warranty period).

One company that can solve your problem is DVD Chips, which can change your Panasonic to multi-region form – so it'll spin DVDs from all regions – for £50, including postage. It's best to contact DVD Chips online – at www.dvdchips.co.uk – although you can also telephone the Halifax-based company on 07010 702218. For more on DVD coding see p96.

The Panasonic DVD-LA95 can be chipped for around £50

HI-FI SET-UP TIPS

WHAT CAN I DO TO GET THE VERY BEST FROM MY HI-FI?

SYSTEM Yamaha CDC-775 CD player, Pioneer DV-525 DVD player, Rotel RA-980BX amplifier, Polk Audio RT55 and Digital Reference DR-1204 speakers, Accusound SW-200 active subwoofer

PROBLEM I was wondering how you guys would set up the above system for maximum performance and quality. I've read a little about the biamping and biwiring stuff, so whatever can be done to give me the highest possible performance and quality, I want to know.

Brent Lilwall
Australia

WE SAY It's always tricky to give firm recommendations when several components are unfamiliar. However, your question isn't as baffling as the one we got the other day, which read: "I have a heavily modified Philips CD player, a home-built valve amp adapted from a circuit printed in a magazine, and speakers of my own design – what's the best cable to use, and is it worth converting the speakers to biwired operation." The only answer to that was: "Er, search us, guv!"

In your case we'll keep to the bits we know. The Rotel amp is fine, the Yamaha multiplayer is more than a bit on the soft side, and the Pioneer would be OK when playing DVDs via its digital output into an AV receiver, but no great shakes with music in stereo. The Digital Reference speakers we don't know, but the Accusound subwoofer seems to have picked up the odd good review in the Aussie press, so our advice would be to stick with the Polks used with the sub, and put the other speakers out to grass unless they're from some demon company Down Under that we've never come across.

On the whole you're much better off using just one pair of speakers if you're listening only in stereo, which you clearly are with the Rotel amplifier. Two pairs of speakers – and particularly two pairs of speakers from different manufacturers – are just going to produce a confused sound.

Yes, it's worth biwiring the Polk speakers to hear them at their best: there should be information on how to do this in the manual, or you'll find an explanation online in the Sound Advice section of www.whathifi.com. Beyond that, you should follow basic rules such as keeping the cables as short as possible and preferably placing the various electronic components on different shelves of a hi-fi rack, though frankly, given the quality of the Yamaha player, that's not as critical as it would be with a better single-disc machine.

Subject of the month: DVD regional coding

THERE WERE PLENTY of questions about regional coding of DVD players in the postbag this month, so we thought we'd briefly answer several, to communicate the basic principles of a system many readers find confusing.

DVD discs and players carry a regional code identity, designed by the major studios to give them some control over the distribution of their films. Britain and the rest of Europe is Region Two, while the US is Region One, the idea being that discs bought in, or from, the States won't play on a European player.

Fortunately there are ways round this: most players can be converted, either through a simple code (or 'hack') punched in using the remote, or via some internal modification. This will ensure the DVD player is switchable between regions or simply multiregional, allowing it to play discs from anywhere.

> "Most DVD players can be converted using either a simple 'hack' code or via some internal modifications"

Liezl Nel from London is thinking of buying either a Sony DAVS550 or a DAV-S880, and says: "Is the DAVS550 multiregion as standard, or do I have to specify this when I purchase?". The answer is that the Sony as sold in the UK is Region Two, but can be modified internally to be multiregional. Your dealer should be able to arrange this, or there are companies from which you can buy the unit already modified.

David Bircumshaw has a similar question about the Philips DVD-R880 DVD recorder. Philips has told him his machine is set to Region Two, but he's seen ads in WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION from dealers offering multiregion versions. Several firms should be able to convert his player, or, depending on the version of the player, it may be possible to make the change using its remote. Try this by pressing the 'play' button on the machine, then on the remote the 1 button, then the 5 button, then the 9 button. Alternatively, the player may be 'hackable' using a learning remote control – his dealer should be able to advise him on this.

Chris Redfern has recently bought a Pioneer DV-444 and is wondering if it can play Region One discs. "I hear you can enter a code that enables some players to read such DVDs. Is a code available for my model?" he asks. Yes, these codes work with some players, but with the Pioneer it's a lid-off job.

The same goes for the JVC XV-S42 that M Price has just bought after moving to the UK from the US. "We left our other player in the States because of the voltage difference, but now our US DVDs won't play on the new machine." Well, good news: once the JVC is modified internally it will play all those US Region One discs as well as European titles.

Finally, Andy Poller wants to know the implications of having a Region Two-only DVD player. Well, if you want to buy or rent discs on the high street or order Region Two titles online, there's no problem. But if you want to buy Region 1 discs from services such as www.play247.com, which we use here in the office and which often delivers US discs before the UK release, a multiregion player is very useful.

The Philips DVD-R880 will gain multiregion powers after some internal fiddling

B&W's DM602 S3s make a big sound but are easy to drive

WANTED: A MEATY MUSIC SYSTEM FOR UNDER £1600

SYSTEM ···› None yet

PROBLEM ···› I'm trying to build my first good system and I'm confused. I auditioned the Rotel RCD-02 ($500/£318) and RA-02 ($500) with B&W speakers – the DM603 S3s ($1000/£636) and DM604 S3s ($1400/£891). I liked the extra bass of the 604s and prefer floorstanders (I mostly listen to rock and heavy metal). Are these speakers overkill for this amp and are they right for my needs? Would it be a good idea to buy another RA-02 later and biamp the speakers rather than go for a better amp (a Roksan Kandy KA-1 at $1000/£636 or Rotel RA-1060 for $700/£446)?

I'm trying to restrict my budget to $2500 (£1591), though the equipment out there is making this difficult, so should I go for something like the Arcam AVR-200 ($1200/£764) to give me the best of music and movies? I want to be sure that I'm going in the right direction because this is a big investment for me.

Aniesh Chawla
Minnesota

WE SAY ···› The speakers wouldn't be overkill for the amplifier – the B&W DM600s have always been easy to drive and the latest S3 models are no exception. Either the RA-02 or the RA-01 – the latter is the same amp as the former with no remote control and a much lower price – would drive either of the models you suggest and could later be used with an add-on Rotel power amp, rather than another RA-02, to biamp the speakers.

But we'd certainly recommend auditioning the RA-1060 with the B&W DM603S3s and the RCD-02. This should be just the sort of system you need to deliver your kind of music at high levels. For sheer grunt, along with bass power, detail, and control in the high frequencies, the bigger Rotel takes some beating – it's just what you need for those screamed vocals, howling guitars and thumping, rumbling bass and treble.

We don't think the AV route is the one to take at this stage: better by far to concentrate your spending on getting a great two-channel system, especially as you're already worrying about busting your budget.

HI-FI CLEANING

IS IT WISE TO USE POLISH ON MY HI-FI EQUIPMENT?

PROBLEM ···› You've given me a lot of good advice over the past six years, so I had to pass this on to you, chaps. This isn't advertising – it really works.

After work the other day I went to buy some food and remembered I needed furniture polish, so I picked up a can of Pledge Clean & Dust.

At the weekend I caught my missus with a duster rubbing my stereo equipment. "Don't touch! What are you doing? Don't use that!" I shouted. But apparently it's a multi-surface cleaner, is anti-static and even suitable for glass and – would you believe it – stereo equipment. It works a treat for the stand as well – it's sparkling! Get the tea boy to run out and get some and let me know if I should stop using it.

via e-mail

WE SAY ··› We'd never use anything more than a clean duster. You'll find most pieces of kit have something in their instruction books about not using polishes or anything abrasive. The only exception is speaker cabinets, which can be cleaned using high-quality furniture polish, but only after the grilles have been put on to protect the drive units from overspray. Make sure this is on the list of orders you bark at your wife while she's cleaning...

Overspray is a problem when using any kind of polish on electronics: its ingredients can creep inside amps and the like and cause problems. And it doesn't just get in through ventilation holes: chemicals can creep along the shafts of volume controls, or in around the edges of buttons, and cause noisy operation or malfunction. If kit gets really mucky we'd suggest you unplug it from the mains, use a barely damp, fluff-free duster – wrung until it doesn't even feel wet – and leave plenty of time for everything to dry – at least a few hours – before you power it up again. Yes, you can use polish on your equipment stand, but only if you take all the kit off first, again letting it dry before you re-install the system.

Next month – why you shouldn't vacuum your speakers. Don't mock: people do it!

The Arcam CD92 is a logical step-up from the CD72

SHOULD I ENHANCE MY SPEAKERS OR CD PLAYER?

SYSTEM ··› Pro-ject Debut II turntable, Arcam DiVA CD72 CD player and A85 amplifier, B&W 603 S2 speakers, van den Hul D-102 III and QED Qunex interconnects, Ixos Biwire cable

PROBLEM ··› I'd like to upgrade my speakers and top of my list are the Dynaudio Audience 52s. But can my Arcam amplifier handle the 4 ohm impedance of the Dynaudios? The other speakers I'm considering are the B&W CDM1NTs, but I'm not sure whether these will integrate well with my system.

I'm also thinking of upgrading my CD player to the Arcam DiVA CD92, or possibly the FMJ equivalent to take advantage of the Ring DAC and HDCD decoding.

Given my present components, should I upgrade my speakers first or give the CD player priority?

Paolo B. Ilusorio
Philippines

WE SAY ··› Yes, the amplifier is more than good enough to withstand the upgrade of the CD player, which can be carried out by your local Arcam distributor. This would certainly be the most cost-effective move because this Arcam series has been designed to be upgraded. But make sure you listen to the CD92 beside your CD72 before taking the plunge – you need to be certain that the improvement in sound quality is sufficient. There's no point going for a change in technology just for the sake of it.

We'd suggest you upgrade the CD player and live with that for a while before considering changing your speakers. Either the Dynaudios or the CDM1NTs will give you better definition than the DM603S2s, but you might miss that big, powerful bass if you go from your floorstanders to a standmount design.

Can your shy reviewers tell me more about PS2?

PROBLEM ··› I have two questions. First, as readers we can always find plenty of information about an audio component and read more than enough tests to make a good judgement. The one topic we do not see covered properly concerns the people who carry out these tests. I would like to see a little more about their musical backgrounds. It would be fascinating to know what systems they have at home and the identity of their first hi-fi set-ups. Would this be possible?

Second, I have a PlayStation 2, which I use a lot as a DVD player. I have seen some comments about its playback quality, but I have never seen any reviews on its CD ability. What is your experience with the PlayStation 2 as a CD player?

Rico Trevisan
Brussels, Belgium

WE SAY ··› Just to give you a taste, our group technical editor started out in audio in the late 1970s with a Sansui SR-222 turntable, NAD 3020 amplifier and a pair of Mordaunt-Short Festival speakers. He currently uses a Marantz CD-7, TAG McLaren Audio amplification, PMC speakers and Chord Company cabling. Oh, and a Tivoli Model One radio.

Our reference systems are often referred to in panels at the start of our reviews to show what components the products were tested with.

To answer your second question, the PlayStation 2 is a very good games machine. It's pretty nasty as a DVD player, and if that's what you're using in your system we'd suggest you spend a couple of hundred Euros and buy a good budget DVD machine – you'll be amazed at the improvement in sound and vision. And the reason you don't see very much written about the PlayStation 2 and CD playing is that it's truly horrific when trying to play music. Please – and this is important – don't even think of this machine as a do-it-all games/movies/music solution: stick to shooting mythical beasts or pretending to drive fast cars around Las Vegas and you'll be exploiting the sum of its abilities.

The LG DVD5253 would be a far better bet for Rico than the PlayStation2

INTRODUCING THE XHT601

Reputations like these are not earned overnight. Not only were we the first cable company to produce the cast metal scart connector, but we have also constantly updated our industry leading technology to remain at the head of the field.

Introducing the latest edition in the IXOS® Scart range – the XHT601 fully wired 21 pin scart to scart. With a more flexible cable jacket for easier installation and a completely re-designed, 4th generation alloy ingot scart plug with ultra-rigid body and pin clamp, the XHT601 is quite simply a cut above the rest.

Already the recipient of a coveted What Hi-Fi 5 star review, the XHT601 sets the standard to which all scart cables should now aspire and like all IXOS® products, it comes with a full lifetime warranty as proof of the confidence we have in the outstanding quality of our cables.

CONNECTING SCIENCE • Scart

IXOS® was the first cable manufacturer to introduce the cast metal Scart connector, creating a new category of high quality scart connections. Many other cable manufacturers have since copied the design, but none have managed the same level of performance it is possible to achieve from the Scart connection. IXOS® Scart cables feature 24kt gold plated ingot metal Scart plugs to ensure optimum signal transfer and precision alignment of all pins delivers consistent quality and long-term reliability.

LIFETIME WARRANTY

Every one of our interconnects is backed up by our Lifetime Warranty covering defects in assembly, design and materials failure. Should you have any queries concerning an IXOS® product, our customer services department can be contacted through our website.

AV INTEGRATION

I WANT TO COMBINE MY TWO-CHANNEL AND AV KIT

SYSTEM Arcam Alpha 7 CD player, Alpha 8 integrated amp and DiVA P75+ power amp; Pioneer DV-454 DVD player; B&W P4 loudspeakers; REL Quake subwoofer; Philips TV; QED Qunex 2 interconnects and Original speaker cable; Profigold scart cable

PROBLEM I'm the happy owner of the above system and intend to buy two surround speakers and a centre speaker (maybe the B&W leisure monitors). I also want a receiver or processor (Pioneer VSX-C100-S or Yamaha DSP-E800) to integrate the home cinema and two-channel elements of my set-up. I don't want to spend a lot of money on the home cinema upgrade because stereo is my priority.

So how can I do it? The preamp lines of my main amplifiers are already used for the biamplification, so is there another way of setting this up?

Gilles Severin,
Leglise, Belgium

WE SAY Either the Pioneer receiver or the Yamaha processor would be a good solution. Or you could buy any AV receiver with preout sockets for all channels and use this as a processor with your current system. In the UK we often recommend the Marantz SR4200, which has now been replaced by the SR4300 and can be found on sale for around 300 Euros, or under £200.

The lack of preamp sockets needn't be a problem because the output from the receiver's front-left and right channels is fed in through any spare line input on your Alpha 8 – the tuner or aux connection, for example. You simply select that input when you want to watch movies and set the amp's volume control to whichever level you used when you set up the channel balance. Most people find it easiest to select the 10 o'clock or 12 o'clock position on the amp's volume control, then use the processor's or receiver's test tones to balance the channels. Then, when watching movies you just use the processor/receiver's volume control to look after the level.

The Leisure Monitors would be fine with your speakers – they may look unusual but they retain the B&W 'house sound'. A trio of VM 1 speakers, which we test this month (p58), would work well with your P4s.

Marantz SR4200: less than £200

AV DVD PLAYERS

A MUSICAL DVD PLAYER FOR LESS THAN A GRAND

PROBLEM Could you recommend a DVD player that plays CDs as well as the best CD players and also delivers great DVD performance? It should be in the region of £500-£1000.

Johnny Svindland
Norway

WE SAY Frankly, Johnny, no. To date there isn't a DVD player that gets anywhere near the performance of the best CD players, and certainly there's nothing available for the kind of money you're suggesting. Even good players within your budget can only match much less-expensive CD hardware. The Arcam DiVA DV88, for example, is on a par with the company's CD62T CD player at best.

Similarly the Cyrus DVD7 would be comfortably outgunned by the likes of the Rotel RCD-02 or NAD C541i when it comes to CD playback. Even the Award-winning Pioneer DV-656A, which is admittedly not bad with music by the standards of DVD players, would be shamed by the best dedicated CD machines at around the £200-250 mark.

That's why our advice, given your budget, would be to spend around £200 on a decent DVD player – the machines you can buy for that sort of money now have all the features you could want and a high standard of performance – and spend the rest of the cash on a CD player. Models you should consider include the usual suspects in the £500-800 arena – the Arcam CD82T and Cyrus CD7 would be good places to start.

HI-FI SYSTEM BUILDER

Our simple guide to hooking up all your hi-fi kit

CD player

HOT OPTION NAD C541i £330 ★★★★★

This player has a well-balanced sound and excellent resolution that blends well with the Rotel amplifier and B&W speakers. A great all-rounder and solid buy.

Amplifier

HOT OPTION Rotel RA-02 £350 ★★★★★

Rotel has a cracking new line-up of affordable hi-fi, and this stereo amp offers a powerful, fresh and vibrant sound. It's a beauty, and looks smart too.

Things to look for when buying a CD player

Check the player can handle CD-R/W discs if you have a standalone CD recorder or PC with a CD-R drive.

A remote control is usually standard these days, but check it has programming so you can set the tracks to play in the order you want, and A/B repeat, which allows you to loop a section of music.

You'll need a digital output to record onto MiniDisc or CD-RW. There are two types: electrical (coaxial) and optical: the former offers the best sound quality.

A headphone socket is handy for listening at night, but make sure it has a volume control.

Display off lets you kill the track/time readout, which can cause interference. Some players sound better with it off.

CD multiplayers can take more than one disc, which makes them great for parties.

Variable output allows you to adjust the volume without using the amplifier – useful if your amp doesn't have its own remote control.

Things to look for when buying an amplifier

A/B speaker switching enables you to run a second pair of speakers into another room in the house.

Line inputs work with CD players, tape decks, tuners – but not turntables. A tape loop allows a recorder to be connected.

Phono inputs are required for connecting a turntable. Moving coil (MC) phono cartridges produce an even smaller signal than moving magnet (MM) ones, so make sure your amp's phono stage is suitable for your turntable.

More power isn't just about extra volume – it usually buys you more dynamic ability, too. It takes a huge increase in amplifier output to make the maximum level twice as loud. A 30-100w output is usually fine.

Tone controls can degrade the sound. If you must have them, look for a source-direct button to bypass them.

Preout sockets are volume-controlled phono outputs – handy for adding power amplifiers if you want to upgrade your system at a later date, or for biamping.

CABLE CORNER

The basic rule is to spend about 10 percent of the value of your system on cables and interconnects.

Phono (RCA)

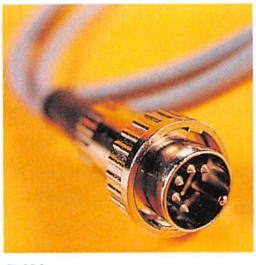
Phono leads are the normal connection used between a source (CD player/cassette deck/tuner) and an amp. Free wires with red and white plugs are often supplied with a player, but it pays to buy better interconnects to improve the sound quality.

Coaxial

There are two types of digital cable for linking a CD player to a MiniDisc or CD-R recorder, or a DVD player to an AV amp. The coaxial (electrical) type is our preferred option. If necessary, you can purchase an optical-to-coaxial socket converter box from Digimate (Tel: 0118 984 4545). It's around £55.

Optical

The second type of digital connection uses pulses of light rather than electricity to transfer data. Some recorders only accept the optical connector, which is characterised by a special slot-in connector socket called a Toslink, shown above. It's normally protected by a pull-out dustcap.

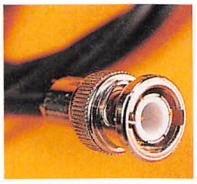


DIN

German DIN standard multipin connectors (three to eight pins) are usually used for connecting pre and power amps; they're rarely found elsewhere these days. Naim still uses a locking version on its components, and cable companies can provide DIN-to-phono cables for older kit.

XLR

Three-pin type which locks on to the socket. Used for balanced connections.



BNC

Push and twist connector which is normally used for digital connections.

Speakers

HOT OPTION B&W DM602S3 £300 ★★★★★

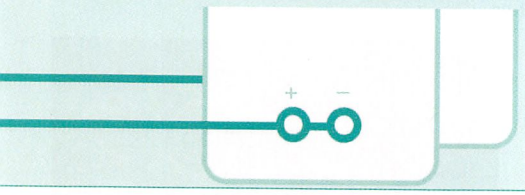
These speakers don't put a foot wrong, offering a full bass sound, great dynamics and excellent integration. Work well with a wide range of systems.



Things to look for when buying speakers

Decide on size first. Do you want small standmount speakers or big floorstanders? Huge speakers in a small room (under 4x4m) sound awful, while small speakers will struggle to fill a big room with sound.

Match your amp to the speakers. First, look at the speakers' power handling. This is quoted as a range – eg 20-100w – so make sure your amp's power rating fits in that range. Also look at sensitivity: speakers with a high sensitivity are, in general, easier for an amplifier to drive than those with a low one. Most modern speakers have a sensitivity of between 87 and 92dB/w/m, which should be fine.

A low impedance draws a high current flow from the amplifier, while a high impedance draws less. Most speakers have an impedance of 6-8ohms (see Buying Guide), but some dip to 4ohms.

Look for good binding posts – twin sets of sockets allow biwiring or biamping to boost performance. Not all speakers have twin binding posts, so check before you buy.

What to put your system on

Speaker stands

Ensure your 'bookshelf' or standmounting speakers sound their very best by investing in a pair of sturdy speaker stands. These work by keeping the speakers static, so all the energy of the drivers is used to shift air, not move the cabinets. There are models to suit all pockets, from as little as £30. See Buying Guide (p227) for the stands we've tested.

Isolation platforms

Used beneath CD players, amplifiers and record players, isolation platforms will shield kit from external vibrations that can affect the sound quality. Squash balls, cut in half and placed under your equipment, are a cost-effective alternative. Or you can try Vibrapods from www.stoneaudio.com

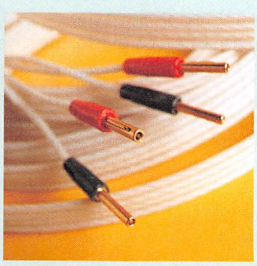
Equipment supports

Placing your kit on a hi-fi rack will bring improvements in soundstaging, bass extension and treble clarity. They come in all shapes and sizes and cost from around £50. Check out the Accessories section of our Buying Guide (p227) for ratings on a wide range of models.

SPEAKER CABLE

Single wire

Speaker cables come in all shapes and sizes, ranging in price from £1.99/metre up to £100+/metre. If your speakers have a single set of binding posts, then running a single strand of cable from the outputs on the amp to each speaker will suffice.



Biwire

If you want to biwire, your speakers will each need twin sets of terminals. You'll then need to run two sets of cables from the amp to each speaker, or buy a biwire cable with four plugs at the speaker end. Check our Buying Guide for a list of biwire cables.

How to biwire your speakers

Biwirable speakers have separate sets of inputs for treble and mid/bass, and a split crossover (or filter) to prevent the bass swamping the delicate treble signals. Run two sets of speaker cable from the left-channel terminals on the amp to the separate inputs on the back of the speaker, and the same on the right channel (see diagram above).

The next step up is to biamplify your speakers, for which you need two amps, one to drive the treble frequencies and the other the mid/bass frequencies: the usual configuration is an integrated amp with a matching power amp, or a preamp with two stereo power amps. It's important that the gain of the two amps is the same, or you'll get a tonal imbalance. Generally this method gives you a cleaner, more dynamic sound.

Recommended hi-fi solutions

BUDGET £600 We've mixed and matched components to bring you this month's recommended budget system

The NAD/AE set-up makes a great hi-fi starter system

CD PLAYER
NAD C521i
★★★★★ £200 August 2002
This latest upgrade of the original C521 rewards with an exceptional performance for the money, whatever music you play. Tonally it's very evenly balanced, and if you reckon you can use your budget DVD player to play CDs, this NAD will make you think again.

AMPLIFIER
NAD C320BEE
★★★★★ £220 Sept 2002
NAD has long made a name for itself with high-quality budget hi-fi, and this latest stereo amp is a belter. There's bags of power on tap, and dynamics are excellent. Whatever music you play, the performance is breathtaking. A true hi-fi bargain.

SPEAKERS
Acoustic Energy Evo One
★★★★★ £180 August 2002
The Supertest-winning Evo Ones are our new budget speaker champions, combining refinement, dynamics and solid bass with beautifully built cabinets. These are astonishingly capable speakers for just £180, and make a great upgrade.

MIDRANGE £929 Next step up the rung? Here's our recommended mid-price set-up

CD PLAYER
Rotel RCD-02
★★★★★ £379 Nov 2002
This swanky-looking slimline CD player is a belter. Not only does it look smart, it's also a great all-round performer with a detailed and dynamic sound. Whatever music you play, the Rotel rewards with an exciting and powerful performance.

AMPLIFIER
Rotel RA-01
★★★★★ £250 Sept 2002
The RA-01 is the Best Buy-winning £350 RA-02 without a remote control. Everything else is identical, resulting in terrific bite and insight for an amplifier at this price. Build quality is first-rate, and combined with the RCD-02 it makes a formidable package.

SPEAKERS
B&W DM602S3
★★★★★ £300 August 2002
No surprises about our choice of speakers. B&W distributes Rotel in the UK, and the DM602S3s – long-time favourites of ours – are perfect partners for the Rotel electronics. They're big, for sure, but so is the sound, which remains taut and controlled at all times.

The Rotel combo works a treat with the B&W speakers

HIGH-END £1929 And if money's no object, throw caution to the wind and try this stunning combo

CD PLAYER
Quad 99CD-P
★★★★★ £1000 January 2003
This is one of the best players £1000 can buy. Bass has power and speed, while vocals are well projected and crystal clear. There's bags of punch and attack, too: this is a thrilling player when the music demands. It digs as deep into recordings as any we've heard.

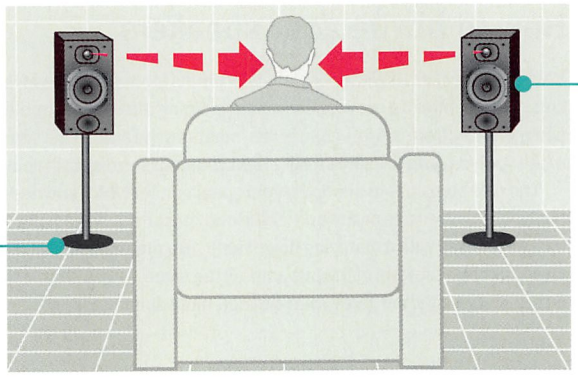
AMPLIFIER
Quad 99
★★★★★ £550 Nov 2003
The 99 may be Quad's entry-level powerhouse, but there's nothing basic about the way it sounds. With 85w per channel it will easily drive a wide range of speakers, and makes a perfect partner for the 99 CD player. The sound is snappy and uncompressed.

SPEAKERS
Quad 11L
★★★★★ £379 Awards 2002
Our Product of the Year speakers caused a sensation when we first heard them, and nothing has come close at the price since. They're finished to a standard that would shame models at twice the price, and combined with the Quad electronics deliver stunning results.

Where to position your speakers

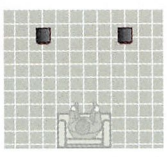
THE RIGHT HEIGHT

STANDS
With standmounters, get a stand that brings the speakers up to the right height. You'll probably find you get a much clearer image and a much sharper tone this way.



POSITIONING
When you're sitting in your favourite listening position, the tweeters – the little treble drive units – should be at about the same height as your ears.

REAR & SIDE WALLS Some speakers give their best response when close to a solid rear wall, which acts as a sounding-board and boosts bass.



TOEING-IN SPEAKERS By angling your speakers towards the listening position, you can often improve the stereo image. Imagine lines drawn out from the speakers, and angle them so they cross in front of your normal listening spot.

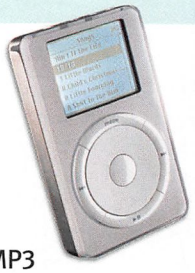
Adding extra kit to your hi-fi

Recorders – the pros and the cons

	Cassette	MiniDisc	MP3	CD-Recordable

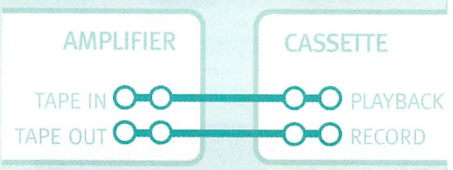


PROS	Cheap; plenty of prerecorded tapes available; most cars have cassette players; small and light, so ideal for portable use.	Digital (no hiss); easy to edit; light and robust; sound won't deteriorate over time.	Plenty of music available on the internet; no tapes or discs; easy to rip your CDs onto a portable.	Recordings virtually identical to the original; blank CD-R discs are getting cheaper (about £1 each).
CONS	Can suffer from background hiss; tape tends to wear out with use; can't edit recordings.	Can sound compressed; blank discs are slightly more expensive than cassette.	Heavy use of compression means sound quality can be impaired; you may have to pay for music downloads.	CD-RW discs are expensive (£2 each) and won't play in many older CD players; mistakes are permanent on write-once discs.
WHY BUY IT?	If you want a cheap and easy way of making your own compilations, cassette is ideal.	Perfect if you like to edit your own recordings, as you can move tracks around, delete them or splice them together.	More and more playback devices are now MP3-capable and many can store up to 1000 songs in their memory.	CD recordings offer the best sound quality, and the format is well proven worldwide.

Adding a MiniDisc or CD recorder

To add a MiniDisc or CD recorder, use a digital interconnect from CD to recorder. For playback, take a pair of analogue interconnects from the line out on the MD or CD recorder to a line in on the amp. To record digitally from an analogue source, use the tape loops.

Adding a cassette recorder



If you want to add a cassette recorder, look for the 'tape loop' sockets (above) which allow recording from, and playback through, the amplifier.

Turntables

To connect a turntable you will need an amp with a built-in phono stage, which will be either a moving magnet (MM) or moving coil (MC) design, or alternatively buy a separate phono amp. Many modern amps don't have a phono stage, or it's an optional extra, so check our Buying Guide for details (p115).

How to tune into analogue – and digital – radio

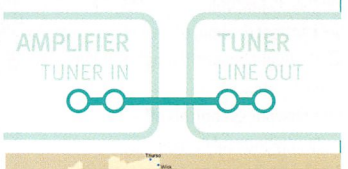
The vast majority of radio stations are still broadcast in analogue, be it on FM, medium wave or long wave. FM gives the best (stereo) sound quality and all modern radios are capable of receiving FM stations, although reception quality can vary depending on where you live, with transmissions being susceptible to interference. A good aerial helps.

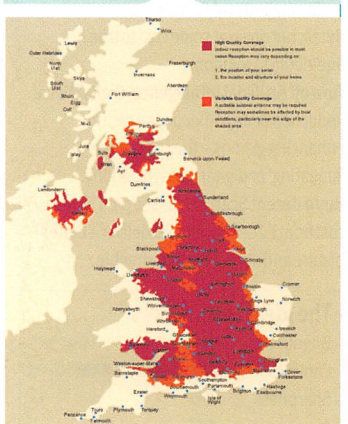
VideoLogic's portable digital radio

However, since 1995 the BBC has been simulcasting its main national stations (Radios 1,2,3,4 and 5) on its digital network. To receive digital transmissions you need a digital radio, and these are now available from as little as £100. A wide range of independent radio stations is also available on digital, including Classic FM, Virgin and Talk Radio.

Around 65 percent of the UK population can now receive the BBC's digital transmissions (see map), and 80 percent of independent stations. Phone the BBC (08700 100 123) or Digital One (0870 9090 0250) for advice.

The main advantage of digital transmissions is that you get a much clearer sound, without the hiss or interference prevalent on FM, and many of the newest stations are only available on the digital network.





The BBC claims to offer digital radio coverage for 65 percent of the population

SACD & DVD-A

The battle is now on to develop the next generation of 'super CD' formats, which will offer better quality sound than conventional CDs, and multichannel capability too.

There are two contenders: Super Audio CD (SACD) developed by Sony and Philips, and DVD-Audio (DVD-A), an extension of the DVD-Video format.

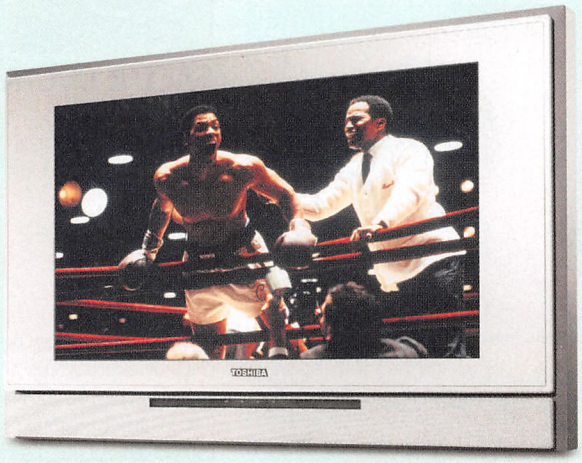
SACD abandons the Pulse Code Modulation (PCM) storage method of CD and replaces it with Direct Stream Digital (DSD), which represents the audio signal in single-bit form sampled at 2.8224MHz. This extends the signal frequency response to 100kHz compared with CD's 20kHz.

DVD-A retains the PCM-coding method of CD, but improves performance by extending word length to 24-bit from CD's 16-bit, while the sampling rate can more than quadruple to a maximum of 192kHz.

A range of SACD and DVD-A players are available now from £400.

HOME CINEMA SYSTEM BUILDER

Our simple guide to hooking up all your AV kit



Television

HOT OPTION Toshiba 32ZD26P £1300 ★★★★★

Our Product of the Year widescreen TV combines a gorgeous flatscreen picture and solid stereo sound, making it the ideal monitor for a home cinema system.

DVD player

HOT OPTION Pioneer DV-656A £400 ★★★★★

This truly universal player is another Product of the Year, offering superb DVD-Video playback as well as multichannel DVD-Audio and Super Audio CD music.

How to set up your TV

Position your set away from lights or move standing lamps and other light sources to avoid/minimise intrusive light reflection that can detract from the picture. Newer flatscreen sets are less prone to reflections than the older curved-screen type.

Dim the lights in your viewing room, or even better, turn them off altogether.

Reduce the brightness on your TV to roughly 35 percent.

Set contrast to about 65 percent to leave whites bright but not 'flaring', and give consistent blacks.

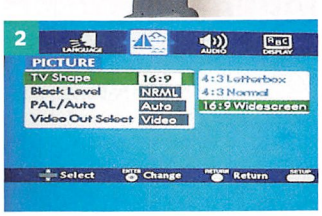
Turn sharpness controls off – they artificially 'intensify' areas of screen detail, but do so at some cost to true fine-detail resolution.

Turn off Artificial Intelligence, Digital Noise Reduction or any other digital picture-enhancing gizmos – they can cause 'smearing' or digital noise, or jerking.

Buy a decent Scart cable (see pic 1) These cost from £20-£40 and will deliver a better picture and sound than any freebie.

The ideal settings

Brightness
Contrast
Sharpness	OFF
AI	OFF
Scart input	RGB
Aspect ratios	16:9 or Wide



Use on-screen menus (see pic 2) to set the right aspect ratios on the TV (Wide) and DVD player (16:9). This'll access the anamorphic coding (or 'widescreen enhancement') on the disc for a correctly shaped, more detailed picture.

Play a DVD with lots of reds/oranges in it. Total Recall, Dances with Wolves and Red Planet work well, for example. Reduce the colour until red looks red, but fleshtones are natural not pink. If reds are overblown, you'll see flaring round the edges of things.

If you have a surround-sound set, use the built-in test tone to set all the speakers to the correct level. Avoid the temptation to set the rear speakers to too high a level.

How to set up your DVD

Use a Scart cable (see pic 3) to connect your DVD player to the TV. Make sure you use the Scart socket on the back of the TV which accepts an RGB signal, and connect the cable to the matching Scart on the back of the DVD player. A Scart carries both pictures and stereo sound.

Set the DVD player to RGB. The best picture comes via the RGB (red, green, blue) signal via the Scart cable that you've just connected. Use the on-screen menus to do this: press the set-up button and select RGB on the screen (see pic 4).

Set the correct screen size. You need to tell your player whether you're using a widescreen (16:9) or normal (4:3) TV. Assuming you're using a widescreen set, select the AV channel on the telly, and then press the set-up button on the DVD player's remote. Now select the widescreen mode (or 4:3 if you're watching a normal TV) from the menu screen.

Digital surround sound. In order to hear the best multichannel sound from your DVD player, you need to tell it to send a digital 'bitstream' from the digital output, using the on-screen menus . This will send Dolby Digital and DTS audio from the digital output into the AV amplifier.

Connect the digital output of the DVD player to the digital input of your home cinema amplifier using a digital interconnect. Be sure to use a proper digital interconnect: an ordinary hi-fi phono interconnect just won't do.

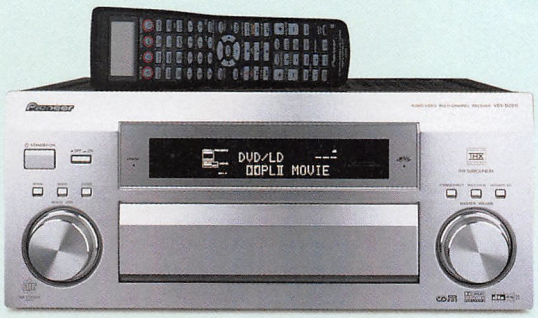
Mute the TV. Remember, the Scart socket will carry audio as well as video signals into your TV, so your telly will continue to make a sound through its built-in speakers. You don't want this, so mute the television using the mute button on the television's remote control.

The ideal settings

Video Out	RGB
Digital Out	Bitstream
DTS	On
NTSC Output	NTSC



Home cinema amplifier

HOT OPTION Pioneer VSX-D2011 £900 ★★★★★

The baby version of Pioneer's flagship VSX-AX10 at a third of the price. It too was tuned at AIR Studios and the result is a big, exciting and involving sound.

Speakers

HOT OPTION Acoustic Energy Aegis Evo 3B £950 ★★★★★

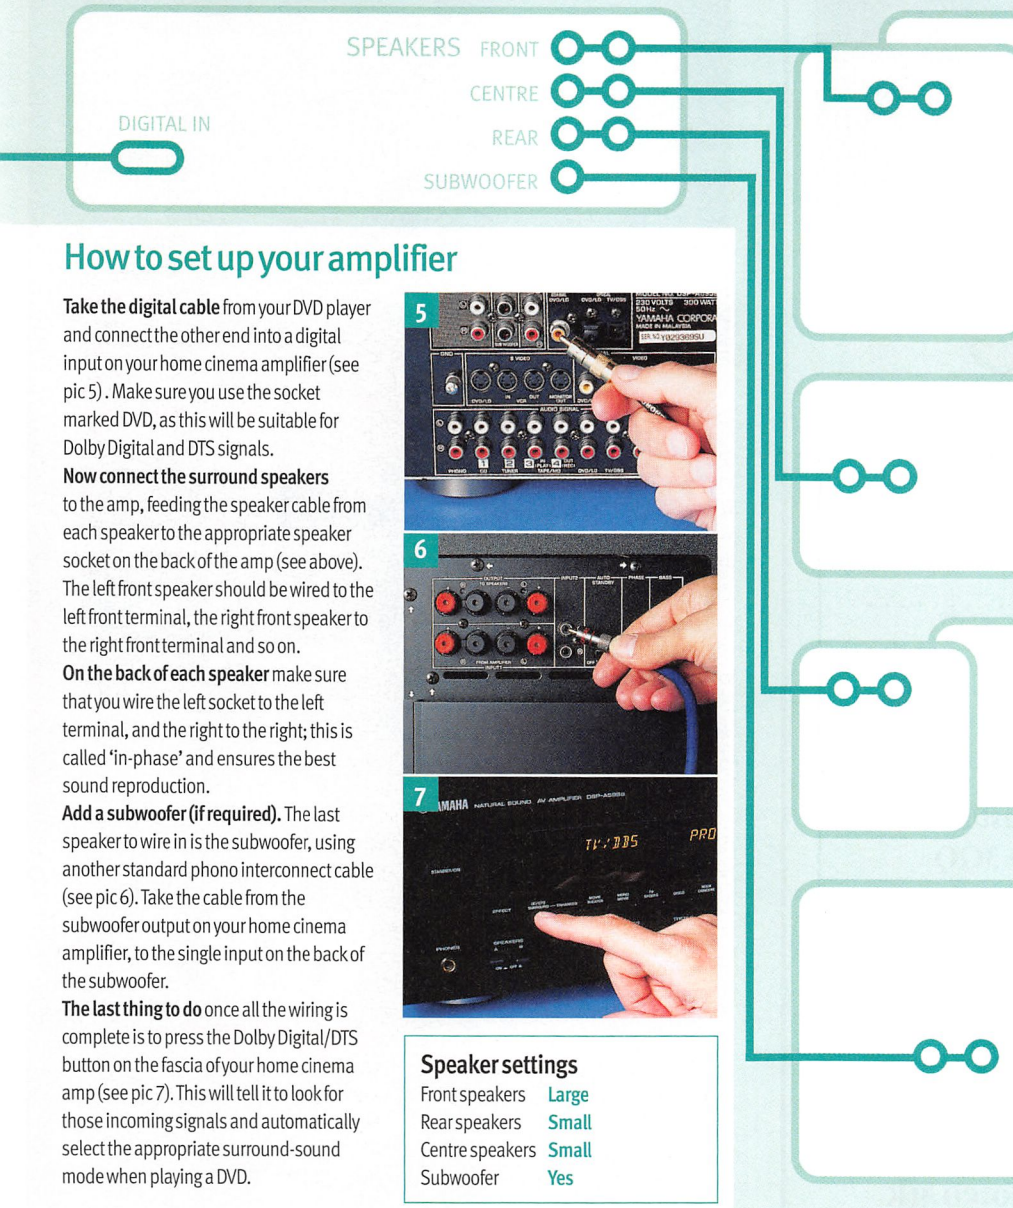
An exceptional do-it-all kit – fine in stereo, and fantastic fun with movies. Great dynamics, drive and focus, and the compact subwoofer adds plenty of bass clout.



Front speakers

For the best home cinema results, try to keep all three speakers at the same height, and the same distance away from your listening position. If possible, choose models from the same manufacturer, as this will help to ensure tonal consistency. If the front speakers are placed near the TV, make sure they're magnetically shielded so they don't interfere with the picture.

Centre speakers

A good centre speaker produces a clearer, more involving movie-watching experience. If you can, place your centre speaker under rather than on top of your TV. If you have to put it on the TV, isolate the centre speaker by using some Blu-Tac underneath it.

Rear speakers

A home cinema speaker package works as a set of five, and each element is as significant as the other. Don't spend the bulk of your budget on the front speakers and then skimp on the rear ones.

Subwoofers

If you're using small front speakers, the loss of bass can be compensated for with a dedicated subwoofer. This handles the low frequencies and delivers the weight and depth of film soundtracks. Home cinema amps and receivers have a dedicated bass channel output (which delivers the LFE, or low-frequency effect channel – the .1 in 5.1) and this is fed directly to the subwoofer.

How to set up your amplifier

Take the digital cable from your DVD player and connect the other end into a digital input on your home cinema amplifier (see pic 5). Make sure you use the socket marked DVD, as this will be suitable for Dolby Digital and DTS signals.

Now connect the surround speakers to the amp, feeding the speaker cable from each speaker to the appropriate speaker socket on the back of the amp (see above). The left front speaker should be wired to the left front terminal, the right front speaker to the right front terminal and so on.

On the back of each speaker make sure that you wire the left socket to the left terminal, and the right to the right; this is called 'in-phase' and ensures the best sound reproduction.

Add a subwoofer (if required). The last speaker to wire in is the subwoofer, using another standard phono interconnect cable (see pic 6). Take the cable from the subwoofer output on your home cinema amplifier, to the single input on the back of the subwoofer.

The last thing to do once all the wiring is complete is to press the Dolby Digital/DTS button on the fascia of your home cinema amp (see pic 7). This will tell it to look for those incoming signals and automatically select the appropriate surround-sound mode when playing a DVD.

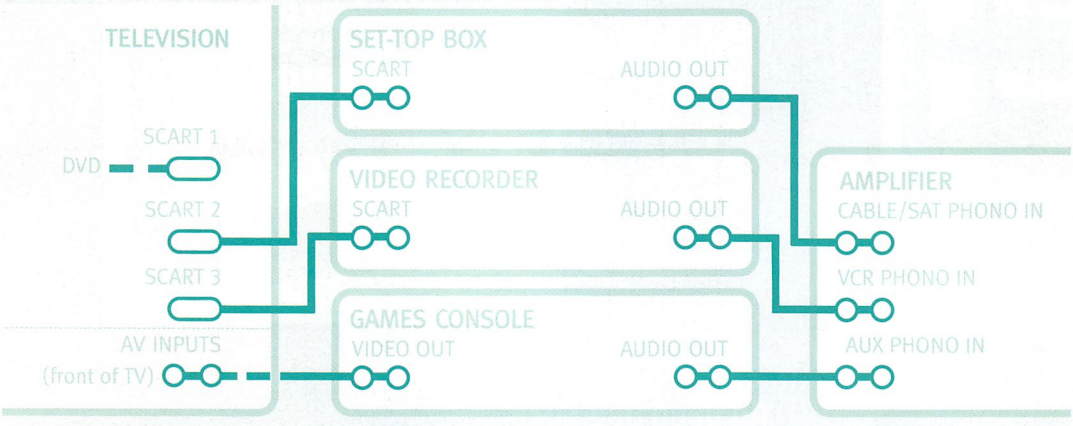
Adding other kit to your system

Scart cables, which carry signals from an AV source to your TV, vary from the basic leads supplied free with a TV, VCR or DVD, to better aftermarket (branded) versions that improve sound and picture quality. Most DVD players have RGB Scart connections for the optimum picture quality, although some offer component video, which is even better, and S-Video, which is OK.



Where should I put all those speakers?

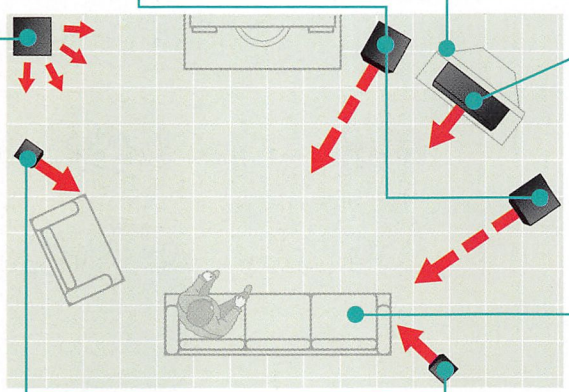
Rooms tend to fall into the these three types, with the first being the most common. It's far from ideal, but here's what to do...

FRONT SPEAKERS Keep your front speakers equidistant from the TV and angled towards the sofa.

TELEVISION Ensure the screen doesn't face any windows or lights to minimise reflections.

CENTRE SPEAKER Ideally place it under the TV, but if it must be on top, secure it with Blu-Tac to the cabinet.

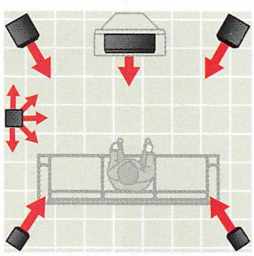
SUBWOOFER Bass is non-directional, so the subwoofer can be hidden away out of sight, either in a corner of the room or behind a chair or sofa.



SEATING The seating arrangement here gives you two choices for rear speakers – in the corner behind the chairs (but that'll give a very narrow and unrealistic surround field), or as shown here, which is better but makes the left-hand sofa seat the best place for sound.

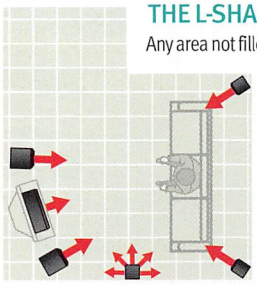
REAR SPEAKERS Tricky this, as the sofa is against a wall. Place one speaker either side of the seating.

THE IDEAL SQUARE SHAPED SCENARIO



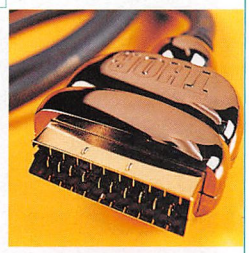
If the room is large, the set-up is quite straightforward, and you might want to add a subwoofer. Small square rooms are harder, because anything big will dominate the room and sound awful. Wall-mounted speakers will save space, and avoid using too powerful an amplifier.

THE L-SHAPED ROOM



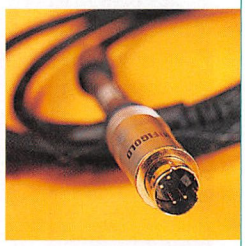
Any area not filled with kit will suck out much of the bass. Put the TV at the corner of the L, facing down the longer of the two axes. Place your main stereo speakers close to it, or alternatively opt for a subwoofer/satellite speaker system, as it can spread the bass without bad reflections.

CABLE CORNER



Scart

Scart cables, which carry signals from an AV source to your TV, are the normal method of connection for DVD players, VCRs and digital set-top boxes.

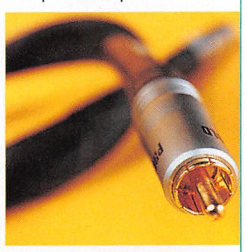


S-Video

Not all DVD players have Scart connections. S-Video, which splits the signal into chrominance (colour) and luminance (brightness), is one alternative.

Component

Some DVD players offer component video connections which offer even better picture quality than Scart, but you'll need a TV, projector or plasma with component inputs.



Coaxial

To feed the Dolby Digital or DTS sound signal from your DVD player into your home cinema amp you'll need a digital cable. Most AV amps accept the coaxial type shown here.

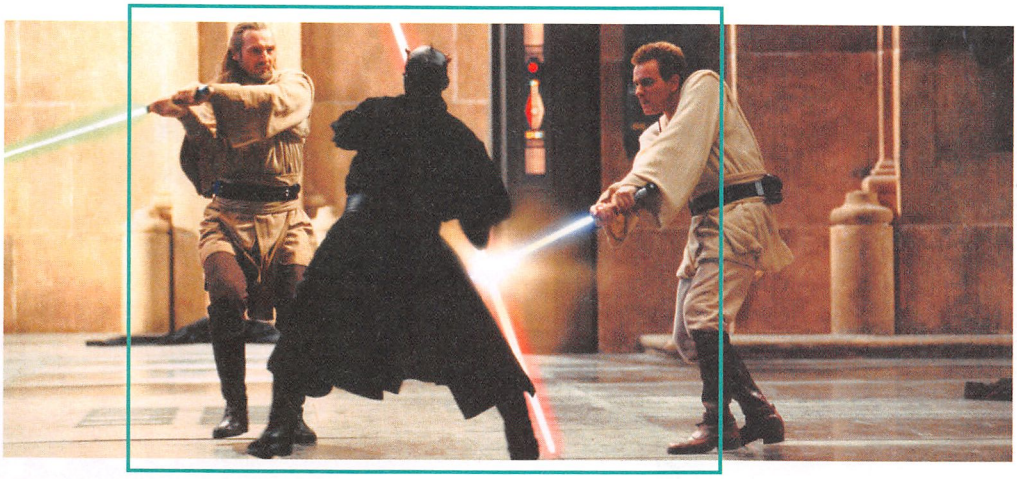
WHAT HI*FI?
SOUND & VISION



See what you're missing

So why do you need a widescreen TV? Simple. Normal TVs use the 1.33:1 (or 4:3) ratio, but Hollywood uses much wider film shapes, Letterbox (1.85:1), and Cinemascope (2.35:1). TV broadcasters often 'recut' films to make them fit a 4:3 TV, a process called 'pan and scan', and this means much of the original wide-aspect film image as shown at the cinema is lost (see above). Widescreen TVs use a compromise ratio of 1.78:1 (16:9), which gets far closer to the movie experience.

NORMAL 4:3

If you watch a 4:3 TV broadcast on a widescreen set you'll get black bars down each side. This is fine if the programme was originally shot in 4:3, but if it's a film cropped to fit the size of a normal TV you'll lose part of the image.

ANAMORPHIC WIDESCREEN

Most DVDs offer specialist widescreen coding called 'anamorphic enhancement' that squeezes the sides of the image inwards very slightly, while increasing quality. This lets Letterbox films (1.85:1) fill a 1.78:1 screen.

CINEMASCOPE

Watch a film in the widest Cinemascope (2.35:1) aspect ratio on a widescreen TV and you'll still get black bars at the top and bottom of the screen. This is quite normal: it just means you're seeing the image as the director intended.

Surround formats explained in full

DOLBY PRO-LOGIC/ PRO-LOGIC II

The original form of surround sound, which has left and right stereo channels, a centre dialogue channel, and mono rear channels for surround effects. Pro-Logic II is Dolby's latest version of the system, and sounds far better.

DOLBY DIGITAL 5.1 & DTS

DOLBY DIGITAL SURROUND EX & DTS ES MATRIX 6.1

A development of 5.1 surround audio that includes a 'matrixed' centre-rear audio signal to provide additional surround envelopment. Needs a decoder, with amplification, and one or two additional centre-rear speakers.

How to improve your speaker settings

Once you've connected everything, you need to adjust the speaker settings to suit the configuration of your system and the size of your room, in the following order:

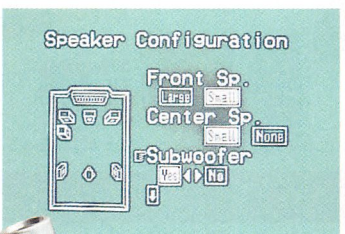
1 SPEAKER SIZE

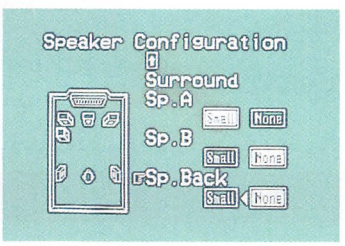
In the set-up menu on your surround amp, select the correct settings for the size of speakers you are using. Set the on-screen menu to 'small' for standmount speakers, and select Yes or No for the subwoofer option depending on whether you have one or not. For floorstanders, set the menu to 'large'.

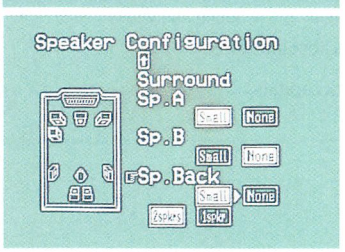
2 DELAY TIMES

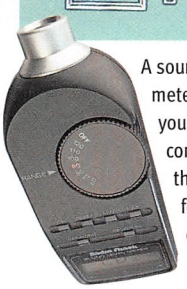
Set the delay times for each speaker to ensure the sound from all the speakers reaches you simultaneously – important for accurate effects. There are two ways of doing this: some home cinema amps and receivers allow you simply to measure the distance from your listening position (in metres) and then just key the information in via the onscreen menu. The amp will then set the delay times automatically.

If setting the delay times manually, use this formula: measure the distance in centimetres from each speaker to your listening position. Then calculate the difference (in cm) between the distances of the speakers furthest away from you, and those nearest to you. Usually, this means the difference in the distances from your seat to your front and your rear speakers. For every 30cm of this difference, add 1 millisecond of delay.









A sound-pressure-level meter (left) will help you set up speakers correctly. And follow the on-screen menus for setting speaker delays

Example: Front speakers 3.0 metres away
Rear speakers 2.1 metres away
Difference 0.9 metres = 3x30cm = 3 milliseconds of delay

3 SOUND LEVELS

Next you need to set each speaker to the correct sound level. Activate the test tone on your surround amp/receiver and using a sound pressure level meter (a very basic one is available in kit from Maplin for £5) set the main volume control to a normal listening level. Set the controls on the sound pressure meter to 75dB, 'C' weighting and 'slow' response.

Then, sitting in your listening position and with the sound meter pointing upwards (not towards the speakers), take a reading from the test tone generated from each speaker in turn, and adjust the volume level up or down until they all register 75dB on the display. Alternatively, you can set the levels by using your ears, but using a sound meter will be more accurate.

Recommended home cinema solutions

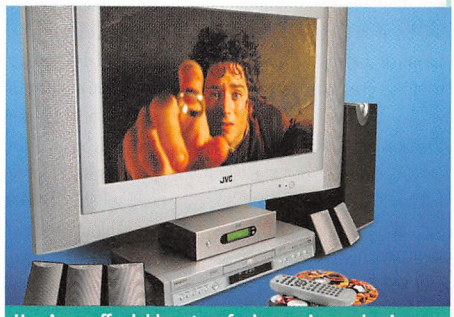
TELEVISION
JVC AV-28T25S
★★★★★ £600 August 2002
A stylish set with a first-rate picture that's vibrant and punchy yet subtle. There's fine black depth and shadow detail, and colours are as smooth as they are rich, whether fed from a DVD or off-air signals. The remote is as unfussy as the set-up procedure.

DVD PLAYER
Toshiba SD-220E
★★★★★ £180 August 2002
The SD-220E is polished, professional, durable and attractively styled. More importantly, it delivers a fantastic picture and is even passable for hi-fi use when playing CDs. Can be bought in multiregion form for £154 online.

SPEAKER SYSTEM
Acoustic Energy Aego P5
★★★★★ £600 August 2002
This little box of tricks is superb, with enough power to fill even large rooms with a big, enveloping sound. In this form a Dolby Digital/DTS processor is included, although you can buy it for £150 less without the electronics. Take our advice and buy the full kit.



Here's an affordable set-up for home cinema beginners

MIDRANGE £2840 Next step up the ladder? A better DVD player, six-speaker package and surround-sound amplifier...

TELEVISION
Toshiba 32ZD26P
★★★★★ £1300 Aug 2002
The astonishing thing about this Tosh is that it has component video inputs that can accept NTSC progressive-scan video from a suitably equipped DVD player, to give stunning pictures from imported DVD discs. Images are glorious, with oodles of colour.

DVD PLAYER
Toshiba SD-220E
★★★★★ £180 August 2002
One of our Best Buy DVD players in this year's Awards – a perfect partner for the Toshiba TV.

AV RECEIVER
Yamaha RX-V630RDS
★★★★★ £460 Oct 2002
Yamaha is back on form with this Supertest-winning model, which provides a greater sense of surround cohesion and a more natural balance than its rivals.

SPEAKER PACKAGE
KEF KHT2005
★★★★★ £900 June 2001
Cute looks, great sound and fantastic build quality – the KEF 'pods' have it all.

HIGH-END £15,795 If money isn't an issue, think projector, bigger speakers and suitably powerful electronics

PROJECTOR
Sim2 HT300
★★★★★ £8995 Oct 2002
If you need a big-screen image, this is one of the best projectors we've seen. Pictures have a truly cinematic quality to them.

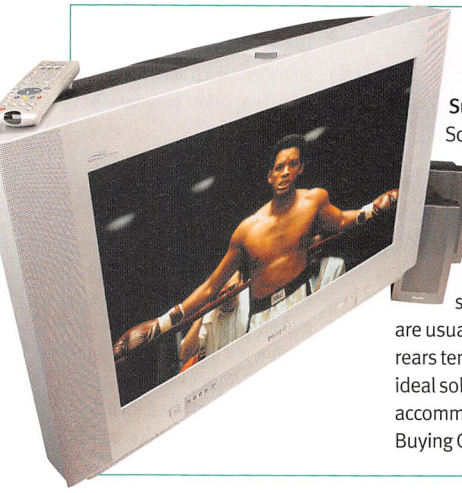
DVD PLAYER
Denon DVD-A1
★★★★★ £2500 Aug 2002
A stunning piece of kit, built to a staggeringly high standard. The picture quality is blisteringly good – partner the 'A1 with a high-end display and you'll be blown away.

AV RECEIVER
Pioneer VSX-AX10
★★★★★ £2700 July 2002
Worthy of the 'best integrated AV amp in the world' tag. Handles dynamics with genuine venom. You don't just hear film explosions, you feel them.

SPEAKER PACKAGE
Mordaunt-Short 500 THX
★★★★★ £1600 Sept 2001
This set-up is stylish, highly capable for home cinema and effective in stereo. A quality package at a sensible price.

A big screen needs a big sound – this set-up has both

ALTERNATIVE SOLUTIONS



Surround-sound TV
Some televisions come with built-in Dolby Digital surround sound and extra speakers, for a simple one-box solution. They can't match the performance of a separates set-up, but the front speakers are usually built into the set and the rears tend to be quite small, so it's an ideal solution for those who can't accommodate lots of extra boxes. Our Buying Guide lists models tested.

Hi-fi kit
You can use your existing stereo hi-fi system to drive the front left and right channels, and then add a surround sound processor (such as Yamaha's £300 DSP-E800) and extra speakers for the centre and rear channels. This will preserve the sound quality of your stereo hi-fi when playing CDs, and means you don't have to throw away all your existing hi-fi equipment.

PlayStation 2
You may not know it, but a PlayStation will play DVDs too, so if you already own one you can hook it into a surround system and use it for watching movies.

Glossary

Baffled by too much techno-speak? Allow us to lend a hand...

A

AAD Seen on CD cases, meaning the music was recorded and mastered in analogue form – first two As – but stored digitally.
ADD Music recorded in analogue form (A), mastered or remastered digitally (D), and then stored digitally on CD (the third D).
AMPLIFIER Boosts signals to drive speakers. Can be one-box (integrated) or have separate pre and power sections.
ANALOGUE LPs/cassette tapes store audio in non-digital form directly related to the signal.
ANAMORPHIC Anamorphically enhanced DVD discs have been coded to offer improved picture quality on widescreen TV sets and banish most, if not all of, the letterbox effect, too.

B

BASS Low frequencies, often hard to reproduce. A review that says bass is slow means it goes 'whoompa-whoompa' and can dominate the music. The ideal is good bass extension allied to speed and rhythm.
BASS REFLEX A speaker design using air-flow from a port in the cabinet to help bass reproduction.

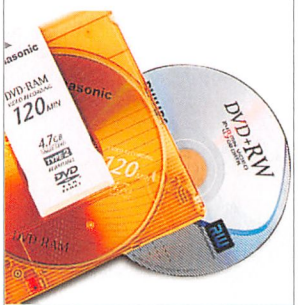
BIAMPING Each drive unit of a speaker is driven by a separate amp channel, so a pair of two-way speakers needs two stereo amps, and two runs of cable to each speaker. See biwiring.
BINDING POST Speaker terminal having a threaded collar for gripping bare wires and sometimes a socket to take banana plugs too.
BIT A single piece of digital information, basically an 'on/off' signal. Digital-to-analogue converters turn strings of bits into audio signals.
BITSTREAM One method of turning digital CD data into analogue signals. Bitstream digital-to-analogue converters process single bits of digital data much faster than multibit DACs, which work on chunks of digital data.
BIWIRING Some of the benefits of biamping but at lower cost. You need suitable speakers (with two sets of inputs and a split crossover), then send twin runs of cable from the amp (again if suitable) to each speaker.
BRIDGING Increasing power by connecting a stereo power amp for use in mono, then adding a second bridged-stereo amp for the other channel. Power typically triples, but the amps must be designed to be bridged.

C

CARTRIDGE The device which actually plays the record. It converts the wobbles in the record's groove into electrical signals for your amp. See moving magnet and moving coil.
CD-R CD-Recordable. Uses a special blank disc in a recording CD player. Once recorded it can't be erased, but plays in standard CD players when 'fixed up'.
CD-RW Rewritable discs that can be erased and recorded on again and again. Work on all CD-R recorders but not all conventional CD players or in-car units.
CLASS A Amp in which positive and negative half cycles are amplified together. Runs hot, as the transistors in the power amp are on all the time, but has high sound quality.
CLASS B Positive and negative halves of the signal dealt with by different parts of the circuit, the output devices switching continually. Amp runs cooler, though the sound is not as pure.
COLORATION This is a shift away from the natural rendition of music. Coloration is undesirable 'boomy' bass, a 'nasal' midband or a splashy treble.
COMPRESSION Used by radio stations to reduce level differences between loud and soft parts of music. Helps in-car and transistor sound, but can be awful heard through a hi-fi tuner.
CROSSOVER Circuit inside loudspeakers which splits the incoming signal, sending the high frequencies to the tweeter and the low ones to the woofer.

D

DAB Digital Audio Broadcasting: digital radio on both BBC and independent stations. Offers hiss-free sound.
DAC Digital-to-analogue converter, turning on/off pulses into analogue sound. CD players have DACs built in. Separate DACs can upgrade a CD player or other digital player/ recorder, or can be used with dedicated CD transports.
DATA REDUCTION Lowers the amount of data needed to store music. Sony's MiniDisc uses a system called ATRAC (Adaptive Transform Acoustic Coding), removing signals its designers think you can't hear.
DDD On CD cases – music recorded and mastered digitally and stored digitally on CD.
DECIBEL (dB) Measures sound pressure. A change of 1dB is just about audible, while +10dB sounds like the level has been doubled.
DIGITAL OUTPUT Allows the digital signal to be recorded or processed by an offboard DAC. Electrical or optical (fibre optic) outputs allow this.
DISTORTION Signals that are unwanted or signal changes added by the equipment itself.
DOLBY B, C + S Noise-reduction systems to boost quiet signals when recording and reduce them on playback, cutting hiss.
DOLBY DIGITAL A home cinema sound system from Dolby, using five discrete channels of digital sound plus a separate channel for a subwoofer. Formerly known as AC-3.
DOLBY DIGITAL SURROUND EX Development of Dolby Digital 5.1 surround audio that includes a 'matrixed' centre-rear audio signal to provide additional surround envelopment. Requires a suitable decoder, with amplification, and either one or two additional centre rear speakers. See also THX Surround EX.
DOLBY HX PRO Not noise reduction, but a way to record more high frequency info without distortion (often called 'increasing headroom').
DOLBY SURROUND Encodes sound for rear effects channels into the stereo tracks. Needs to be replayed through a decoder to produce surround sound though.
DOLBY PRO-LOGIC Uses an extra centre speaker at the front for dialogue, and mono rear channels for surround effects.
DOLBY 3 STEREO In a home cinema amplifier this delivers surround channel information through the front left and right speakers, and centre channel sound through a third speaker.
DTS Discrete 5.1 channel home cinema digital sound system – rival to Dolby Digital.
DTS ES MATRIX 6.1 Variation on the Dolby Digital Surround EX theme; similar results
DTS ES DISCRETE 6.1 The only 'true' 6.1 system, with an entirely discrete digital channel providing centre-rear channel effects.
DUAL MONO Some amps are designed to keep left and right signals separate to minimise interference between them.
DVD-AUDIO New audio format which offers multichannel surround sound music and high quality 24-bit/96kHz stereo.
DVD-VIDEO Video format on CD-sized disc – huge capacity for movies, with multiple languages, widescreen pictures and multichannel surround sound.



DVD-R Write-once recordable DVD format supported by Pioneer. Recordings can't be erased.
DVD+RW Developed by Philips, this alternative rewritable format can record up to four hours of DVD-Video on a 4.7Gb disc.
DYNAMIC RANGE The range, in dB, between largest and smallest signals reproduced by hi-fi.

E

ELECTROSTATIC Speakers that use the force of high voltages to push and pull a thin light diaphragm, which produces the sound.

F

FREQUENCY High-pitched sounds have a high frequency, low-pitched ones a low frequency. Audible sounds range from 16Hz to 20kHz.

H

HDCD High Definition Compatible Digital – a coding system for CD which aims to get better sound. Needs a decoder to be heard.
HERTZ (Hz) Unit of frequency. One Hz means a signal has one cycle per second.
HORN LOADING Improves a drive unit's efficiency and output, using a structure within the speaker shaped like a horn. Works like the trumpet on an old-fashioned gramophone.

I

IMPEDANCE Electrical property. A low impedance draws a high current flow from the source, while a high impedance draws a little. Speakers with a low impedance are more difficult for an amplifier to drive.

L

M

MIDBAND The frequency range where most of the instruments and voices are heard. Vital if singers, etc, are to sound natural.
MINIDISC Sony's 64mm magneto-optical disc format. Re-recordable and easy to edit.

IN DEPTH | HARD-DISK RECORDERS

ONCE THE PRESERVE of the computer world, hard-disk drives have made the leap into the sound and vision domains in a range of ways. We first saw them in the audio world at the core of digital music jukeboxes – such as the array we review on p76 – where the use of hard-disk storage of music files in MP3, WAV or WMA format lets you carry thousands of tracks around with you. Some jukeboxes offer support for other sorts of files – digital photos or documents, for example.

Hi-fi separates-style hard-disk audio recorders are also becoming available – notably Yamaha's impressive CDR-HD1300E (p50), which also includes a CD recorder. The most recent development is hybrid hard-disk/DVD recorders, which – much like the Yamaha audio system – allows you to make recordings onto the hard drive with the option of later editing and transfer onto recordable DVD discs.

With hard-disk manufacturers constantly working to increase the capacity of their drives without increasing their physical size, we'll see more flexible audio and video systems emerging. The higher storage capacity of these devices – for example, Toshiba has announced a video recorder with a 160GB drive – will enable users to choose between storing either more or higher-quality recordings.

MONOBLOC An independent mono power amp, so two are required for a stereo system.
MOVING COIL Cartridge design with a stylus connected to coils which move in relation to fixed magnets so as to create electrical signals. Lower output than moving magnet.
MOVING MAGNET Cartridge design in which a tiny magnet connected to the stylus moves relative to a fixed coil in the body, generating the signal.
MP3 MPEG 1, layer 3. The compression system used for downloading music files from the internet to a PC or MP3 recording device. It reduces file sizes by a factor of 12 to enable much faster downloads.

N

NICAM CD-quality digital stereo sound transmitted alongside the picture during terrestrial TV broadcasts. Your TV needs to be Nicam to receive a stereo signal.

O

OHM Unit of resistance to current. Impedance of a speaker is measured in ohms – the lower the figure the harder it is to drive.
OVERSAMPLING Used in DAC systems. Increases signal frequency, making it easier for conversion circuitry to filter out unwanted signals.

P

PHONO STAGE Cartridges output signals at much lower levels than CD players and tape decks. Many amplifiers have the extra amplification built-in, but increasing numbers don't, and require an add-on phono amplifier.
PMPO Stands for peak music power, used on gear like mini systems and ghetto-blasters to make them look more powerful.
POWER AMPLIFIER Supplies audio signals from the source component to the loudspeakers.
POWER HANDLING The maximum safe power for speakers. But be aware that it's easier to damage speakers with an amp of too low power driven hard, than with too much power.
PREAMPLIFIER The control part of an amp. Built into integrated amps, but can be separate and used with power amp or active loudspeakers.
PRO-LOGIC see Dolby.

R

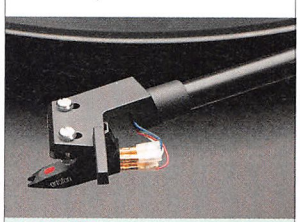
RDS Radio Data System: data piggybacked on FM radio allowing RDS tuners to display the names of stations, and perform a wide range of station-seek and switching functions.

S

SAMPLING RATE How fast a digital recorder or player samples a signal. CD and MiniDisc use a rate of 44.1kHz – ie 44,100 samples per second – while DAT recorders offer a choice of 48kHz or 44.1kHz, and Digital Audio Broadcasting works on 32kHz.
SIGNAL-TO-NOISE RATIO This describes the difference between the level of the audio signal and the level of unwanted noise present in that signal. The larger the figure, which is measured in dB, the lower the noise present in the signal will be.
SIX-CHANNEL INPUT Many DVD players now have built-in Dolby Digital decoders. To take advantage of these they need to be connected to a home cinema amp with a six-channel input.
SUBWOOFER A separate woofer box to produce the deep lows smaller speakers can't reach.
SUPER AUDIO CD (SACD) Developed by Sony and Philips, SACD uses 1-bit Direct Stream Digital (DSD) recording technology. Most discs are dual layer, with a standard CD layer which will play on a conventional CD player and a second SACD layer for improved performance when replayed on a SACD machine.

T

TAPE LOOP A pair of sockets on an amp letting the signal out for recording on a tape deck and another pair to let the signal back in for replay.
THX Developed by LucasFilm, this is a set of standards for Dolby Pro-Logic gear, which should guarantee a certain quality of home cinema sound. Needs electronics and speakers made to exacting specifications.
THX SURROUND EX Decoding system for Dolby Digital Surround EX software. Mode can also be applied to DTS-ES software. Usually uses two centre-rear channel speakers.



TONEARM The device on a turntable which holds the cartridge in place.

TOROIDAL TRANSFORMER Transformers bring mains voltages down to the levels required. Toroidal transformers (doughnut-shaped) get better stability and less flux leakage (magnetic radiation that can interfere with other circuits).
TRANSIENTS Short and sudden events in music such as a cymbal crash or the crack of a stick on a snare drum. Transients are difficult to reproduce.
TREBLE High frequencies. When we say treble is splashy, it means that cymbals, for example, sound like they're going 'tizzshsh', rather than having a sting and a crispness to them.
TRIAMPING/TRIWIRING Like biamping and biwiring, but for three-way speakers. Needs three runs of cable in the case of triwiring and three stereo amps if you want to triamp the speakers.
TWEETER The small speaker driver which handles the treble frequencies.

V

VALVE Amplifying device: electrodes in a glass vacuum enclosure. Produces a warm, seductive sound.

W

WATT Unit of power. More watts mean more power, but how loud a system sounds also depends on speaker sensitivity and room size. See PMPO.
WAVELENGTH The length of a soundwave. For example, sound at 50Hz in air has a wavelength of around 6.9 metres.
WIDESCREEN More and more TV programmes, and nearly all DVD discs, are shown in widescreen format. This can vary from 14:9 (a compromise ratio used by TV broadcasters) to 16:9 which is the ratio used on widescreen TV sets and most DVDs. Many films shown at the cinema are in 21:9, so you'll still get black bars on a widescreen television. Ordinary 'square' TVs are 4:3.
WOOFER The large drive unit in a speaker which produces the bass frequencies.

Hot newcomer

Primare Pre30/A30.2

£1200/£1200

This pre/power amplifier combination from Primare offers a winning mix of power and poise plus an impeccable build – it looks even more expensive than it actually is. It produces a natural and controlled sound, but it's able to shake the walls when the recording – of any musical genre – demands. A powerhouse pairing for higher-end systems.

Mission Cinema m70 £480

If you want a great-value, stylish home cinema speaker package that performs to a decent standard with movies and music, Mission's new Cinema m70 is our recommendation. Its satellite speakers (available in silver or black) may be bigger than those of rival sub/sat packages, but they're better, too: for warmth, weight, extension and drive, this kit excels.

Hi-fi best buys

Here's the kit that's currently top of our favourites list in three price categories. Every month we'll update the list as new rivals enter the market and take on the top contenders in our group tests

	BUDGET	MIDRANGE	HIGH-END
CD players Full product listings p131	NAD C541i £330 Product of the Year 2002. A superb player with an exciting, vibrant sound.	Arcam CD82T £600 A cultured and musically involving player – a big step up from the CD72T.	Meridian 588 £2100 An excellent slice of high-end hi-fi, combining detail, power and finesse.
Recorders Full product listings p133	Yamaha KX-580SE £250 Best Buy cassette deck in the Awards 2002. Great for replay and recording.	Pioneer PDR-609 £280 Our 2002 Product of the Year CD recorder. Easy to use and great value.	Yamaha CDR-HD1300E £600 Combines CD and hard-disk playback/ recording – sounds great and easy to use.
Turntables Full product listings p135	Pro-ject Debut II £115 Best Buy in 2002. Fantastic vinyl value – and a great starter deck.	Audio Note TT1 £725 Affordable, well built and sounds excellent. Product of the Year 2002.	Clearaudio Master Ref £14,150 Quite simply one of the best turntables we've heard. Mad money, but worth it.
Tuners Full product listings p137	Denon TU-260MkII £130 An excellent-value analogue tuner, and a Best Buy in the Awards 2002.	Pure DRX-701ES £249 A top-quality digital radio at a sensible price. Product of the Year 2002.	TAG McLaren T32R £2290 State-of-the-art digital radio offering DAB, FM, MW and LW tuners.
Integrated amps/receivers Full product listings p139	Rotel RA-01 £250 Based on the Award-winning RA-02, but £100 less, this amp is a cracker.	Roksan Kandy MkIII £550 Best Buy in 2002. The latest update of the sweet-sounding Kandy is a treat.	Primare A30.1 £1500 We first heard this amp four years ago, and we still love it. Best Buy in 2002.
Preamps Full product listings p141	Creek OBH-12 £199 A purist preamplifier, designed for use in simple set-ups, but it works a treat.	Cyrus Pre aCA7.5 £700 Best Buy in 2001. Sounds great with Cyrus's SmartPower power amp.	Krell KRC-3 £3490 The preamp we use in our hi-fi reference system with the FPB400CX power amp.

Home cinema in a box Full product listings p205	 Creative Inspire 5.1 £280 Fantastic value. Offers a full, open presentation and powerful sound.	 Sony DAV-S550 £600 Product of the Year 2002 – includes multichannel SACD capability.	 TEAC Legacy 700 £1100 Outstanding performance and great sound from this stylish system.
Plasma TVs Full product listings p209	Panasonic TH-42PW4B £5000 A superb display, although the TV tuner is extra. Still worth the money, though.	Pioneer PDP-433HDE £5995 A proper plasma TV, with tuner included. Picture quality is first-rate.	 Pioneer PDP-503HDE £8000 Not exactly cheap, but sensational style and picture quality even at this price.
Projectors Full product listings p209	DreamVision CinexOne £3100 An outstanding DLP design: fine image-quality for the price and compact size.	Yamaha LPX-500 £4800 A revised version of the excellent Epson EMP-TW100. Outstanding picture.	SIM2 HT300 Plus £8995 The best argument yet for a DLP projector – great image quality and looks cool.

See and hear the award-winners in store

Are you someone who is not easily satisfied? Someone who demands the very best, the latest or perhaps the purest? Then you are going to love seeing what Unilet have in store.

Whether you are looking for a turntable or a state-of-the-art home cinema set up, or perhaps that elusive speaker cable that you read about in an American hi-fi magazine, you are likely to find it at Unilet. For years Unilet has been the place for the serious audiophile.

So why not come in and see us? You'll find us tucked away off the High Street, opposite Waitrose in New Malden, Surrey. We're just yards away from the BR station and a couple of minutes from the A3.

Myryad MCD 600	1300	★★★★☆	Dec 01	Thrilling stuff, a fine example of what the right kind of four-figure spend can deliver.	B	C	24	Yes	Yes
Naim CD5	1150	★★★★☆	Dec 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Still a fine player but it's no-longer a class leader.	M	No	99	Yes	Yes
Naim CDX	2470	★★★★★	Feb 99	Excellent player; add Naim's XPS power supply and it becomes something stunning.	MH	No	99	Yes	Yes
Naim CDS II/XPS	4165	★★★★☆	Jul 99	Used with the XPS power supply it's staggeringly agile, gutsy and exciting.	MH	No	99	Yes	Yes
Primare D30.2	1500	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Solid, but only works at optimum levels when connected through balanced outputs.	M	C	20	Yes	Yes
Quad 99CD-P	1000	★★★★★	Jan 03	Stonking - excellent at the heart of a digital-biased system as it has six digital inputs.	B	No	50	Yes	No
Roksan Caspian	995	★★★★★	Dec 02	Ageing gracefully - it remains a solid buy that will work well in a wide range of systems.	B	C	20	Yes	No
Roksan Attessa DP3.P	1600	★★★★★	Apr 99	An exceptional player from Roksan with striking styling and an ear-friendly sound.	B	C	20	Yes	No
Saxon CD700	750	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Impressive player and careful partnering could make the most of its qualities.	B	O	0	Yes	Yes
Shearne Audio Phase 7	1499	★★★★★	Apr 99	Extremely listenable with a substantial sound, and it's HDCD compatible.	M	B	20	Yes	No
Sim Audio Moon Eclipse	4200	★★★★☆	Apr 00	Very worthy machine that can sound breathtaking when carefully partnered.	M	B	30	Yes	Yes
Sugden Bijou CD Master	1299	★★★★☆	Nov 01	Unusually cute styling and plenty of weight and authority - bass lines can sound slow.	M	C	99	Yes	No
Sugden Masterclass	2750	★★★★★	Jun 02	Excellent in its own right and makes a superb combination with the Masterclass amp.	M	B	99	Yes	No
T+A CD1240R	1800	★★★☆☆	Jul 02	Solidly designed but it sadly doesn't live up to the promise of its build and technology.	BM	C/O	20	No	Yes
T+A CD3000R	6000	★★★★☆	Dec 99	A heavyweight player in all senses of the word but it can be a tad soulless.	BM	C/O	20	No	Yes
TAG McLaren Audio CD20R	1249	★★★★☆	Nov 98	High levels of performance match its build standard, but it faces stiff competition.	B	C	60	Yes	Yes
Talk Electronics Thunder 3.1	1700	★★★★★	Sep 02	Stunning machine showing that there's still life in high-end CD players.	H	O	24	Yes	Yes

Audiomeca Obsession	899	★★★★★	Jun 99	Unusual, and unusually classy - that's the Elixir DAC combined with the Obsession.	T	44.1/16	C/B	99	No
Mark Levinson No 37	3995	★★★★★	Jun 96	Uses an industrial CD-ROM drive - it's built like a truck and a delight to use.	T	-	C	99	Yes
Meridian 566.24	1475	★★★★☆	Feb 99	Good range of input/output flexibility but with 500 transport it lacks spark and spirit.	D	32/44.1/48	C/O		No
Monarchy Audio Model 18	595	★★★★☆	Aug 95	Improve the imagery and detail of top CD players; sounds warmer with powerful rock.	D	32/44.1/48	C/O/A		No
TAG McLaren Audio CDT20R-T2L	1249	★★★★★	Nov 00	Combine with the TAG DPA32R DAB digital preamplifier for an extremely musical player.	T	44.1/16	C/O/A	59	Yes

KEY | DAC Turns digital data into an analogue signal to feed to your amp, and can have a major influence on the sound. B = Singlebit including Delta/Sigma, M = multibit, H = hybrid, R = Ring, O = other. Sampling/bit rate The maximum resolution of a DAC. CD is 44.1kHz/16-bit, full-blown DVD-Audio is 192kHz/24-bit, SACD uses its own single-bit system, DSD. Memory The number of tracks that can be stored. Digital out/in Bear in mind that the input on a DAC should match the transport's digital outputs O = optical, C = coaxial electrical, B = BNC electrical, A = AES/EBU balanced electrical

DENON

The AVC-A1SR / DVD-A1 combination truly redefines the state-of-the-art. The A1SR is designed to be the digital-decoding centre of an integrated system in conjunction with the new DVD-A1. When the two components are connected using the Denon Digital Link this enables the A1SR to receive digital audio data from the DVD-A1's transport, including DVD soundtracks plus two-channel and multi-channel DVD-Audio. The data is decoded and processed by the AVC-A1SR's digital electronics for ultimate sonic performance.

KEY | Sampling rate converter Both CD-R/RW and MiniDisc decks record at the same sampling frequency as CD, ie 44.1kHz. Here we indicate if there's a sampling rate converter for use with other digital sources, such as digital radio tuners. Format What kind of recorder is it? Currently the mainstream choice is between MiniDisc (MD), CD-Recordable (CD-R) and CD-Rewritable (CD-RW) . Expect to see more machines also offering Hard Disc recording (HD), or a HD/CD-RW mix in the near future. Inputs/outputs A digital input allows sources such as CD to be recorded, output delivers digital data to a D/A converter or digital recorder. Line inputs are for analogue sources. O = optical, C = coaxial: L=line

Yamaha KX-580SE	250	★★★★★	Aug 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Quality copies and good sound.	1	2	B/C/S/HXPro	Auto	Yes

KEY | Decks How many decks does the machine have? There are some single-deck recorders, but twin-decks are very popular. Heads The minimum for any recorder is two: one to erase the tape, the other to record, but three-head decks allow recordings to be monitored as they are made. Dolby What kind of noise reduction is there? Dolby B and the more advanced Dolby C are usual, while Dolby S gives enhanced hiss reduction and better sound. Calibration/Fine Bias The calibration system (usually automated) found on some decks dials in the deck to the tape in use. Fine bias allows the treble to be adjusted.

KEY | Speeds 33⅓rpm for LPs, 45rpm for singles. A few offer 78rpm but very old discs are best played with a dedicated cartridge. Operation Automatic and semi-automatic turntables lift the arm on reaching the end of a record, but sound quality suffers. The best-sounding turntables are manual. Arm Is there one, or is it just a motor unit? Cartridge Is one provided as part of the package? Drive How is the platter driven? Belt drive offers the best isolation from motor noise

KEY | Type Modern hi-fi tuners offer stereo reception either on FM analogue (A) or digital radio, also known as DAB (D). Some even offer both modes of reception. Bands D = digital radio/DAB, FM = FM stereo, MW = medium wave, LW = long wave. Presets How many memory positions are available to store favourite stations? Less important with digital radio, due to the way the broadcasts are received and accessed. RDS The Radio Data System, transmitted with FM analogue broadcasts, allows a range of extra facilities including Radiotext, station-naming and automatic retuning.

KEY | Type M = Mono, S = Stereo. Power The maximum output per channel, quoted in Watts. More power doesn't make a better amp, but it can help! Speakers How many pairs can it drive? Bridgeable Some stereo power amplifiers can be converted into more powerful mono amps, to which you can add a second 'bridged' amp for a more powerful performance. Typically the power increase is around 3x, so a 60w per channel stereo amplifier becomes a 180W mono model. Only amps specifically designed for bridging can be used like this – check with a dealer if in doubt.

MJ ACOUSTICS

British company, M J Acoustics, was created to pursue the reproduction of the most natural sounding, true to life bass possible with current technology, but at a price that favours both the wealthy and not-so-wealthy enthusiast. Each unit is seriously over-engineered with generous headroom in all important areas. Components are hand picked and specifically designed into the system.

Over the last year the Pro 50 has received glowing reviews from all kinds of media in the hi-fi industry and was awarded 'Best Buy' by What Hi-Fi? Sound and Vision in their 2002 awards. The new Reference 1 subwoofer is already beginning to receive excellent press. Producing a low 10Hz, it features a downward firing 10.5" long throw aluminium driver, 120w RMS amplifier, XLR and RCA low level connectors with high and low level simultaneous connection capability and infinitely variable frequency contour.

New from Marantz is the SR4300 A/V Receiver. Equipped with fully discrete amplification for all six channels, each channel delivering 80-watts RMS into 8 ohms across the entire frequency range of 10Hz up to 100kHz, it promises to get maximum potential from the latest formats such as SACD and DVD-Audio. Additionally, it features 6.1 channel audio pre-outs and S-Video and composite video outputs. Pre-set surround modes include Movie, Hall, Matrix, and Stadium. DTS-ES, Dolby Digital-EX and Dolby ProLogic II processing are built in to ensure access to Europe's most established DVD video and audio standards. An FM/AM RDS tuner with 30 pre-sets, pre-coded system remote control and user-friendly interface all simplify the A/V experience.

PRO-JECT

Debut II Turntable (Black) £114.95

"The original Debut turntable romped away with a Product of the Year Award in 1999, and the MKII version continues the extremely good work. It's a simple affair, that's easy to set up, but don't let the price fool you - it sounds a whole lot more expensive than that. This is a fine turntable, and it clearly reveals the benefits of listening to vinyl, with a rich and detailed soundstage, and a good dynamic response.

It's available in six funky colours, so you should find one to suit your decor, and at just a smidge over £100, you can have no excuse not to keep that old vinyl collection in employment for a good few years yet."

RA-02 Amplifier "The amp has a fast, detailed and yet satisfyingly full presentation. That allows it to make a fine job of the beats of Groove Armada's Goodbye Century set without losing sight of the fine details of the mix, and also husking out Marianne Faithfull's deliciously smutty vocals on Kissing Time with real relish. Add in decent levels of equipment - and the convenience of remote control, and we reckon Rotel has a winner on its hands."

Aegis Evo One Speakers £179.95

Free Speaker Cable* worth £30 with ALL Speakers over £170

"The original Aegis Ones were great speakers, to the extent that they were category winners in our 1998 awards. Since then a host of new models have raised the standards in the sub-£200 category, and the Aegis Ones soon went from stunner to also ran. AE's response to that is an EVO version.

The Aegis Ones genes are clearly evident. The original's refinement and bass weight are preserved and backed up with better openness and more free-flowing dynamic ability. The old speakers would have delivered a cool and calm version of Pink's Missundaztood set - they'd be enjoyable, but would lack a little drive and excitement. The new speakers, however, address those limitations... Add authority and good stereo imaging to the list of plus points and it comes as no surprise to find these speakers at home with classical, too. Indeed, running through our test room's extensive CD library we couldn't find a genre that these AE's weren't happy playing."

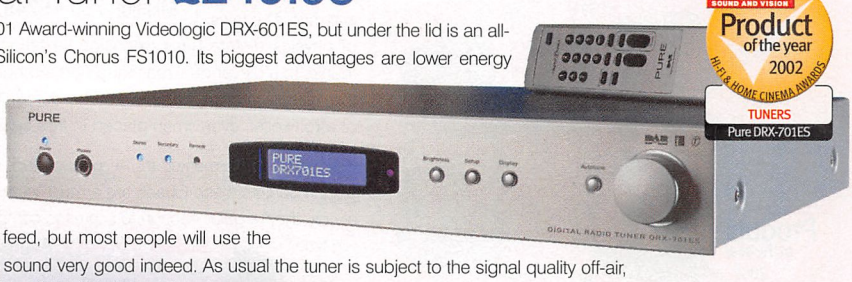
PURE DIGITAL DRX-701ES Digital Tuner £249.95

This new tuner from the recently renamed Pure is based on the 2001 Award-winning Videologic DRX-601ES, but under the lid is an all-new third-generation digital radio engine, in the form of Frontier Silicon's Chorus FS1010. Its biggest advantages are lower energy consumption and above all cost - it's the major reason why the DRX-701ES is £100 less than last year's model.



WHAT HI-FI? SOUND AND VISION Product of the year 2002 HI-FI & HOME CINEMA AWARDS
TUNERS Pure DRX-701ES

The tuner uses 24-bit/192kHz conversion with 4x upsampling and data interpolation, and is powered by a low-noise toroidal transformer - such attention to sonic detail pays off. Digital outputs are provided on electrical and optical feed, but most people will use the analogue out, and these sound very good indeed. As usual the tuner is subject to the signal quality off-air, but when it's fed from a high-quality outdoor aerial and a good signal it's capable of a crisp, powerful and detailed presentation. Even more populist music stations like Radio 6 benefit from the mix of a neutral balance and fine weight, while speech is also neutral and easy to follow... If you want a quality home tuner for digital radio, you need look no further." WHAT HI-FI? ★★★★★ October 2002

Kandy KA1 MKIII Amplifier £544.95

Free Interconnect Cable* Worth £100
When Any Roksan CD & Roksan Amplifier Purchased Together

"When we last reviewed Roksan's Kandy integrated amp in February it fought off serious competition to come top in a Supertest. This is its replacement, the MkIII. Internal changes include an uprated power supply for the preamp section and identical mono modules for the left and right power amp sections. Roksan also claims 50 pecent lower distortion on line-level inputs and a whopping 150 percent less on the phono input. The rated power output is an impressive 120 watts per channel into 8 ohms, and this amp has a confident, muscular way with music that bears this out. But don't be fooled into thinking this amp is raw but unrefined. With Van Morrison's Down the Road the Kandy has the guts to render the performance exciting and dynamic, but also the guile to deliver subtle details.

The upgraded Kandy MkIII is an excellent amp; the MkII version was impressive, but MkIII is a stunner. It betters all the amps here in the timing department, and has a wonderfully robust character that works well with all types of music. It manages to retain the good points of the MkII while adding extra resolution and subtlety. All the amps here have a place in the market. It's just that at £550 the Kandy really does set the pace."

QUAD

11L Speakers £379.95

"Quad is best known for its superlative electrostatic designs, which start at £3500. So any £379 pair of speakers that carries the company's name has to be going some to avoid tarnishing the family reputation. The first surprise is that the 11Ls come in real-wood veneers covered with piano-gloss lacquer. This type of finish is almost unheard of at the £1000 mark, let alone at this price. Has anything been sacrificed for such a luxury finish? Here's the second surprise: apparently not.

The final surprise? Well, saving the best for the last, the sound quality of the 11Ls is phenomenally good. These are small speakers at just 33cm tall, but the scale and authority of their performance is terrific. The laws of physics dictate bass extension limitations, but thanks to a clever dual rear firing port arrangement the 11Ls plumb the depths with the determination of a rottweiler, even when placed in free space.

If you're in the market for a pair of top quality standmounters these Quads are a must listen. Quite simply, they're good enough to scare the competition big time." WHAT HI-FI? ★★★★★ August 2002

"With a close-miked track such as James Taylor's Line 'Em Up from SACD they really deliver the character of the singer's voice and they're just as expressive with the cultured rhythms of Groove Armada's latest outing, having just the right mix of rhythmic control and fluidity... But amazingly the best is yet to come: these are simply beautiful speakers for classical music, once a few days' thrashing has tamed their initial rawness. With the latest release of Holst's The Planets on DVD-Audio, they thunder out Mars with true conviction.

These are rather magical speakers, with a poise and grace that belies their ability to turn on the power when required. Pair them with a good CD player and suitably accomplished amp, and you won't go far wrong."

PDR609 CD-RW Recorder £199.95

"While it looks simple, the Pioneer has an impressive array of features, including the handy double-speed disc finalization and CD-Text compatibility. Internally, the PDR609 is a big step up from the Award-winning PDR-509 it replaced: the DAC is now a 24-bit/96kHz number, aided and abetted by Pioneer's Legato Link conversion technology, and it has 24-bit A-to-D conversion, which is ideal for copying your vinyl onto CD. If this is your plan, you'll appreciate that the Pioneer makes it easy to create first-rate copies from any source, helped by the manual recording-level controls. It was hard to tell our copy of Jim White's No Such Place from the original.

While the Pioneer's replay quality can't match the Marantz, it costs £120 less, which would buy you a lot of blank discs. If you've already got a dedicated CD player, we'd go with this recorder."

The Classik Music System is an alternative to the sound and looks of mass market compact systems. Designed to be useful throughout the home, the Classik is simple and stylish with all the advanced features needed to satisfy the most demanding hi-fi enthusiast or discriminating music lover.

"Since the Scottish company added a tuner to the amp/CD player, mouths have gaped even wider in appreciation. The addition of colour options panders to the public's taste for kit to match their interior design, but it doesn't just look lovely in the lounge: the Classik sounds simply marvellous. Boasting fine impact and drive, it retains its grip even as it thumps out rock and dance tracks. Ask it to play quiet acoustic music and its smooth, liquid presentation impresses still further. You're drawn into the movie to such an extent that you forget the mechanics of the home cinema process - and that, surely, is the point of the exercise... Be in no doubt - the last receiver in this month's Supertest is also the best. Yamaha has been chased hard by the competition in recent years. What's more, this is a receiver for which no hi-fi apologies need be made. No, it's not as good as a straightforward stereo amplifier of equivalent price - but a stereo amplifier doesn't make for a very good home cinema either. The point is, the Sony does enough musically to justify itself as a hi-fi solution, while for home cinema use it's exceptional. "Let's start with the obvious: this Denon's specification list is astonishing. Whatever you're comparing the AVC-A11SR to, it's easier to list what it doesn't do: HDCD decoding. No complaints on the spec count, then. Or indeed, on the build front. The AVC-A11SR looks like the AVC-A1SE, the AVC-A10SE and all its other forebears: big, chunky, gold and gorgeous. Basic set-up is easy, with superb on-screen displays and a straightforward but effective remote. And it's a fabulous sonic performer, with all the characteristic warmth, fullness and scale of other THX-Ultra approved kit; films sound full, dialogue has weight and presence, and the soundfield has space and scale.

Planet Of The Apes is a tough test - its very, very loud score is rendered too hard by many systems - but it's no problem for the Denon. Dialogue is clear, the surrounds are well-used, and there's no short-changing on the bass.

So it's yet another stunner from Denon. We're almost tired of saying it, but there are few companies with a stronger grasp of the latest in multichannel audio. The AVC-A11SR does every thing most of us could ever need, and it does it rather well, too."

OK, so how does it sound? Let's cut straight to it: the KHT2005 is brilliant, delivering a quite sensational performance for a package of its type. The key is the quality of its midrange. First and foremost, it actually has a midrange (many sub/sat packages don't), which helps to give it character. You can hear vocal nuances and inflections, the movement of fingers on guitar strings or the impact of sticks on drums: it's all reassuringly hi-fi. The crossover between the subwoofer and the satellites is sensitively handled too, ensuring that, for the main part, the stereo presentation - even with the vivid soundscape of Tubular Bells - is perfectly convincing and natural.

So, let's recap. The KEF KHT2005 is effortlessly stylish, very compact, sounds excellent with both music and movies, and costs a more than reasonable £800. It's superb; we can't really put it more clearly than that." WHAT HI-FI? ★★★★★ Awards 2001

"REL's tiny but potent Q150E will boost your sound without damaging your feng shui, keeping your ears and your eyes happy.

At 29x29x23cm it's easily tucked away, but you'll certainly know it's there, just ten minutes' tuning will give you top-notch precision, punch and agility, thanks to the rigid, sealed-box cabinet and high quality 25cm drive unit powered by an in-built 150W amp. It sounds absolutely spot-on from the off, with music getting bags of potent yet precise low-end to underpin the tunes. Movies thrill too, with little overhang and dynamics conveyed to the full. And as the Q150E can be connected using both line-level and speaker-level connections, as well as having twin sets of volume controls, you can set up different bass characteristics for use with music and movies. It's groundshakingly marvellous, really." WHAT HI-FI? ★★★★★ Awards 2001

Take 5.1 AV Speaker Package £499.95

"A commendably full balance ensues, refuting the conventional wisdom that small satellites sound harsh and the midrange punch is considerable. It's agile enough to deliver sensible low-range information while following rhythms properly, while the subwoofer is meaty enough to fill the space below the satellites. Good things do come in small packages." WHAT HI-FI? Awards 2001

SOUND SEVENOAKS VISION

SHARP AQUOS
LC-20B2E LCD Television £1499.95

"With looks that simply ooze style. Sharp's Aquos LC-20B2E television is certainly easy on the eye. Part of the successful Aquos range, the 20 inch screen is set in an uncomplicated silvery frame flanked by two large speakers and is mounted on a snazzy, swivelling boomerang-shaped stand... The viewing angle is impressively wide - you can sit off to the sides and still get a great view - and the flexible stand can accommodate any position you wish to adopt. Colours are sober, and as a result more realistic.

Also Available
Panasonic • TX22LT2
£2449.95

What sets the Sharp apart from some others in this test is the sound quality. It is unwise to expect too much from what are still pretty teeny speakers, but the Sharp does an impressive job. Bass is still pretty short in supply, but clarity, presence and depth are all good. The Sharp is a great performer. Picture and sound are decent, it's well designed and looks great...

This is a great LCD television with a decent screen size. A well deserved Recommended." Home Entertainment May 2002

Following the success of their current DVD+RW recorder range, Philips has introduced two exciting new models, the DVDR880 & DVDR890. Both have a stylish, slim design and provide outstanding picture quality. "First off, RGB recordings made from a digital set-top box in HQ mode are phenomenal. The images are crisp and dense, with huge amounts of contrast and detail... In SP (and SP+), the increase in MPEG artefacts is so slight you need to really concentrate to see them... Not only are Philips' DVD recorders dropping in price, they're improving performance. The DVDR890 looks like a dream and the quality of its recordings is superb thanks to the radical improvements in MPEG encoding and if you don't own a DV cam then the DVDR880 is the machine for you."

HT300 Plus DLP Projector £8999.95

"...So it's small and it looks good. But like we said, our Temptation kit has to deliver on the performance front too, and the SIM2 is fully tooled-up to do the job. It's a Digital Light Processing (DLP) design, based on the latest 16:9 widescreen HD-1 Digital MicroMirror Device from Texas Instruments. That means high resolution - as high as 1280 x 720 pixels - and proper support for widescreen video content, the like of which you'll find on most DVD discs... And most crucially, the SIM2 also includes a sophisticated video de-interlacer. This is intended to eliminate 'jagged' edges, smooth out motion artefacts on fast-moving imagery, and create a more film-like image from any source material, even conventional video.

Impressive stuff. And you'll be delighted to hear it works. In fact, in tandem with its new six-segment colour wheel the SIM2's picture can only be described as breathtaking.

...The best summary of the HT300 is that it brings the big-screen dream ever closer to day-to-day reality: it's not cheap, but seldom has a projector delivered so many big grins among the What Hi-Fi? Sound & Vision reviewers." WHAT HI-FI ★★★★★ October 2002

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Type	Phono stage	Loading	Equalisation
Creek OBH-11	150	★★★★☆	Sep 97	Highly Recommended in the Awards 1997. A lively and energetic headphone amplifier.	H	-	-	-
EarMax Pro Headphone Amp	425	★★★★★	Jun 99	They don't come much cuter than this valve-powered headphone amp - lust at first listen.	H	-	-	-
Graham Slee Gram Amp 1	69	★★★★★	Apr 01	Superbly fluid and open presentation - we can't imagine anyone not liking this.	P	m	F	R
Graham Slee Gram Amp 2	119	★★★★★	Jun 02	Great-value phono stage that will make a considerable upgrade from most in-built models.	P	m	F	R
Lektropacks BT926	30	★★★★☆	Apr 01	Retains musical emotion, but is less impressive with low frequency punch.	P	m	F	R
Linn Linto	900	★★★★☆	Sep 97	Vinyl fans will love this phono stage - breathes new life into old records.	P	m/c	S	R
NAD PP-1	40	★★★★☆	Apr 01	Little phono stage that will probably better most found in amps selling below £300.	P	m	F	R
Naim Headline	489	★★★★☆	Jul 98	An expensive but worthwhile headphone amplifier. Ideal partner for Naim amps..	H	-	-	-
Pro-ject Phono Box	40	★★★★★	Apr 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Brings out the best in sub-£300 turntables.	P	m/c	F	R
Pro-ject Phono Box SE	100	★★★★★	Aug 02	Fine development of the original, ideally suited to use with a wide variety of turntables.	P	m/c	S	R
QED Discsaver	35	★★★☆☆	Jul 97	Good-priced phono stage if you're stuck without a turntable input, but not as an upgrade.	P	m	F	R
Roksan Caspian	650	★★★★☆	Awd 01	Fine phonostage that performs well on all counts, but has cheaper rivals to fight off.	P	m/c	S	R
Sonneteer Sedley	450	★★★★★	Jun 99	Sparkling treble, open midband and taut bass make this phono stage a real star.	P	m/c	S	R
✪ Trichord Dino	299	★★★★★	Jun 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. A slice of high-end performance at a very competitive price.	P	m/c	S	R

KEY | Type P = Phono amp, H = Headphone amp. Phono stage Comes in moving coil (c) or moving magnet (m) flavours, or is even switchable between the two. Loading for cartridges is either (S) switchable by user to suite various cartridge impedances or (F) factory set for just one, typically 47KOhms for moving magnet designs, 60ohms for moving coil. Equalization (R) the RIAA curve is the original standard but the later (I) IECC curve has the bass rolled off earlier.

Recordable DVD at an Incredible Price!

PHILIPS DVDR880
DVD+RW Recorder
£399.95

Please Note: Some products may not be available in all outlets. Advertisment valid until at least 12th February 2003, E&OE

"The DVDR880 positively flattens any VHS recorder for performance, convenience and flexibility, not least because it also has the same functions as a DVD-Video player... It performs superbly well, delivering outstanding pictures off-air especially in HQ recording mode. It's also impressively easy to use, makes recordings precisely and without fuss, and delivers accurate, hiss-free, stable sonics... It's both exceptionally easy to live with, and great fun."

~~WAS £349.99~~
"Get them well run in and the Wharfedale's pack a mighty punch. The bass performance will put a smile on the face of even the most diehard bass fanatic. The almost sub-sonic blast of low-end that underpins the whole groove will take your breath away. Neither is there any shortage of subtlety on offer either, good imaging means a fine presentation of instruments and vocals, allied to excellent dynamics. The Pi-20's are very fine speakers, and with electronic based music are right up there with the best at £350."

"If you want a really deep and powerful bass performance the Pi-40s are the speakers for you. The Wharfedales come out top in terms of resolution and dynamics. The Pi-40s are seriously big speakers with a formidable array of drive units. A soft dome tweeter sits on top of the cabinet and is set back slightly to time align it with the two Kevlar drive units. This helps to improve integration and stereo imaging. Superb scale and low frequency performance."

"These are big speakers, capable of an impressive amount of low-end power. The A2's turn in a lucid and involving performance; the metal-dome tweeters refuse to become harsh or edgy, even when provoked. Those two large drivers earn their keep by producing some of the deepest, most powerful low frequencies on test. The results they produce are of such power and refinement that an audition is a must. What Hi-Fi? Sound&Vision Jul 00

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Type	Sensitivity	Impedance	Power ratings	Biwirable	Height width depth	Finishes
Diapason Karis	995	★★★★☆	Dec 99	Superbly built and sonically forgiving - sculpture and hi-fi can mix, take a listen.	st	87	6	80	Yes	29.19.26	Wn
✪ Dynaudio Audience 52	557	★★★★★	Sep 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Formidable array of talents - great with all musical genres.	st	86	4	150	No	33.20.26	5
Dynaudio Audience 62	729	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Solid all-rounders but they lack the sparkle to take on the class leaders.	fl	86	4	150	No	86.20.26	5
Dynaudio Contour 1.1	879	★★★★☆	Dec 99	Diminutive size, their punchy and bass-loving nature will appeal to high-end rockers.	st	87	4	150	No	31.17.28	8
Dynaudio Audience 72	1100	★★★★☆	Oct 01	Deliver bass and dynamics in spades - give them a listen. Wrap on cabinets lacks class.	fl	86	4	210	No	96.20.26	4
Dynaudio Contour 1.3 MkII	1198	★★★★☆	Jul 00	Fine speakers, unfussy, and play all genres with equal ease.	st	87	4	150	No	38.20.29	8
Dynaudio Audience 82	1460	★★★★☆	Sep 01	Monster speakers that know the meaning of sensitivity. A rare breed.	fl	87	4	300	No	106.22.36	4
Epos M15	799	★★★★☆	Oct 02	For musical communication they are hard to fault and in the right system they will sing.	fl	88	8	100	Yes	82.20.25	3
Ethos Acoustics LS5/12B	1495	★★★★☆	Jul 00	Exacting and conjure up a surprising amount of bass weight. Need a little more soul.	st	83	8	130	Yes	30.19.21	Va
Final Acoustics 0.3	1495	★★★★☆	Aug 00	Electrostatic speakers that give a cultured sound with bags of finesse and look stunning.	fl	86	4	80	Yes	120.27.40	Va
Jamo D 830 (was Concert 8)	1400	★★★★★	Sep 99	Beautifully built and engineered, and delivering a superbly dynamic sound.	sb	90	4	120	Yes	38.24.31	Mh
JBL Ti2K	1250	★★★★★	Mar 00	A terrific design that looks great - offers a sound that astonishes for under £2000.	st	88	8	200	Yes	42.28.42	2
JM Lab Chorus 715	529	★★★☆☆	Dec 01	A very relaxing listen, but can prove lacklustre with uptempo tracks.	fl	91	8	125	No	93.20.27	Va
JM Lab Cobalt 806 C/T/S	549	★★★☆☆	Sep 01	Packed with some cutting-edge ingredients but they can rob music of life.	st	90	8	75	Yes	88.22.27	Va
JM Lab Cobalt 816 C/T/S	899	★★★☆☆	Oct 01	Will flatter rough recordings, but they need more attack and drive.	fl	91	8	125	Yes	98.22.30	Va
JM Lab Electra 906	1149	★★★★☆	Jan 03	Technology kings, but they don't have the all-round sonic ability to worry class leaders.	st	90	8	75	Yes	42.22.32	3
KEF RDM Three	1500	★★★★☆	Mar 99	Highly accomplished loudspeakers with a classy finish and revealing sound.	fl	90	4	200	Yes	100.23.27	2
Linn Katan	600	★★★★☆	Sep 01	Involving and entertaining performers that work well with a wide range of music.	st	85	8	N/A	Yes	34.17.23	4
Linn Ninka	995	★★★☆☆	Oct 01	Unusual shape and beautifully finished but their sonic performance is only average.	fl	90	4	N/A	Yes	98.25.28	3
Mission m53	550	★★★☆☆	Aug 02	Big, bold and initially exciting but look elsewhere for more longer-lasting substance.	fl	89	8	150	Yes	97.21.36	3
Mission 782	700	★★★★★	Oct 02	Terrific speakers and few rivals combine such a wide spread of talents so convincingly.	fl	89	8	200	Yes	80.17.30	3
Mission 783	1000	★★★★☆	Oct 01	Can bang out the bass with the best, but are subtle-sounding too.	fl	90	6	200	Yes	97.21.32	3
Monitor Audio Silver S6	600	★★★★★	Oct 02	Magical speakers, with a poise and grace that belies their ability to turn on the power.	fl	91	6	120	Yes	85.19.25	4
Monitor Audio Gold Ref. 10	799	★★★★★	Aug 01	Few speakers just 36cm tall are capable of a sound with quite so much conviction.	st	88	8	100	Yes	36.20.27	4
Monitor Audio Gold Ref. 20	1499	★★★★★	Mar 01	Immensely accomplished speakers - fast and dynamic sound with bags of resolution.	fl	89	6	150	Yes	93.20.30	4
Musical Technology PM15 Prof.	550	★★★★☆	Sep 99	Refined speakers with good dynamics and detail but they lack drive with up-tempo music.	sb	88	6	100	Yes	43.21.15	4
Neat Critique	545	★★★★☆	Sep 98	Highly enjoyable-sounding speakers, they get straight to the heart of the music.	st	86	8	100	Yes	33.23.22	2
Neat Mystique 2 (Cherry)	795	★★★★☆	Jul 98	Clean, crisp and coherent - particularly adept with lighter musical styles.	fl	86	8	150	Yes	84.20.18	2
Neat Elite	1275	★★★☆☆	Jul 00	Not bad speakers but they have too many flaws to make an impact.	fl	87	8	150	Yes	90.20.18	2
Opera SP-1	525	★★★★☆	Dec 01	Gorgeous speakers with an involving and entertaining performance.	bs	86	8	60	No	29.16.23	3
PMC TB2	700	★★★★☆	Awd 01	Great speakers, wonderful integration, but slightly lacking in low-level dynamics.	st	90	8	150	Yes	40.20.30	Va
PMC FB1	1410	★★★★★	Awd 00	Amazing speakers - these slim columns are exciting, controlled and yet a total riot.	fl	90	8	150	Yes	100.20.30	Va
ProAc Studio 125	999	★★★★★	Oct 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Stun with their sweet treble and agile bass.	fl	89	8	150	Yes	92.28.20	Va
Quadral Aurum-3	850	★★★★☆	Sep 00	Refined and informative, but not one that inspires on bass-driven music.	st	86	4	90	Yes	40.19.29	Va
Roksan ROK One	595	★★★★☆	Nov 96	Deliver a natural sense of space that stands quite apart from the £600 crowd.	st	89	8	100	Yes	44.21.34	3
Roksan Ojan 3X	1400	★★★★☆	Dec 98	An engaging listen and brilliant bass performance; a must-hear for medium-sized rooms.	fl	88	8	250	Yes	76.28.46	Rw
Ruark Acoustics Etude	650	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Charming speakers that produce a highly listenable sound. Give them a go.	st	87	8	120	Yes	34.21.27	4
Ruark Acoustics CL10	900	★★★☆☆	Awd 01	Good, but the unexciting dynamics and occasionally over-exuberant bass let them down.	sb	87	6	150	Yes	35.23.28	Va
Ruark Acoustics Prelude II	900	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Tempting propositions, their involving performance promises years of enjoyment.	fl	88	8	120	Yes	88.21.22	Va
Ruark Acoustics Solus	1250	★★★★☆	Sep 99	Classy design which delivers bags of bass weight and never wants for power.	st	85	8	200	Yes	33.21.33	Va
Sonus Faber Concertino	599	★★★★★	Aug 96	An orgy of walnut and leather, airy Concertinos sing and sound as special as they look.	st	86	8	120	Yes	22.32.29	2
Sonus Faber Concerto Home	999	★★★★☆	Jul 01	Major on insight, worth the effort to partner sympathetically on the basis of sound.	st	88	6	200	No	36.24.32	2
Spendor S3	599	★★★★☆	Jan 02	A fab buy if you value realism and insight above outright attack.	sb	85	8	80	Yes	31.17.19	2
Spendor SP2/3E (Classic)	1295	★★★★★	Jul 00	Special speakers - will delight with their combination of naturalness, insight and scale.	st	88	8	80	Yes	54.27.32	2
Spendor S6	1300	★★★★★	Jul 02	Classy looking and excellent all-rounders - well worth a long, serious listen.	fl	88	8	100	Yes	87.20.30	2
T+A Criterion TAL90	900	★★☆☆☆	Jan 03	Interesting, if gimmicky - and sound strangely detached when used with the K1 system.	st	90	4	90	No	37.21.31	6
Tannoy Revolution R3	550	★★★★★	Feb 00	Best Buy in the Awards 1999. Involving and refined, they put music first.	fl	89	6	170	Yes	102.18.27	Ch
Tannoy ST50 (Super Tweeter)	600	★★★★★	Dec 02	Super-high-frequency speakers, designed to perch on your existing pair.	-	93	8	200	No	15x10cm	Bk
Tannoy Eyris 2	1000	★★★★☆	Feb 02	Fine buy, combining refined sound, solid build and excellent finish.	fl	87	8	95	Yes	91.17.26	2
Triangle Zerius 202	695	★★★★★	Mar 02	Lively and communicative, their sparkling performance will make many seem bland.	fl	92	8	100	Yes	101.22.30	3
Vienna Acoustics Haydn	650	★★★☆☆	Sep 01	Belting build and great with classical but they lack the boogie factor.	st	89	6	180	No	34.17.25	6

THE BEST "Free" extended guarantee offer EVER!

If you haven't taken advantage of our amazing Supercare cover by the time it expires, then simply return the form within one month of that date and we will happily refund its full purchase value.

Most Extended Guarantees are a RIP OFF!

You may have read about the Office of Fair Trading's investigation into extended warranties in the national press. We would officially invite them to investigate ours because, we know, it's by far the best package on the market!
The OFT recently reported that retailers should: 1) have transparent pricing, and 2) offer some kind of 'cooling off' period. We are happy to report that we have done this for years and are delighted at the effort being made to clean up extended guarantee abuse. At the right price it is of course worth having and can be great value. Decide for yourself.

Includes 3 or 5 year cover plus...

- Free Loan Machine
- Free Routine Servicing/ Maintenance checks
- Up to 50% Buyback Guarantee (excluding DJ Systems)
- 30 Day Cooling-off Period
- Money back at end of period if unused

AMAZING PLASMA SCREENS!

Welcome to the future of television: Plasma screens. They are the latest technology, and show substantial improvements over cathode ray TVs. The cost of plasma screen televisions, in real terms, is much less than a colour TV of thirty years ago. Picture quality is bigger, brighter and more defined. This means that you get perfect images that are easily viewable, on a screen that can be as little as three inches thick, and once you've installed your new plasma TV, you might find you've added thousands of pounds on to the resale value of your home. Gone are the days of bulky, unattractive cathode ray TVs-tomorrow's technology is here today, and, as usual, Richer Sounds is proud to be able to offer you the hottest deals for the lowest prices.

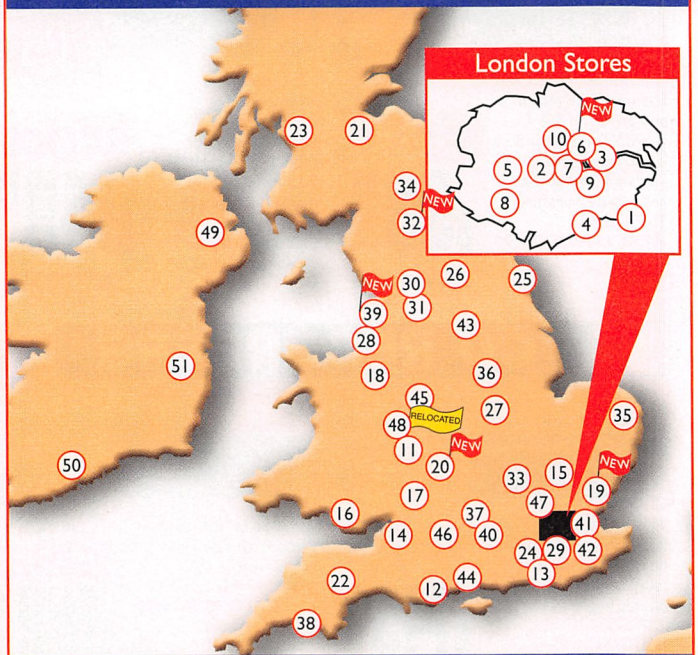
YOU CAN FIND US HERE!



FOR STORE DETAILS PLEASE SEE OPPOSITE

PLEASE NOTE We quite frequently hear of our competitors (who are naturally frustrated at our prices) telling customers that the only reason we are so cheap is that our goods are either seconds, returns, stolen, secondhand etc...This is utter nonsense and simply sour grapes on their part - they must be desperate! If it were true it would be both illegal and hardly good customer relations, something we assure you we take very seriously.
A few of the products we sell are exclusive to us but this is only for proven product where we are able to purchase huge quantities, often direct from the factory, cutting out other retailers and the distributors' profit margin, thereby saving you typically 33%.
All stock is BRAND NEW IN SEALED CARTONS and full guaranteed for one year unless clearly stated otherwise. We are unable to guarantee that multi-region machines will play all future disc releases. Further upgrade may be required.

TSP* = Typical Selling Price
TSPs are based on information supplied by: WHAT HI-FI?, Manufacturer, Hi-Fi Choice, Home Cinema Choice, T3, What Video & TV, What DVD, Home Entertainment, Total DVD, WHAT HI-FI? 'Stereo on the go' supplement & DVD Buyer. Further information available on request.

GRADED products refer to ex-display, mail order returns or ex-service products, thoroughly tested and re-sold with a full as new guarantee.
Due to the varying sizes of our stores, not all goods may be stocked in all branches. Please call first if making a special journey. All stores have a clearance corner full of ex-demo / service and secondhand bargains and browsers are definitely welcome.
OSP denotes the original selling price.

IF WE HAVEN'T GOT IT - WE'RE SORRY Some of these offers are end-of-line clearouts and therefore by definition finite in supply - the answer is don't delay!

CORPORATE PURCHASERS
We offer a bulk purchase service for businesses (or other organisations) who are looking to buy our products. We currently supply Oddbins, Carphone Warehouse, Tie Rack and many other corporate accounts from schools to hospitals. We can include delivery and we are happy to arrange account facilities where requested (subject to status). Please call Ricky or Dennis for further details on 020 7407 9090 or email: corporatesales@richersounds.com

36 YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

Started in 1966, Audio T is one of the oldest and most respected hi-fi dealers in the world. Our knowledge base is enormous, our staff are fully trained in-house and by the manufacturers whose products we stock. We have a combined staff experience of over 375 years!

THREE YEAR GUARANTEES

We offer an inclusive 3 year guarantee on all new hi-fi separates, the first 2 years of which are transferable to another BADA dealer should you move. Style systems carry a 2 year guarantee. Everything else, including DVD players, carries a one year guarantee unless the manufacturer offers longer, and many do.

DEMONSTRATION ROOMS

All our shops have comfortable demonstration rooms for Hi-Fi and Home Cinema.

EXCHANGES & UPGRADES

If you are not satisfied you can change goods within 10 days (for something of equal or greater value), provided they are returned in perfect condition with all packing and instructions. You can also upgrade to something better for up to 30 days, again at no cost penalty, subject to the rules above (excluding special orders).

PART EXCHANGE

In most cases we can often take your old, working, equipment off your hands, or offer to sell it for you.

MAIL ORDER

We are happy to mail order most products that we sell, only excluding those that require special installation and setting up. Carriage is free.

INTEREST FREE OPTION

Available on all sales over £250 (Subject to status. Written details on request).

BADA

We are members of the British Audio Dealers Association, committed to high standards of demonstration, advice and service. Its Transferable Guarantee allows you to transfer your guarantee rights to another BADA member if you move over 30 miles.

HOME LOANS & DELIVERIES

We can arrange for home loans of equipment (subject to status) and home dems (subject to distance). We can also deliver and install your system if you want us to, ensuring you get the very best from your new purchase (subject to distance).

CUSTOM INSTALLATION

These days many customers want their Hi-Fi and Home Cinema integrated into their homes. As members of CEDIA we carry out complete installations, from pre-wiring rooms (or homes) to fine tuning the last component.

EVENING DEMONSTRATIONS

All branches are open on Thursday until 8pm.

WEB SITE

You can visit us online at www.audio-t.co.uk where you'll find hundreds of second hand, ex-demonstration or special offer products always listed. We've got details on our locations, the latest company news, diary of forthcoming events and more. Log on and browse around – you never know what you may find!

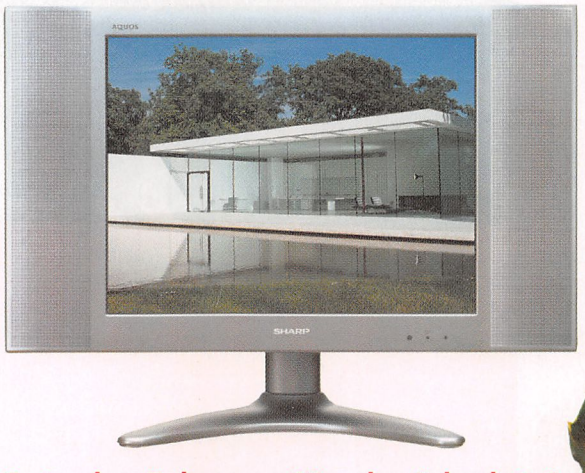
Sharp Aquos LCD Screens

Audio T are now stockists of the Sharp Aquos range. These stunning flat panel LCD TV's are perfect in any room, especially in those with limited space (like kitchens and bedrooms) where they can be mounted onto the wall.



Aquos is the most advanced of all flat panel LCD TV's with an outstanding contrast ratio of up to 500:1 and a unique black TFT panel screen that reduces glare and reflection by up to 98.5%. They also have wide viewing angles of up to 170° - more than other panels we have looked at.

Aquos gives you a choice of 2 designs and screen formats including both the familiar 4:3 and newer 16:9 widescreen format. Prices start from just £699 for the 13" version and can be seen at most Audio T stores.

Our Christmas sale finishes on Saturday February 1st – don't be late!

KEY | Power The power per channel the manufacturer quotes. Bear in mind these figures can tend to be rather 'creative' CD 1 means it's a single-disc player, larger numbers show how many discs can be loaded. DVD Some systems now use a DVD player instead of a CD player, and this trend may grow. MiniDisc/CD-R Does the system have a digital recorder built in? If so, M=MiniDisc, C=CD-R or H=Hard disk built in. Speakers Are they included in the price as shown? Opt means speakers are optional.

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Power	Modes	Digital inputs	Video inputs	Six channel inputs
Arcam FMJ AV8	3000	★★★★★	Dec 02	Paired with the P7 power amp this is truly brilliant in every sense.	Pre/A	D/2/S/T	7	13	Yes
Cyrus AV8	1100	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Makes a great sound and is a pleasure to use - lack of features will limit appeal.	Pre/A	D/S	6	0	No
Lexicon DC-2	3800	★★★★★	Awd 99	Superlative multichannel processor that's ideal for music use as well as home cinema.	Pre/A	D/S/E	8	5	No
Lexicon MC-1	5600	★★★★★	Feb 00	Cracking multichannel processor, blessed with exceptional sonic ability.	Pre/A	D/S/E	8	8	No
Lexicon MC-12	8100	★★★★★	Apr 02	If you can afford it, you owe it to your ears to hear this jaw-droppingly good processor.	Pre/A	D/2/S/E	13	17	Yes
Meridian 568	3825	★★★★★	Oct 00	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Glorious levels of performance with music and movies.	Pre/A	2/D/S/T	5	2	No
Myryad MDP500	1800	★★★★★	Oct 00	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Combined with the MA360/MA240 it's hugely impressive.	Pre/A	D/S	6	6	Yes
Naim AV2	2200	★★★★★	Dec 02	The no-frills combination of the AV2 with the NAP V150 power amp is truly thrilling.	Pre/A	D/2/S/E	4	0	Yes
Primare P30	2000	★★★★☆	Oct 00	Paired with the A30.5 power amp (now MkII not tested) make a delightful pairing.	Pre/A	D/S	8	5	No
Roksan Caspian DSP	1295	★★★★☆	Feb 00	Fantastic purely as a music preamplifier but slightly below par as a home cinema decoder.	Pre/A	D/S	4	0	Yes
TAG McLaren Audio AV30R	1799	★★★★★	Oct 02	Superb whether with music or movies - in high-end AV terms this is a bargain.	Pre/A	D/2/S	6	8	Yes
TAG McLaren Audio AV32R bp192	2549	★★★★★	Sep 99	Quite sensational. Software upgraded in 2002 and six channel analogue bypass added.	Pre/A	D/S	5	8	Yes
Yamaha DSP-E800	350	★★★★★	Sep 00	Product of the Year in the Awards 2001. Brilliance in a sensibly priced box.	70/70	D/S	3	5	Yes

Eltax HT-2 Centre	79	★★★☆☆	Aug 97	This is one cheap speaker and works fairly well too. But it is worth spending more.	75	89	8	No	20.44.16	3
Eltax Linear Response LR- Center	199	★★★★★	Mar 98	Impressive spread of sound and deep controlled bass - perfect for action movies.	150	87	6	Yes	19.55.33	Bc
M&K S-125C	675	★★★★☆	Jan 99	Excellent centre, it punches hard and fast, with lots of clarity. Won't suit all systems.	200	89	4	No	16.47.21	Bk
Magnum Acoustics Centre Pod	269	★★★☆☆	Mar 98	Certainly looks the part with its aesthetically pleasing shape, but it can lack weight.	100	92	8	Yes	16.45.18	2
Meridian M60C	1260	★★★★★	VTV 3	Fabulous depth, presence, power and realism from this active centre.	A75	-	-		21.90.30	Bk
Meridian DSP 5000C	2195	★★★★☆	Aug 94	Active centre with built-in amp and digital-to-analogue converter.	A75	-	-		21.90.30	Bk
Mission 77c1	200	★★★★★	Oct 99	Best Buy in the Awards 1999. Provides a powerfully focused wedge of sound.	130	88	8	No	17.42.20	3
Paradigm CC-170	130	★★★☆☆	Jan 99	A gentle giant that would benefit from more fizz and sparkle. It's just too dull for us.	120	90	8	No	17.56.20	Bk
Paradigm CC-450	300	★★★★☆	Mar 98	Will appeal to all with its involving sound and suit a large-room set-up to a tee.	175	90	8	Yes	21.55.29	Bk
Richard Allan Dimen Centre Pod	204	★★★★☆	Dec 95	Solidly built centre gives a good spread of sound and will integrate with a wide range.	100	100	8	No	37.17.14	Gr
Tannoy Mercury mXC	100	★★★★★	Dec 97	Perhaps the best affordable centre speaker there is. It's well-made and sounds superb.	80	90	8	No	16.43.15	Bk
Wharfedale Valdus Centre	100	★★★★★	Jun 96	Earns our wholehearted recommendation at such a bargain price.	100	90	8	No	15.43.17	Bk

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Power	Sensitivity	Impedence	Biwirable	Size	Finishes
M&K VX-100	845	★★★★★	Jul 99	Really hit the spot when asked to perform highly musical low frequency duties.	A100	-	-	-	31.37.28	Bk
M&K V1250THX	995	★★★★★	Jun 99	Part of the 750THX package - stunning home cinema performance.	A125	-	-	-	46.59.39	Bk
M&K V-125THX	995	★★★★★	Jun 96	Highly recommended in the Awards 1997. They are fast with incredible punch.	A125	-	-	-	46.39.51	Bk
M&K MX-70B	1050	★★★★★	VT Oct 96	Powerful and punchy with unfeasible bass levels from a teenier than teeny box.	A125	-	-	-	45.25.35	Bk
M&K MX-350 (THX)	2095	★★★★★	Awd 98	Used with pedigree partnering equipment, the MX-350s are little short of breathtaking.	A350	-	-	-	58.39.51	Bk
Magnat Omega 300	500	★★☆☆☆	Dec 01	Respectable performance, but the lack of real depth will disappoint action fanatics.	A100	-	-	-	46.52.49	Bk
Mission m5as	500	★★★★★	Oct 02	One of the most musical subs we know. If you've the space this takes some beating.	A350	-	-	-	58.35.52	3
✪ MJ Acoustics Pro 50	299	★★★★★	Nov 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Awesome clout from a tiny enclosure.	A50	-	-	-	28.33.28	6
MJ Acoustics MJ Pro-50 Cherry	379	★★★★★	Dec 01	Smart enough to be furniture, good enough to be great hi-fi.	A50	-	-	-	28.33.28	6
MJ Acoustics Pro 100	599	★★★★★	Apr 02	Deliver a superbly deft punch along with excellent extension - not for small rooms.	A100	-	-	-	57.32.28	6
MJ Acoustics Pro 500	849	★★★★☆	Jan 02	Stunning groundshaking ability - one for the AV fanatic with a dedicated listening room.	A300	-	-	-	41.48.36	3
Monitor Audio ASW-100	300	★★★★☆	Dec 01	Better with music than movies - ideal for audiophiles who enjoy the occasional film.	120	-	-	-	32.32.34	2
Monitor Audio FB210	700	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Big bold sound - it's not a sub for smaller spaces. Take care with positioning.	A250	-	-	-	50.37.37	2
Paradigm PDR-10	250	★★★★☆	Aug 97	Highly Recommended in the 1997 Awards. Offers bags of bass for the money.	A80	-	-	-	36.34.40	Bk
Paradigm PS-1000	350	★★★★★	VT Oct 96	Oodles of bass; easy to set up; value for money.	A130	-	-	-	43.44.49	Bk
Paradigm Servo 15	800	★★★★½	Oct 98	Huge sub which roars through action movies. Mighty muscle at an affordable price.	A400	-	-	-	53.46.56	Bk
Quadral SUB-300 AKTIV	600	★★☆☆☆	Dec 01	Well-finished but its performance is too patchy with music and movies.	A300	-	-	-	42.31.40	Sl
REL Acoustics Quake (Black)	350	★★★★★	Dec 02	REL's pocket rocket merits instant inclusion on any subwoofer audition list.	A100	-	-	-	29.26.27	Bk
REL Acoustics Quake (Cherry)	425	★★★★★	Oct 02	Produces prodigious bass for its size, especially in the stiffer balanced-veneered cherry.	A100	-	-	-	29.26.27	Ch
✪ REL Acoustics Q-150E	500	★★★★★	Dec 01	Product of the Year in the Awards 2002. Brilliant sound with movies and music.	A150	-	-	-	32.29.33	Bk
REL Acoustics Q200E	650	★★★★☆	Sep 99	A great choice for injecting some muscle into your system if space is at a premium.	A200	-	-	-	29.29.29	Bk
REL Acoustics Strata III	700	★★★★★	Jul 99	Best Buy in the Awards 1999. A subwoofer that gives music and movies a real boost.	A100	-	-	-	52.42.33	Bk
REL Acoustics Q201E	725	★★★★★	Feb 01	Better, more musical sub than the Q200E - one of the best small subwoofers around.	A200	-	-	-	33.30.35	Bk
REL Acoustics Storm III	900	★★★★★	Mar 00	Certainly one of the best bass boxes you can buy for a serious music and movies set-up.	A150	-	-	-	65.42.33	Bk
REL Acoustics Q400E	1000	★★★★★	Sep 00	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. It's not too big, but it sounds positively gigantic.	A400	-	-	-	42.39.43	Bk
✪ REL Acoustics Stadium III	1500	★★★★★	Oct 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Just the job for large-room home cinema and h-fi systems.	A200	-	-	-	56.59.39	Va
Velodyne CHT-12	525	★★★★☆	May 02	One for the bigger space - great for movies, but a little OTT with music.	A175	-	-	-	45.38.53	Bk
Velodyne SPL-800	925	★★★★☆	Oct 02	If you want a tiny subwoofer with massive muscle, look no further.	A600	-	-	-	27.26.30	2
VIBE Alpha One	300	★★☆☆☆	Jun 02	Compact and generates lots of welly, but it's too raucous and bloated for our tastes.	200	-	-	-	30.32.36	Bk
Wharfedale PowerCube PC-10A	200	★★★☆☆	Oct 02	Crunching movie action for not much money but it is marred by input hum.	A100	-	-	-	39.34.34	2
Yamaha YST-SW320	370	★★★★★	Feb 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Good-looking and can thump out some serious bass.	A250	-	-	-	34.43.37	Bk
Yamaha YST-SW800	550	★★★★★	Dec 01	Powerful beast that does wonders with movies. Possibly best in a movie-only system.	A800	-	-	-	39.48.42	Bk

KEY | Power rating For active subwoofers, refers to the power output of the internal amplifier. For passive subs, refers to recommended maximum power handling. Sensitivity (passive speakers) The higher the figure, the louder the speaker will sound at a given amplifier setting. Impedance (passive speakers) Measured in ohms, shows how hard the speaker is for an amplifier to drive. Biwirable Can they be biwired (see Glossary)? Size Will it fit? Height x width x depth, measured in cms.

ATLAS CABLES

EXCLUSIVE TO MOUNTAIN SNOW

The ultimate in connectivity

In partnership with one of Europe's leading design teams the Mountain Snow group have developed the Atlas range of cables, speaker cables and high quality interconnects for use with high fidelity equipment. The success of this product has been enthusiastically born out by both 'What Hi-Fi' and the many customers who have discovered the quality of these cables. Atlas cables are simply another way, aside from high quality equipment and excellent service, that we connect with our customers. Whether it's Atlas cables, high quality products from leading manufacturers or excellence in service, Mountain Snow offer the ultimate in connection – between you and perfect sound.

We've been overwhelmed by the reaction to this product – by both the press and our customers. Just take a look at what they're saying.

★★★★★ ....The clear winner among the analogue cables is the Atlas Equator. The Atlas brand is relatively new, but the Equator is a cracker.... It's a double whammy for Atlas. These cables are really impressive. The Compass may look simple, but it's beautifully engineered....tonal balance is spot-on....detail is excellent.... Highly recommended What Hi-Fi August '02

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Power ratings	Min sensitivity	Min impedence	Finishes
B&W CDM 1NT/CNT/SNT	1900	★★★★★	Jun 01	Sensational, well suited to its task. If you can find the funds, it's worth every penny.	120/120/120	88/91/90	8/8/8	3
Bose Acoustimass 15 Series II	1050	★★★★☆	Jan 03	Undeniably expensive, but it does the 5.1 thing very well and it's upgradeable.	100/100/100	-	4-8	2
Boston Acous. VR940/910/VRS	1200	★★★☆☆	Jul 02	Intriguing, but not complete enough - it does some things well, but it lacks panache.	125/150/100	89/89/85	8/8/8	Bk
Boston Acoustics Micro 9000	1000	★★★★☆	May 01	Highly competitive, beautifully made and performs well in multichannel use.	125/125/100/A75	89/90/86	8/8/8	Bk
Boston Acous. Digi Theater 6000	499	★★★★☆	Aug 99	Incredibly compact speakers and active sub with digital surround decoder.	A100	-	-	Bk
Boston Acoustics CoRELation	1200	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Five Boston Micros with the REL Q150E sub. This two firm fusion has paid off.	125/125/100/A150	89/90/89	8/8/8	2
Cambridge Sdworks MegaW 510D	350	★★★★☆	Aug 02	Great sounding solution for people who watch movies on their computer.	60/60/60	95/95/95	-/-/-	Bk
Canton Movie 10-MX II	349	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Eminently affordable, very stylish and certainly fun to listen to.	70/80/70/A100	85/87/85	4/4/4	3
Canton Movie 10-MX	349	★★★★★	Oct 02	Top-value package from this German newcomer to the UK. Well worth an audition.	70/70/70/A50	85/85/85	4/4/4	3
Canton Karat	2866	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Highly impressive - a lot of speaker for your money and a decent level of ability, too	180/85/60/A250	88/87/85	4/4/4	4
Dynaudio Aud 62/42C/42	1347	★★★★★	Jul 02	Fantastic - partner with decent kit and you won't feel short-changed by the sound.	150/150/150	86/85/86	4/4/4	4
Dynaudio Aud 122/C122 42W	1795	★★★★☆	Jun 01	This is a package with no notable flaws and outstanding all-round performance.	200/200/150	86/86/86	6/6/4	3
Elac Imago	2545	★★★☆☆	Oct 01	NXT flat-panel speakers in frames, but sonically inferior to normal speakers.	60/60/60	86/86/86	4/4/4	Sl
Elac Cinema Three System	1299	★★★★☆	Jan 03	Impressive and won't disappoint, but it lacks the va-va-voom to beat class leaders.	50/50/50/A80	86/86/86	4/4/	Al
✪ Elac Cinema One 5.1	400	★★★★★	Dec 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Stylish, affordable and it works.	120/120/120/A55	84/84/84	6/6/	2
Energy Take 5	500	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Still effective, but no longer class-leading.	100/100/100	88/88/88	8/8/	Bk
Focal-JM Lab Sib & Cub	859	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Cute satellite speakers and a sub - smooth yet lively package.	75/75/75/A75	90/90/90	6/6/	2
Heybrook HB3/C1/.5/S200	980	★★★★☆	Jul 02	Strong value, a superb option for some - best with aggressive-sounding receivers.	90/75/70/A150	90/90/89	6/6/	2
Jamo D 830PDD	3200	★★★★☆	Sep 00	Most of the virtues of top-quality home cinema, and it sounds great with music too.	120/110/150	90/91/90	4/4/	Ch
Jamo A410PDD	650	★★★★☆	Jun 02	Attractive package with very slim satellites and a sub - seriously room-friendly.	50/50/50/A100	88/88/88	6/6/	3
Jamo A330 PDD.3	550	★★★☆☆	Aug 01	Largely competent with decent sound at low volume levels, but rivals do it better.	75/75/75/A100	90/90/90	6/6/	15
KEF TDM 23F/23C/34DS/45B	2700	★★★★★	Feb 99	Bags of bass and drive means they get close to real cinema sound.	200/200/150	90/90/88	4/4/	Bk
KEF Q1/Q9C/PSW2000	1000	★★★★☆	Jul 02	High-quality and very capable, but for outright welly it can't match heftier rivals.	120/120/120/A250	91/91/91	8/8/	3
✪ KEF KHT 2005	800	★★★★★	Jun 01	Product of the Year in the Awards 2002. Best sub/sat you can buy under £1000.	100/100/100	88/88/88	8/8/	2
KEF Coda 90/80/70	730	★★★★☆	Nov 02	Good, solid buy and a very contemporary look into the bargain.	125/100/70	91/91/91	8/8/	2
Klegg M6-5.01	399	★★★☆☆	Jun 02	Tiny egg-shaped speakers that will win fans, but its sonic performance lags behind.	30/30/30/A50	89/89/89	6/6/	3
✪ M&K K-3 System	1895	★★★★★	Sep 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Fine dynamics and energy with movies and music.	200/200/200/A75	-/-/-	4/4/	2
M&K 750THX	2715	★★★★★	Jun 99	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Absolutely stunning home cinema performance.	200/200/200	90/90/NA	4/4/	Bk
Mirage Omnisat	1295	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Upward facing units designed to give seamless surround sound.	150/150/150/A150	89/89/89	8/8/	4
Mission fs2-AV	600	★★★★★	May 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Five NXT satellite speakers and a sub - sensational.	75/75/75	86/86/86	8/8/	Ne
Mission fs1-AV	450	★★★★☆	Dec 02	For its market this stylish NXT package is just right, but there is no shortage of rivals.	100/100/100/A100	88/88/88	8/8/	Sl
Mission Cinema m74	880	★★★★☆	Jul 02	Exceptional value, home cinema performance is great - you won't buy more bass.	150/125/100	91/89/89	8/8/	2
✪ Mission Cinema m72	400	★★★★★	Aug 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Brilliant and affordable surround system.	100/100/100	89/87/89	8/8/	2
Mission Cinema m70	480	★★★★★	Dec 02	Bulkier than most rival systems - sounds great in stereo and multichannel.	75/75/75/A100	87/87/87	8/8/	4
Mission Cinema 8	1400	★★★★★	Jun 01	Wonderfully cohesive, compact and elegant. Plays all forms of music with verve.	200/200/150	89/87/87	8/8/	3
Mission Cinema 7	800	★★★★★	Oct 99	Product of the Year in the 1999 Awards. Great value and easy to live with.	130/130/75	88/88/90	8/8/	3
Mission Cinema 6-Pack	399	★★★★☆	Aug 01	Good, but for the dual-role of home cinema and hi-fi this combo is compromised.	50/50/100/A100	89/89/89	8/8/	Bk
MJ Acoustics Pro Cinema 1/Pro 50	799	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Nifty speaker package and worth the money. The wood finish at £979 looks better.	100/100/100	88/88/88	8/8/	4
Monitor Audio GR20 AV	2800	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Quality package with plenty of appeal. Needs space to work effectively.	150/150/100	89/90/88	6/8/	4
Mordaunt-Short Premiere	500	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Sounds good without being intrusive - strong in stereo and surround sound.	80/80/80/A80	86/86/86	4/4/	3
✪ Mordaunt-Short Declar. 500 THX	1600	★★★★★	Sep 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Top-quality multichannel package at a sensible price.	150/150/150	90/90/90	4/4/	3
Quadral Surround 1260 Aktiv MkII	399	★★★☆☆	Dec 02	Not fun enough - the sound it a little too safe when compared with the best.	90/90/90/A60	90/90/90	8/8/	2
Quadral Surround 120	200	★★★★★	Awd 01	Stylish surround sound for silly money; a real bargain.	90/90/90	86/86/86	8/8/	Sl
Quadral Ascent Surround	1585	★★★☆☆	Oct 01	Plenty of weight, but lacks the resolution to dig details out of movies or music.	120/115/100/A120	87/87/86	8/8/	4
Richard Allan Min 2/Dimen Sub	698	★★★★☆	Dec 96	This stereo combo of satellites with the tall portly Dimension sub certainly works.	100/A120	87	8	Gy
Richard Allan AV-1 System	384	★★★★★	Jun 94	Bargain six-pack AV speaker collection. Good bass weight and involving sound.	50/40/40	87/86/86	8/8/	Gy
Richard Allan AV-1 SE	499	★★★★☆	Oct 96	A fine starter AV kit which boasts a big sound and strong build	50/70/40	87/90/86	8/8/	Gy
Richard Allan AV Micra	303	★★★★★	Awd 94	Ridiculously affordable system with five speakers and subwoofer unit.	40/40/40	86/86/86	8/8/	Gy
Ruark Acoustics Vita 100/200	1750	★★★★☆	Awd 01	Satellite/sub system - strong all-round performance, but it is not exactly cheap.	100/100/100/A200	86/88/86	8/6/	2
✪ Ruark Acou. Contemp. Prologue	2920	★★★★★	Oct 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Prologue II/Dialogue II/Epilogue II/Log-Rhythm 150.	150/120/100/A150	90/89/87	8/6/	4
Tannoy FX 5.1	480	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Impressive, and effective with atmosperic soundtracks - comparatively expensive.	100/100/100	85/85/85	6/6/	2
Tannoy Eyris	2250	★★★★☆	Oct 02	Better for music applications, including multichannel, than for movies.	150/125/75	90/89/88	8/8/	2
Wharfedale Diamond Cinema	400	★★★★★	Sep 01	Fantastic solution, the speakers sound and look more expensive than their price.	100/100/100	86/88/86	6/6/	2

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	DVD Player	Digital In	Power	Modes	Speakers
Denon AV-F100 (NXT spkrs)	1200	★★★★★	Mar 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Combination of exquisite design and convenience.	Yes	2	25/25/25/A50	D/T	5+S
JVC TH-A5R	400	★★☆☆☆	Sep 02	Good-looking, but it doesn't have the grunt for action scenes and CD replay is lucklustre.	Yes	0	35/35/35	D/S	5+S
JVC TH-A9R	600	★★★☆☆	Sep 01	Adequate for home cinema but far from great at the price.	Yes	0	20/20/20/A100	D/S	5+S
JVC CP100AL	700	★★★★½	Oct 01	Impressive all-in-one entertainment system, though movies sound better than music.	Yes	0	5x50	D/S	5+S
JVC TH-V70R	700	★★☆☆☆	Oct 02	Looks good, but its mediocre performance fails to justify the £700 pricetag.	Yes	1	30/30/30/A140	D/S/2	5+S
JVC QP-112AL	700	★★★★½	Jan 03	Basically, very good indeed, and highly effective for the money.	Yes	2	60/60/60	D/S/2	5+S
JVC TH-A10R	1000	★★★★½	Mar 01	Convenient package with high visual standards but has disappointing sound quality.	Yes	2	30/30/30/A140	D/S	5+S

LG Electronics DA-3520	400	★★☆☆☆	Nov 01	LG's all-in-one cuts too many quality corners in order to meet its bargain-basement price.	Yes	0	6x30	P/D/S	5+S
Linn Classic Movie system	1995	★★★★★	Jun 02	DVD/CD player/AV receiver in one small box - a perfect system for those into performance.	Yes	0	40	D/S	No
NAD L55/L75	1000	★★★★½	Oct 01	DVD/CD player and receiver - scores on both style and function.	Yes	3	5x40	D,S	No
Onkyo DV-L5/TX-L5/MB-S1	2200	★★★★½	May 02	Impressive, stylish units with a superb recording system - includes a 20Gb hard-disc unit.	Yes	5	22/22/22	2/D/S	No
Panasonic SC-DT300	580	★★★☆☆	Sep 02	DVD-V/DVD-A player plus separate receiver and six speakers - expensive for what it does.	Yes	0	28/35/27/35	D/S	5+S
Pioneer DV-454-S/VSX-C100-S	430	★★★★★	Dec 02	Slimline DVD player and receiver - way better than most 'all-in-one' rivals.	Yes	4	30/30/30	D/S/2	No
Pioneer DCS-303	450	★★★★½	Sep 02	Great home-cinema solution for the money. Subwoofer needs careful positioning.	Yes	1	62/62/62/A62	D/S/2	5+S
Pioneer NS-DV88	700	★★★☆☆	Dec 01	Despite a good effort on movie soundtracks it falls short on picture quality and music.	Yes	2	30/30/30	D/S	5+S
Pure Digital Life 4/10	2499	★★★★½	Oct 02	Excellent-quality AV amp/speaker kit that's flexible and performs well.	No	2	45/45/45/A250	D/2/S	5+S
Samsung HT-DL100	399	★★★☆☆	Jun 02	Well-priced all-in-one, but it's not great at digging up details.	Yes	0	40/40/40/70	D/S	5+S
Scan AV-6	176	★★★☆☆	Jun 02	More PC than hi-fi, but it's a cost-effective, if slightly uninspiring surround solution.	No	2	8/8/8/23	D/S	5+S
Sony HTP-1000	450	★★★☆☆	Jan 03	Ho-hum rather than oh-wow - does the job, but little more.	Yes	3	35/35/35	S/2/X	5

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Type	Screen size	System	Power	Features	SCART
JVC AV24WT5EKS	400	★★★☆☆	Jul 02	Decent enough, but lacks both clarity of image and sonic oomph.	W	24	CRT	2x10	-	3
✪ JVC AV-28T25S	600	★★★★★	Jul 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Superb picture, good Nicam sound and a good price.	W	28	CRT	2x25	-	3
JVC AV-28WFR1EK	650	★★★★☆	Mar 02	Impressive set, if you like the style we doubt you'll be disappointed.	W	28	CRT	40/10/15	P	3
JVC AV-32P10EK	1300	★★★☆☆	Jan 02	While a decent buy, there are better TVs available for the money.	W	32	CRT	40/10/15	D	3
JVC AV-32L5EKGY	1500	★★★☆☆	Nov 01	Smartly turned-out, but you can get a better picture and sound quality elsewhere.	W	32	CRT	20/-/-	-	3
LG Electronics RE28FZ10	625	★★★★☆	Apr 02	Good, but not the breakthrough that the paper specifications might lead you to think.	W	28	CRT	2x12	-	2
LG Electronics LE-15A10	1000	★★★☆☆	Jun 02	Stylish LCD, easy to use and offers reasonable picture quality considering the medium.	4:3	15	LCD	2	-	1
LG Electronics MZ-42PZ10	3096	★★★☆☆	Nov 02	The price makes it tempting, but the picture quality is below par in most areas.	W	42	PLA	-	-	0
Loewe FL38	1700	★★★☆☆	Mar 02	This LCD set is just too expensive, unless its looks outweigh that.(Tested at £2500)	4:3	15	LCD	4	-	1
Loewe Aconda 93102 ZW	2100	★★★☆☆	Nov 02	Great resolution and sound, but distortions result from the tube's hefty curvature.	W	40	CRT	2x40	-	3
Loewe Aconda 9581 Select	5150	★★★☆☆	Dec 01	Stylish and comes with a stand and four speakers. Great TV, but sound lets it down.	W	32	CRT	40	-	3
NEC 42MP4	7044	★★★☆☆	Nov 02	Solid, well-engineered product. If only they'd priced it more competitively.	W	42	PLA	-	-	0
NEC Plasma Sync 61MP1	17619	★★★★☆	Jun 02	One of the biggest plasma displays in the world - stunning image scale and price tag.	W	61	PLA	7	-	0
Panasonic TX-28DK1	450	★★★★☆	Apr 02	Not necessarily bristling with the newest technology, but highly capable all the same.	W	28	CRT	2x7	-	0
Panasonic TX-32PL10	1100	★★★★★	Nov 01	Stunning picture makes it a great centrepiece for a home cinema system.	W	32	CRT	7	-	2
Panasonic TX-32PH40	1275	★★★★★	Sep 02	Just sensational; brilliant picture and awesome flexibility.	W	32	CRT	10x2+12	DV	3
Panasonic TX-15LT2	1499	★★★★☆	Apr 02	One of the best-value LCDs we've seen, but it's a hell of a lot to pay for a 15in TV!	W	15	LCD	2+2.5	-	1
Panasonic PT-AE100E	1500	★★★☆☆	Jan 03	Affordable but has fairly limited abilities. Only consider if you really can't spend more.	F	200	LCD	2	-	0
Panasonic TX-32PB50	1599	★★★☆☆	Jan 02	Great picture but fails to satisfy sonically, especially at £1599.	W	32	CRT	10/8/8	D/S	3
✪ Panasonic TX-36PB50	2500	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Great TV and a worthy home cinema solution.	W	36	CRT	10/8/8/A12	D/S	3
Panasonic TH-42PW4B	5000	★★★★★	Jun 02	Display-only version - exceptional performance for a relatively reasonable price.	W	42	PLA	8	-	0
Philips 28PW6006	500	★★★★★	Apr 02	Looks good, delivers a top-notch picture and has good Nicam off-air reception.	W	28	CRT	2x10	-	2
Philips 24PW6006	500	★★★★★	Jul 02	Baby widescreen - its picture and sound abilities make it a great buy.	W	24	CRT	10	-	2
Philips 28PW6826	999	★★★★☆	Feb 02	TV with built-in DVD player and surround speakers - truly a one-box home cinema .	W	28	CRT	40/20	DV	2
✪ Philips 32PW9617	1600	★★★★★	May 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Excellent picture quality and decent sound.	W	32	CRT	20/20/A15	D	4
Philips 36PW9607	2000	★★★★☆	Dec 02	Highly competent surround TV, although not quite flawless.	W	36	CRT	110	D	4
Philips Monroe	2298	★★★☆☆	May 02	Distinctly average - there are more impressive projectors available at this price.	F	300	LCD	-	-	0
Philips 32PF9964	5000	★★★★☆	Jun 02	Includes an external tuner and can hang on the wall - fantastic idea but costly.	W	32	PLA	30	-	4
Philips 42PF9964	5800	★★★★☆	Nov 02	Top-class picture for a plasma and the competitive price includes a tuner box.	W	42	PLA	30	-	4

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Diameter	Materials	Type	Directional
Black Rhodium S130x2	20	★★★☆☆	Aug 99	Fairly good-sounding and detailed cable, but we'd expect a bit more flair for the price.	8.8mm	SC	MS	No
Black Rhodium S300x2	40	★★★☆☆	Oct 01	Neither detail levels or finesse excel - we'd expect more for the money.	12.5mm	SC	MS	No
Chord Company Rumour 4 Core	19.9	★★★★★	Jul 01	Not only looks good, it's a dynamic performer, too.	9mm	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Ecosse Reference ES-2.3	11.99	★★★★☆	Oct 01	Dynamics are vivid and help this cable grab the attention like few others.	9.5mm	Cp	MS	No
Ecosse ES2.3/CS2.15 biwire	17	★★★★★	Jul 01	A combination of two cables that sound stunning.	10x20mm	Cp	MS	No
Ecosse Reference MS-2.3	23	★★★★★	Oct 99	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Communicates a room-filling sound that few cables manage.	8.2mm	Cp	MS	No
Kimber 4VS	9	★★★★☆	Jul 98	Great all-round cable which works a treat. (Termination charges add £50 to price.)	7mm	Cp	MS	Yes
Merlin C6	7.5	★★★★★	Sep 02	Sounds superb, as you might hope with termination adding £100 to the cost.	1.0M	Cp	MS	Yes
Nordost Cinemaflex 14/4	9.95	★★★★★	Oct 01	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Detail retrieval is excellent.	8mm	CP/SL	MS	Yes
Nordost Flatline Gold MkII	10.5	★★★★★	May 98	Highly Recommended in the Awards 1998. Look no further for clarity and openness.	f	Cp	MS	Yes
Nordost Superflat MkII Bi-Wire	21	★★★★☆	Jul 01	Fine cable in many ways - ideal if your system suffers from overbearing bass.	f0.6mm	Cp	MS	Yes
Nordost Solar Wind	31	★★★★★	Jan 99	Fine separation and airy, open sound. A great cable, but pricey.	f	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Nordost Blue Heaven Rev II	65	★★★★☆	Oct 99	Fantastic cable but the price goes up to a jaw-dropping price when terminated.	f	CP/SL	MS	Yes
QED Silver Anniversay Biwire	8.5	★★★★★	Jul 01	Delivers open, fast and transparent sound - at the price, it's a terrific buy.	4x2.5mm	Cp	MS	No
QED Profile 4x4	9	★★★★★	Apr 97	Incredibly good value cable, revealing clarity and depth of image that is stunning.	f2.2mm	Cp	MS	No
QED X-Tube XT300	10	★★★★★	Sep 02	Fast, exciting yet well-balanced cable - can make the most of what your system offers.	5.5mm	Cp	MS	No
QED Profile Silver 12	15	★★★★☆	Oct 97	Demonstrates superlative resolution with an airy treble - tad tame for rockers.	f1.6mm	Sc	MS	No
✪ QED X-Tube XT350	15	★★★★★	Oct 02	Best Buy in the Awards 2002. Detail resolution is terrific.	5.9mm	H	MS	No
QED Genesis	30	★★★★★	Aug 99	Costly cable option, but the Genesis performs so well it's certainly worth the money.	16.6mm	Sl/Cp	MS	No
QED Genesis Silver Spiral Biwire	60	★★★★☆	Apr 02	Everything simply sounds more real - get the system right and it can be breathtaking.	20	Sl/Cp	MS	No
Straightwire Chorus	8	★★★☆☆	Apr 02	Sounds exciting but we're not convinced it will satisfy over extended listening.	12mm	Cp	MS	Yes
Tara Labs Prism Nexa	9.95	★★★★★	Aug 99	Does a great job with all types of music but don't use with bright-sounding electronics.	7.8mm	Cp	MS	Yes
True Colours Industries Python	7.99	★★★☆☆	Oct 00	Speedy and dynamic, but ultimately disappoints with a muddled bass.	9.5mm	Cp	MS	Yes
van den Hul The Snowtrack Biwire	8	★★★☆☆	Jul 01	Excellent grasp of detail and dynamics - can be soft in the treble.	f3.4mm	Cp	MS	Yes
van den Hul Royal Jade Hybrid	9	★★★☆☆	May 00	Not a bad cable and would tame a brash set-up but it doesn't have all-round talents.	16.5mm	Cp	MS	No
van den Hul The Cleartrack	9	★★★☆☆	Apr 96	Ready (and willing) for biwiring, producing a performance that's slick and fleet of foot.	f4.2mm	Cp	MS	Yes
van den Hul CS-122	10	★★★★★	Oct 98	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Detail, solidity and punch.	f6.0mm	Cp	MS	No
van den Hul D352 Hybrid	18	★★★★☆	Oct 99	Plenty of punch and attack without harshness. Just lacks that special sparkle.	21mm	Cp	MS	Yes

KEY | Diameter This figure is given in millimetres. Where a cable is of a 'flat' construction, rather than circular in cross-section, we indicate its depth. So '10' means the cable is 1cm in diameter, while 'f4' means a 4mm deep flat cable. Materials Almost all cables have cores made of metal, and copper of varying degrees of purity is the most common material employed. We indicate this as:Cp = copper, Sl = silver, CF = carbon fibre, O = other. Type S = solid core, MS = multistranded. Directional Some manufacturers indicate a direction on cables. Arrows indicate the output to input orientation.

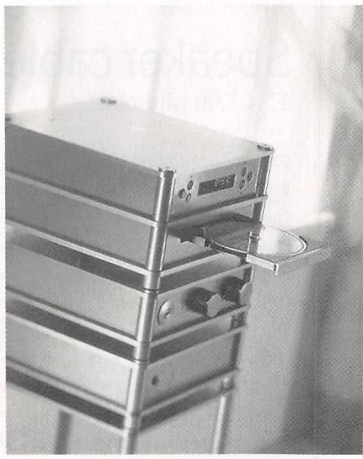
Five Stars for Value



"I thought I had this buying hi-fi business sorted out. I bought all the hi-fi magazines and read them thoroughly, because I reckoned their experts knew exactly what they were talking about - at least a lot more than I did! It was reassuring to see the same product names cropping up regularly and I figured the writers' experience and guidance would steer me straight to the system of my dreams. The trouble is I've ended up more confused than when I started".

One reviewer said a product I fancied was absolutely brilliant but another said it was nothing special at all. How can that be? Surely one CD player is pretty much the same as another? And how can a loudspeaker that's one magazine's top recommendation not get so much as a mention in any of the others? I don't mind admitting it, I'm completely lost."

Plan B - I'm going for a deal

"So, I've decided to adopt plan B. I'm sure there can't be any really dramatic differences between all this gear and it's all bound to work together properly, so I'm going to check the price lists and the adverts and shop around for the best deal. I know getting the right hi-fi is important hey, I'm as mad about music as anyone but if I can get close to the mark and save a few quid, I'm sure I'll end up with a good system and be happy. I know there are specialist shops out there that do demonstrations and reckon they've got all the solutions but, to be honest, I'm a bit scared of going to one. I'd really welcome some advice and guidance but I don't know all the technical jargon and I'd feel daft sitting there trying to 'hear the differences' if I couldn't. Anyway, a friend told me that these shops only sell the really expensive gear and that they're not interested if you don't have loads of money to spend."

And so another hi-fi buyer starts his journey down the road to dissatisfaction, endless upgrades and a permanent overdraft.

There is only one way to buy a hi-fi system that will prove satisfying, reliable and deliver true value for money, and that's through a specialist hi-fi dealer. Let's face it, you wouldn't think about buying a car if you couldn't take it for a test drive. You wouldn't buy a house solely on the strength of seeing the estate agent's details and a photograph. Even if you're spending far less, say buying a jacket or a pair of shoes, you want to try them on to make sure they fit you.

Buying a hi-fi system is no different. It doesn't matter what the specifications say or what the 'experts' think: if it doesn't measure up to what you want from a system, then it's not the right choice. Knowing that you've bought a room full of five-star favourites or best-buys is no consolation when you can't bear to listen to them for more than five minutes. Even that ten per cent discount on the price won't make them sound any better.

Buying or being sold to?

Mind you, most of us are easily suckered when it comes to buying hi-fi. Given the choice of venturing into the unknown territory of a specialist dealer's shop and exerting some influence over what we buy, or taking what looks like the easy route having adverts and magazine reviews push us along a path sweetened with discounts and special offers - we opt for the latter. We don't buy a system, we allow ourselves to be sold one. We side-line our own ideas about quality and personal satisfaction and buy someone else's opinion of what's good for us and good value for our money.

Take control!

Now there's a group of long-established, independent specialist dealers who are totally committed to putting the customer back in the driving seat. They're encouraging the buyer to take control with a little help and guidance provided where required. They know how difficult it can be to establish the true quality and worth of hi-fi and home cinema systems. They know that without experiencing the performance of the systems they offer, you can't possibly assess the value of them. That's why their idea of 'selling' is to play the systems for you and allow you to be the judge.

> "You wouldn't think about buying a car if you couldn't take it for a test drive. You wouldn't buy a house solely on the strength of seeing the estate agent's details."

Listening to your choice of music in a peaceful, well organised demonstration room, you may be surprised and, almost certainly, relieved to discover how easy it is to hear the differences between components and between systems. With the dealer's help and advice you will be able to make a clear and informed decision about what to buy. It comes down to trusting your own judgement rather than the opinion of a reviewer you've never met ... and who won't refund your money if you're not satisfied or be at the end of a phone to sort out any problems you might encounter.

The story doesn't end there. These shops won't abandon you once you've put your hand into your pocket. They won't leave you to set up the system you've selected as best you can. They'll install it in your home, make sure it sounds great, and make sure that you're entirely happy with the way it works.

Why bother?

There is, of course, one question that hasn't been answered: why should you and these dealers go to all this trouble? Well, from your point of view maybe it's because a good deal is about a great deal more than just price. unless you've got money to burn, you'll be living with your new system for years - years during which most of those five star products will probably stop shining quite so brightly.

As far as the dealers are concerned, maybe they believe that taking care of their customers properly is a nicer way of doing business than just handing over boxes.

Listed below are 20 of the best hi-fi shops in the country. They all have lots of stars. You'll find them on the shop floor: they're the people waiting to guide customers towards hi-fi that will give them years of musical enjoyment and total satisfaction.

PRODUCT	£	VERDICT	TESTED	WE SAID...	Length	Termination	Materials	Type	Directional
Cable Talk Broadcast 2	99.95	★★★★★	Jan 97	Soundstaging and openness - friends will swear you've changed more than the cable.	1.0m	P/B/X/D	Cp	MS	Yes
Cable Talk Reference 3	149.95	★★★☆☆	Jan 02	Certainly a good interconnect, but its performance doesn't match the price tag.	1.0m	P/B/X/D	Cp	MS	Yes
Cambridge Audio Atlantic	10	★★★☆☆	Mar 96	Pocket money upgrade, worth considering if your system errs towards the over-bright.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	No
Cambridge Audio Pacific	30	★★★★★	Mar 96	Worth every penny. Its detail and open expression are immediately attention-grabbing.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	No
Cambridge Audio Silver Spirit 40	70	★★★★☆	Oct 98	Talented cable that in many ways is superb at the price. Take care with system matching.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	No
Chord Company Calypso	30	★★★★☆	Oct 01	Fine upper bass punch and fluid midrange make this a solid buy.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	Yes
Chord Company Chrysalis	39.99	★★★☆☆	Feb 99	Highly Recommended in the 1997 Awards. Especially suitable if you're after bigger bass.	1.0m	P/D	Cp	MS	Yes
Chord Company Cobra II	54.99	★★★★☆	Oct 97	Decent bass delivery and a detailed treble. Good separation between instruments.	1.0m	P/D	Cp	MS	Yes
Chord Company Solid	120	★★★★☆	Mar 96	Most impressive; lets the information flow with finely-honed detail.	1.0m	P/D	Cp/Sl	S	No
Chord Company Chorus	200	★★★★★	May 00	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Terrifically deep bass, midrange taut and top-end spacious.	1.0m	P	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
DNM Reson	40	★★★★★	Oct 98	Best Buy in the Awards 2001. Combines smoothness with fine transparency.	1.0m	P	Cp	S	Yes
✪ DNM Reson Bullet Plug	80	★★★★★	Oct 02	Product of the Year in the Awards 2002. Most open-sounding we've heard under £100.	1.0	Bu	Cp	S	Yes
Ecosse The Composer	29	★★★★★	Aug 01	A stellar interconnect - the signal is so well preserved it's hard to believe the price	0.8m	P	Cp	MS	No
Ecosse The Composer MkII	30	★★★★☆	Jul 02	This second-generation Composer can't match the first - it's not quite an all-rounder.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	No
Ecosse Reference Conductor MkII	55	★★★★☆	Aug 02	Solid buy with forceful presentation and good level of resolution. Low end lacks agility.	0.8m	P/B	Cp	MS	No
Ecosse Conductor (was Ref CA-1)	59	★★★★★	Sep 00	Product of the Year Winner 2000. Allows all genres of music to sound their best.	0.8m	P/B	Cp	MS	No
Ecosse The Diva	99.99	★★★☆☆	Apr 02	Fast sounding with bags of info being let through. Bass is tight but a little light.	0.8m	P/B	Sl/Cp	MS	No
Ecosse Maestro SE	155	★★★★☆	Aug 02	Updated old favourite - doesn't offer the superiority now over the new competition.	0.8m	P/B	Cp	MS	No
Ecosse Maestro (was Ref MA2)	159	★★★★★	Oct 99	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Sonically they amaze - high-end system owners take note.	0.8m	P/B	Cp	MS	No
Insert Audio Focus 1.2 (pair)	21	★★★★☆	Oct 98	A step up from 'freebie' cables - dynamic and fast, it is ideal for hard-hitting music.	1.0m	P/B/X	Cp	MS	Yes
Insert Audio IC100 Mk II (pair)	29.95	★★★★☆	Jan 99	Good, affordable interconnect that helps produce an exciting, raw and enjoyable sound.	1.0m	P/B/X	Cp	MS	Yes
Insert Audio Status 3.4 (pair)	159.95	★★★☆☆	Sep 00	Physically lacks the class one would expect at this price and proves disappointing in use.	1.0m	P/B/X	Sl	MS	Yes
Ixos 104 Custom	19.95	★★★★★	Feb 93	On budget CD players it gives a richer, more transparent and better focused sound.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	Yes
Ixos 1003 Spiral Braid	24.95	★★★☆☆	Mar 98	Unless you've a horribly bright, screaming system we'd give this one the old raspberry.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	Yes
Ixos Gamma 1114	29.95	★★★☆☆	Aug 02	Fluid-sounding with a refined delivery. Would be useful placed in an overly bright system.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	Yes
Ixos 1014 Gamma Audition II	29.95	★★★★☆	Sep 00	Big generous-sounding interconnect offering a good level of resolution.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	Yes
Ixos Gamma 1002	39.95	★★★★★	Feb 99	Best Buy in the Awards 1999. Good transparency, focus, detail and clarity.	1.0m	P	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Ixos Gamma Encore 1112	59.95	★★★☆☆	Aug 02	Designed to reduce interference, but the resulting sound is lazy and undynamic.	1.0m	P	Sl/Cp	MS	Yes
Ixos Gamma 1001	69.95	★★★★☆	Oct 99	Good cable, with solid and weighty bass, although top-end sparkle is a bit lacking.	1.0m	P	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Ixos 1100 Gamma	99.95	★★★☆☆	Aug 01	Good, but if you like your music warm and welcoming there are better out there.	1.0m	P	Sc	MS	Yes
Ixos 100 X03 Studio	149.95	★★★★☆	Dec 95	A well made cable with big bold sound and plenty of power and attack. Good for rockers.	0.6m	P	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Kimber PBJ (pair)	76	★★★★★	Oct 01	If you want wide ranging dynamics and rock-solid bass punch this is the cable for you.	1.0m	P/X	Cp	MS	Yes
LAT International IC-50-D	42	★★★★★	Mar 96	Produces a spacious sound with an abundance of detail for the money.	1.0m	P/X	Cp	MS	No
LAT International IC-100 MkII	116	★★★★☆	Mar 98	Can deliver to your amp the sort of bass subwoofers love - fast, extended and exciting.	1.0m	P	Cp/Sl	S	Yes
Moth Leyline Black	100	★★★☆☆	Mar 98	A bit of a conundrum; sounds big and full, but soft and plummy in the midband and treble.	1.0m	P	Sl/Cp	S	Yes
Nordost Black Knight	68	★★★★★	Apr 97	Clean sounding with enhanced clarity, extended bandwidth and dynamic resolution.	1.0m	P/D/X	Cp	S	Yes
Nordost Solar Wind	95	★★★★★	Mar 98	Technically interesting and fine-sounding - this is one exciting cable.	1.0 m	P/D/X	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Nordost Blue Heaven	165	★★★★☆	Oct 99	Exciting and full of attack and drive but up-front sound won't suit everyone.	1.0m	P/D/X	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Nordost Cinemaflex Bassline Sub	290	★★★★☆	Oct 02	If you have a very, very good subwoofer in your set-up buy this great sounding cable.	5.0	P/X	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Nordost Red Dawn	330	★★★★☆	May 98	At this price it's one for high-end set-ups, but an exhilarating listen.	1.0m	P/D/X	Cp/Sl	MS	Yes
Precious Metals CopTech Alpha	25	★★★★★	Sep 00	Best Buy in the Awards 2000. Great value - performance that usually costs lots more.	1.0m	P	Al	S	No
Precious Metals Sl Signal 52	100	★★★★★	Oct 97	Highly listenable the focus on instruments within the wide open soundstage is fabulous.	1.0m	P/B/D	Sl/Cp	MS	No
Precious Metals Sl Signal 200	240	★★★☆☆	Jun 96	Smooth and easy-going, yet supremely detailed and packed with subtlety.	1.0m	P/B/D	Al	MS	No
Profigold PGA4201	15	★★★★☆	Aug 99	A safe bet in entry-level set ups but avoid partnering with already-bright kit.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	No
Profigold PGA301	30	★★★★☆	Oct 96	Not easy to fit but will help to open sound out and please with their pursuit of detail.	1.0m	P	Cp	MS	Yes
Profigold PGA-3000	45	★★★☆☆	Apr 02	Solidly-made cable and will flatter systems that tend towards thinness or brightness.	0.75	P	Cp	MS	Yes
Prowire PHC2215	11.99	★★★★☆	Awd 00	Good value and allows a weighty and powerful sound. Good step-up from the freebie wires.	1.5m	P	Cp	MS	Yes

Vivanco SR210	30	★★★★☆	Jan 01	Respectable bass and they convey instruments with an airy feel.	N/A	Open	3.5/6.3
Vivanco FMH8080	100	★★★☆☆	Oct 01	Wireless cans that offer sturdy sound and good bass but they are no better than average.	260	Closed	3.5/6.3

KEY | Weight Given in grammes. Remember the lightest headphones aren't always the least comfortable, and a slightly heavier pair might sit more firmly on your head. Type Open-back headphones tend to give a sound that's more airy, spacious and well, open! Closed-back designs offer better isolation from outside noise, and usually better bass, while semi-open headphones attempt to combine the best points of the two styles. Jack 6.3mm for separates, 3.5mm for personals and minis.

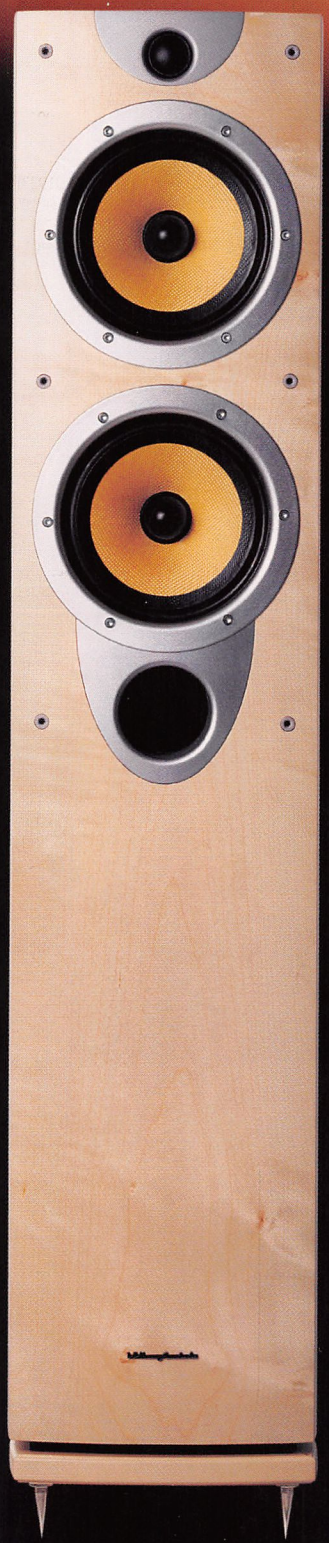
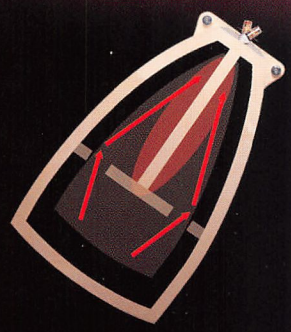
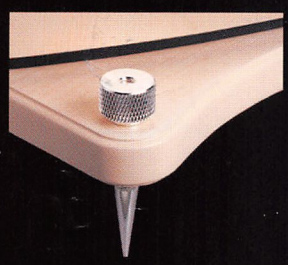
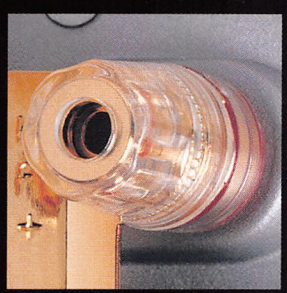
THE MOST ADVANCED LOUDSPEAKER IN ITS CLASS









Heavily braced, curved cabinets with a choice of real wood veneers offer class-leading build quality. A new extended response, alloy housed and decoupled tweeter ensures class-leading technology. Large spikes, shielded terminals and high quality internal wiring confirm the attention to detail in execution... but its the improvements in sound quality and control that nothing can prepare you for. The next generation is here.

All models are available in Winter Maple, Rosewood and Black Ash veneers.
All floorstanding models are supplied complete with plinth and spikes.
Prices start from just £250.
